Society of American Florists.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING.

The executive committee, at its recent session in New York city, approved the selection of the Grand Central Palace as headquarters for the convention and exhibition of 1900 and endorsed the selection of J. P. Cleary as manager of the trade exhibition. On being notified by the New York Florists' Club that it was their intention to present a grand horticultural exhibition at the time of the convention, under the immediate supervision of the private gardeners, it was voted that twelve silver and twelve bronze medals of the S. A. F. be specially appropriated for the use of the New York Florists' Club in this enterprise. A subcommittee was also appointed to arrange for the award of special S. A. F. medals at the exhibition of certain affiliated national organizations and leading horticultural societies.

It was decided that Prof. L. C. Elson, of Boston, and Dr. N. L. Britton, of New York, be invited to deliver lectures before the society at the coming convention. Other features of the convention programme, as arranged, are a president's reception, a paper on greenhouse construction from the open land to the finished structure, an illustrated talk on floral decorations, a discussion on the S. A. F. and its future welfare, and special talks on rose and carnation subjects to be selected and presented under the auspices of the rose and carnation societies, respectively. It is expected that the afternoon and evening of the third day will be devoted to an excursion, on invitation of the New York Florists' Club, and that the fourth day will be assigned exclusively for sporting and entertainment features with the possibility that some of the sporting features may be incorporated with the excursion of the third day.

Much of the committee's time was taken up with a very thorough discussion of the important matter referred to it by the last convention, viz., the establishment of a co-operative purchase corporation. President Wood, who has given much thought to this matter, presented a complete scheme for incorporation on the lines advocated by him at the Detroit meeting but, finally, owing to the somewhat indefinite character of the society's vote, under which the committee were unwilling to assume a larger responsibility, it was decided to continue for the present the old plan of a purchasing committee, who shall purchase for cash for any member of the society, lumber, coal, glass, iron pipe, hose, oil and leads as may be required, but charging hereafter a small percentage on each transaction toward defraying the expenses of the necessary clerical assistance, the lack of which has greatly hampered the work of this department in the past.

The treasurer's report, as presented, showed that the life membership fund now amounts to over $600 and that the general fund in the treasury made a net increase of about $450 for the past year. It was voted that hereafter the treasurer present a supplementary report, for information of the society, at each convention, covering the period between January 1 and the time of the convention. It was decided to discontinue the nomenclature committee and to assign the duties of that committee to the registration department of the secretary's office and a botanist. Dr. N. L. Britton was then appointed as botanist to the society and Prof. L. O. Howard was reappointed as entomologist.

The fertilizer committee was reorganized by the addition of W. N. Rudd to its membership and the appointment of C. W. Ward as chairman and the necessary appropriations were made for the needs of this committee and the legislative committee.

A special sub-committee was appointed to report at the convention on the advisability of the incorporation of the society under the laws of some state, also a special sub committee to consider the recommendation of President Wood relative to the securing of a permanent home for the society.

President P. O'Mara, of the New York Florists' Club, and Messrs. W. J. Palmer, of Buffalo, and Geo. A. Rackham, of Detroit, were present at most of the sessions and rendered valuable assistance to the committee.

The report of the committee on final resolutions extended grateful recognition of the hospitality of the New York Florists' Club and Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Ward, and thanked the press for courtesies extended.

STATE VICE-PRESIDENTS.

The following gentlemen are state vice-presidents of the Society of American Florists for the year 1900, having been either elected by their representatives at the Detroit convention, or appointed by President Wood:

Connecticut, J. N. Champion, New Haven; District of Columbia, Philip Gauges, Washington; Illinois, Edgar Sanders, Chicago; Indiana, H. W. Rieman, Indianapolis; Iowa, J. T. D. Fulmer, Des Moines; Kansas, M. J. Coventry, Ft. Scott; Kentucky, Jacob Schultz, Louisville; Maine, J. A. Dirwanger, Portland; Maryland, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh; Massachusetts, F. R. Mathison, Waltham, and Geo. H. Thompson, Lenox; Minnesota, S. D. Dysinger, St. Paul; Missouri, Emil Schray, St. Louis; Michigan, F. H. Beard, Detroit; Nebraska, J. J. Hess, Omaha; New Hampshire, August Gaedeke, Nashua; New Jersey, Jos. A. Manda, Jr., South Orange; New York, Alex. Wallace, New York city and Philip Scott, Buffalo; Ohio, C. J. Graham, Cleveland, and Robt. George, Painesville; Pennsylvania, H. T. Dumont, Philadelphia, and Gustav Ludwig, Allegheny; Rhode Island, Robt Laurie, Newport; Wisconsin, H. V. Hunkel, Milwaukee; Ontario, Canada, Harry Dale, Brampton WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

The American Wonder Lemon.

Among the recent novelties few appear more interesting than the American Wonder lemon, illustrated herewith and offered to the trade by Schmidt & Botley, of Springfield, Ohio. Our picture was prepared from a photograph, the rule in front showing the actual size of the fruits Both fruits are of the same variety, the pear-shaped one to the right being only partially developed when the picture was taken. The other specimen was quite mature and on tasting we found it to be quite sharp and pleasant in flavor. Schmidt & Botley assure us that the original plant of this new lemon was raised from seed by a Mr. Bowman, of Hagerstown, Md., who disposed of it to Geo. Mead, of Springfield, Ohio. Mr. Mead, it appears, propagated the plant extensively and disposed of the entire stock to Schmidt & Botley. At the time of transfer the parent plant bore twelve or fifteen fruits in various stages of development, the heaviest weighing two and one-half pounds. This lemon is said to be very easily propagated and it is claimed the young trees commence to bear at two years of age. Referring to the treatment given the plants which produced the fruits here illustrated, Schmidt & Botley state: "The pear-shaped lemon was grown on the parent plant, which we have planted in a box underneath one of our benches, the bench being cut out to allow room for the stem. The tree stood the greater part of last winter in a shed where the temperature dropped as low as 15° or 16,° without light or any attention further than to keep it from drying up. In consequence it dropped its foliage, and lost some of the tender stems. Immediately after planting it began to make a new growth and bloomed rather late in spring, setting only the one lemon. However, we considered this phenomenal in view of the rough treatment it had received. The other fruit grew on a younger tree and stood in a box in one of our houses throughout the summer in soil that had no fertilizer of any kind whatever, and we desire to say it could neither have received less care or more rough treatment than we have given it."

AMERICAN WONDER LEMON.

Judge Not, Lest Ye Be Judged.

The many adverse comments, written and spoken, on the 100-point award recently made to Carnation Enquirer indicate, to my mind, an entire misapprehension of the point of view which the judges must necessarily take. The assumption seems to be quite generally made that the points awarded measure the flower's qualities on a standard of absolute perfection. A moment's thought should convince any one of the absurdity of such a proposition. Who can say what the ultimate limit of size in carnations shall be? At present No. 666 seems to be the largest flower in sight, but it may be overtopped at the Buffalo meeting. To one who has watched the development in the past few years, the production of a six inch bloom in the near future would not seem a miracle, and who will be rash enough to say that some time we may not have them equal to our show chrysanthemums in size and stem?

It being evident, then, that no fixed and absolute standard of perfection can be set up, from what standard shall our judges work? There in the rub. The varying scores given the same variety by different judges (notably by the chrysanthemum society's judges) can not be attributed solely to a difference in the condition of the specimens shown; neither is it fair to accuse one set of judges of incompetence because their score is higher or lower than that of another. These differences are frequently traceable to a difference in the standard for comparison. Take for instance the scoring in color of a lemon yellow chrysanthemum. Perhaps there is no class in which greater variations in results is observable. It seems almost certain that the low color scores are obtained by comparison with pure golden yellow types, while the high scores result from comparison with the best existing lemon yellow. Both committees reach a correct result from their standard and yet one may award, and the other withhold a certificate. Fix a uniform standard and more nearly uniform results will be obtained.

In a general way, I take it, all successful judging to-day is done by comparing the subject with the best existing varieties known to the judges, scoring the full number of points for those qualities in which the subject equals or excels the best existing variety, and a less number when it falls behind. This is the only rational way in which judging can be done, but there is still room for variation. Take for instance the case of Carnation Enquirer. It is fair to suppose that the judges had in mind the best pink variety of its shade, or nearest it, known to them, and after careful comparison found that Enquirer equalled or excelled it in color, size, form, stem and all the other attributes on which points are awarded. From their standard they were perfectly justified in scoring the variety 100 points, this simply meaning that in all respects Enquirer is better than any other carnation of its color known to the judges. Let us suppose, however, that the variety taken as a staudard by them had only been taken as a standard for color, that another had been taken for size, regardless of its color, and still another for stem and so on. It is hardly possible that Enquirer under such standards could have scored 100. But it should be understood that this is pure supposition on the part of the writer, he having neither seen the variety in question, nor discussed the matter with the judges.

There are good arguments in favor of either of the above methods and it remains for the societies to "thrash it out" and say which shall be used. The question of measurements for size requires attention. In carnations one may measure the diameter of the flower as shown or with the lower petals, if reflexed, raised to a horizontal position, or one may measure over the flower, or an average may be taken of the different measurements. The question of form will be found the most difficult point of all perhaps. It is generally conceded that the ideal flower should carry its lower petals at right angles with the stem and that any tendency to reflex towards the stem is a distinct disadvantage, but the questions whether the petals should be fringed or not and whether cupped or not are debatable. It must also be decided whether the perfect half sphere shall be the ideal or a less high built flower or whether a greater depth than one-half the diameter is desirable.

Now the railroads are talking of planting fruit trees along their rights of way.

Forcing Lilacs at Cottage Gardens.

Lilacs are forced at the Cottage Gardens only as a catch crop, that is, if we happen to have a greenhouse to spare for six or eight weeks we put in a crop of lilacs. Sometimes we make a hit with them and they pay fairly well. At other times we strike a glut in the market and, not doing lilac regularly, do not succeed in making very good sales. Our method is to use good strong plants well set with buds. We find plants eight, nine or ten years of age the best, and we find stock of our own growing very much superior to anything we import, as we get a better set of buds and much larger sprays. We dig the stock from the field with as good balls as possible and plant upon the benches, the same as we would plant carnations or any other plant. We start the house at a temperature of about 60° and after the heat has been in the house a few days, syringe the plants thoroughly and raise the temperature gradually until it runs from 75° to 85°. The atmosphere is kept moist and particular attention is paid to keeping sharp draughts from the plants. The house herewith illustrated contained about 175 plants and cut somewhere in the neighborhood of 800 bunches, a little over four bunches to the plant. These bunches we sold at from 75 cents to $1.50 each. We could not have cut more than 400 or 500 bunches from imported plants.

Farm and Garden Symposium.

Saturday, February 24, is the date fixed for the "Farm and Garden Symposium" of the Pennsylvania State Board of Agriculture for Philadelphia county. The authorities call it an "Institute," which I have always thought a very inappropriate word for a meeting of experts in agriculture, horticulture, etc, to talk over the latest aspects of affairs in their professions. "Symposium" is put forward as an improvement and I think if you will take the trouble to look up the dictionary you will agree with me. The meeting will be held in Horticultural Hall and there will be afternoon and evening sessions, both free to the public. Read the following program and see if there isn't some inducement for you to be present. This is subject to correction but will give a good idea of the bill of fare so far as the committee can tell at present:

AFTERNOON SESSION, 2 TO 5.

1. Address of welcome,
   Burnet Landreth, Esq., Phila.
2. House pets and their treatment,
   Dr. Leonard Pearson, Phila.
   (State Veterinarian of Penna.)
3. The American merchant marine vs. the American farmer.
   John H. Landis, Esq., Phila. (U. S. Mint.)
4. How to supply a family table from a town lot,
   Mrs. Isabella E. Davis, Riverton, N. J.
5. Why the elements of agriculture should be taught in our public schools,
   Jason Sexton, North Wales, Pa.
6. Consider the lilies,
   Professor Heiges, York, Pa.

EVENING SESSION, 7:30 TO 10.

7. What the Pennsylvania Dairy School is doing,
   Prof. Harry Hayward, State College, Pa.
8. How would the single tax benefit the farmer,
   Prof. Lyberger, Phila.
9. How to improve present methods of landscape gardening. S. M. Meehan, Esq., Phila.
10. The value of the botanic garden to the Phila. public,
    Prof. Macfarlane, University of Pennsylvania.
11. Good plants for the home,
    A. Blanc, Esq., Phila.

Question box: This is one of the spicy features of the symposium. Send in all the "kittle points" you can think of for these various professors to answer. Edwin Lonsdale is chairman of the committee and David Rust secretary. G. C. Watson has charge of the question box. Send in queries early by mail to Juniper and Walnut streets so they may be assigned to the proper parties for answers, or bring them to the meeting. The other members of the committee are Jno. Burton, Burnet Landreth, W. F. Dreer, Dr. J. Cheston Morris, Jno. Westcott, Dr. Mears, Mrs. E. S. Starr, Wm. K. Harris, Robert Kift and J. Wm. Colflesh.

There may be some changes in the programme when the committee meets next Saturday, if so they will be duly reported.

CARNATIONS.

CHOICE BLOOMS FOR EASTER.

With Easter ten weeks away it seems premature to talk of carnations for that date, but many steps may be taken now toward a profitable crop for the last opportunity in the carnation season to make a little extra money to pay for the intervals when we are running our places at a loss.

One of the first things to remember is that it takes most varieties a long time to turn a growing shoot into a flower and that it is easier to hold a partially formed bud than it is to get the bud to develop for a certain date. It depends considerably on the variety as to the length of time it takes and the grower will have to judge for himself whether or not he needs the whole of the ten weeks to get these shoots into bloom for Easter.

It is presumed that your plants are full of young shoots now, in which case they are ready for stimulation, for the soil is often pretty well exhausted by this date. I find an application of bone meal gives good results, but it matters little what form of fertilizer you apply, so that it is used in moderation, it being better to make two or three light applications between now and Easter than to give only one heavy dressing.

If the soil is so full of young roots that you do not want to stir the fertilizer into it, a good plan is to mix it with one-half or one-third its bulk of soil and apply the mixture between the rows and then water with a rose for a few times until it becomes well intermixed with the soil on the beds. Where the soil is not too full of roots it is better to apply the fertilizer in its pure state and then stir it into the soil, being careful not to stir too deeply. This stirring may, of course, injure a few of the roots but the benefits derived by a loosening of the surface of the bench more than counterbalances the slight loss of roots.

Do not stint water but be careful to give no more than the plants need. Plenty of water, an abundance of food in the soil and a temperature as low as can be without causing split calyxes, will bring the finest flowers and the finest stems. The regulation of heat is of course a very important item; if the buds are coming too slowly add a little more heat but do it gradually and if they are coming on too fast work in the opposite direction.

Another good plan is to go over the plants occasionally and cut out weak branches and useless wood, no time can be better employed, as this throws the strength of the plants into the healthy shoots and gives them more light and air in which to develop first quality flowers, and it is the first quality stock that is going to pay the grower at Easter.

ALBERT M. HERR.

More About Long Greenhouses.

Replying to the query of "A. B. C.," in your issue of January 13, the question of lengths of greenhouses most suitable for practical purposes is one that is open to a number of objections pro and con. In some cases the condition of the ground where the houses are to be placed has to be the first consideration; in others some particular reason for building a long or short house may have to be considered by the person building, but where the conditions are favorable for any desired length or style of house, then for all practical purposes including heat, emptying, refilling, etc., which last has always to be done during the very hottest season of the year, and for the benefit and comfort of those engaged in this very hard work, a medium length is certainly much better, as on careful investigation it will be found that a house not over 200 feet long can be heated at less proportionate expense than one double that length, presuming that both are heated from one end of the house; for the comfort of the workmen it is certainly much preferable. From my own experience, having had some very long houses under my charge in the past, I should prefer to build them not over 300 feet long with a corridor through the center, carrying the main heating pipes through this and radiating each way from same, with large doors at each end, giving ample room for workmen in summer; this practically would make each house but 150 feet long. In such houses I think the heating is also under much better control than in very long houses; if heated by water it certainly can be kept warmer by being returned to the boiler much oftener, and if by steam the condensation will certainly be much less at 150 feet from boiler than it will be if the steam has to travel five or six hundred feet before returning it to the boiler, hence a saving of fuel in both cases, at least such has been my experience. JOHN N. MAY.

Hailstones at Athol, Mass.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I send you a photograph of hailstones which fell in our town last summer to let you see what we can do in the east. These came down about 200 feet from my door and broke the photographer's skylight. He had sixty large, thick panes and fifty-seven of them were broken. The hailstones were picked up and photographed three-quarters of an hour after the storm, and so they were smaller than when they fell. I had a beautiful hedge of sweet peas in bloom, and expected they would be ruined, but they were not injured in the least. Where the hailstones entered the soil, however, they made holes large enough for a good sized rat to enter. All together, some 10,000 panes of glass were broken in town. C. W. SIBLEY.

DETROIT, MICH.—Three greenhouses opposite Woodmere Cemetery, operated by Ferd. Kolbe and owned by Anton Kier, were burned January 31; loss $3,000, no insurance. The stock in three houses which escaped the flames was killed by frost.

A Busy Cream City Concern.

Milwaukee, the scene of many business successes, has no more enterprising establishment than the C. C. Pollworth Company, formed a few months ago upon the retirement of W. H. Ellis from the firm of Ellis & Pollworth. We present herewith reproductions from photographs, one showing an interior view of the store of the Pollworth Company, the other illustrating the range of glass which produces a portion of the cut flowers and plants handled by the house. While the trade in wholesale cut flowers is no inconsiderable item of the company's business, it also enjoys a large shipping trade in all classes of florists' supplies and makes a specialty of palms and ferns.

C. C. Pollworth, the head of the house, is one of those young men who have made their way rapidly to the front. He is energetic and interested, not only in business but in the pleasures of the trade and his personal qualities have aided him not a little toward his business success.

The modern range of glass is that formerly known as the Deuster greenhouses, which are now leased by the Pollworth Company and W. A. Kennedy. Mr. Kennedy grows roses, carnations and general bedding stock while the Pollworth glass is devoted exclusively to decorative plants.

BUSINESS GOOD.—ROSES SCARCE.—PRICES NOT HIGH BUT AVERAGES GOOD.—MAY ENCOURAGE BUILDING.—DOINGS AMONG THE WHOLESALERS.—A DEATH AND OTHER NOTES.

Business has been brisk for the past ten days in the wholesale district. Roses of high grade are rather scarce but there is no great rush for roses of ordinary grades on that account. So, prices have not advanced, although stocks clean out better on the average. Carnations are in larger supply than the demand can consume and so are violets. Violets make a poor showing on the market quotations, but nevertheless the weather and product have been such that, even at the lower figures of this season, violet growers have done better than for several years past. This is also true, in the main, of the rose industry and it will be no surprise to the initiated if we should hear of numerous rose and violet houses being erected during the coming season. Tulips, narcissi, lily of the valley and all bulbous stock are heavily overstocked and very low prices prevail, in consequence. Cattleyas "as big as soup plates" are talked of by the growers of such goods, but—!

Charlie Millang has adopted a colored gentleman in uniform as an adjunct of his place. What will the retail nabobs do if the wholesalers are to follow them thus on their pet features?

J. K. Allen will remove about February 10 to 196 W. Twenty-eighth street. "J. K." gets an ideal place for the wholesale business in the new location. A fine, cool cellar, a wide area, with room for a summer awning and other luxuries and all the good features of the old place go with him.

J. W. Lyons' place at Madison was burned down on the night of Saturday, January 27.

The Park Department opened bids for the construction of four propagating houses, 120 feet each, on Friday, February 2.

Walter J. Perkins, son of J. Perkins, the wholesale florist, died suddenly of bronchitis on January 25. Interment was on Sunday in Greenwood.

Jas. A. Fraser is now traveling as the representative of Peter Henderson & Co.

The Hitchings employees' annual ball occurs next Tuesday night at Columbia Hall, Jersey City.

The American Institute will give an exhibition of flowers, fruits and vegetables at the Berkeley Lyceum Building on February 7 and 8 in connection with the annual meeting of the Eastern New York Horticultural Society. There are liberal premiums for exhibits and a fine program has been arranged for the society's sessions.

WEATHER WINTRY AND BUSINESS BRISK.—NO ADVANCE IN PRICES.—COTTER AND THE ROSES.—DOINGS AT WAVERLEY.—FOSTER'S FERNS.—A SUIT, A FAILURE AND OTHER NOTES.

Winter has at last found its way to Boston and has given us a touch of real seasonable weather during the past week. Still, compared with the fierce experiences of the corresponding date last year the present winter weather is balmy and salubrious. Business is decidedly better. So they all say, without one dissenting voice. The shipping trade to country points has picked up, but there are no indications of higher prices in consequence, as the out-of-town buyers will not stand it. The retail price of carnations, for instance, has so adjusted itself in those localities that any increase based upon city figures simply cuts the business off short. American Beauty is moving better, but also with no advance in price. In carnations white has the best of the situation, many of the ordinary grades going very low, however. Violets are badly demoralized, worse than ever before. Lily of the valley is inclined the same way.

Lawrence Cotter is about to pull out the plants in a house of Carnot roses which he has been cutting from steadily up to the present time and which, he says, has paid him better than any house of roses he ever grew. The room will soon be wanted for Easter stock. For this purpose he has six houses filled with potted Bermuda and Japanese longiflorums, a big batch of astilbe and one house containing seven hundred pots of Crimson Rambler rose. These roses are in 7 and 8-inch pots, each trained in pyramid form and will make a gorgeous display. They are from cuttings struck last February and plunged in pots out doors during summer. Mr. Cotter considers plants of this character much better than older stock and their appearance certainly bears out his views. Lilies do not show as much disease as in recent years. Those from Japan are growing better and appear of more even quality than the Bermuda grown, but also contain a certain mixture of narrow-leaved plants that suggest the Harrisii variety in their general appearance.

According to the law of Massachusetts enacted in 1899, it is required that a tree warden must be elected annually by every town in the state as one of its officers. The law is a good one provided the right man is always selected. If the choice should fall upon a man other than one who knows about trees and their culture and who fully comprehends their improvement, it will be unfortunate for the town where this happens. Many a beautiful tree has been ruined by the acts of a well-meaning but ignorant person, and rather than have this occur the Massachusetts towns would be better off without any tree warden. The Massachusetts Forestry Association recommends the election of women as well as men to this office and notes that there is already one woman acting in this capacity in the state.

Wm. Edgar's big Lorraine house looks somewhat dismantled since the inroads of the holiday business. There are a few specimens left, however, and even the pots are invisible under the mass of bloom. Mr. Edgar has a promising show of lilies. Many of them are in 12-inch pots, six to eight bulbs in each. In order to insure uniformity in these big pots and get the strongest grower in the middle he starts all the bulbs in 5 inch pots and re-pots them after they show their character. In the cold house a splendid lot of rhododendrons are waiting to go into training for the Easter demand.

L. H. Foster's Boston fern houses have quite a depleted look, owing to the enormous demand he has been experiencing for this popular specialty during the past season. No grower makes more careful effort to keep his stock of Boston fern "true" to the most desirable form and buyers are beginning to realize how important this point is.

The Shady Hill Nursery Company has lost a suit against Waterer & Sons. The action was to recover damages for alleged breach of contract to deliver a certain number of rhododendrons at a specified price.

A copy of the photographic group of visitors at Waban Conservatories last November has been presented by Mr. Wood to each gentleman present on that occasion.

B. S. Chase, of Everett, who failed last summer, has been arrested charged with concealing a portion of his assets from the trustee.

Lawrence Cotter has been experimenting with the new Aphis Punk insecticide and is well pleased with results thus far.

Quite a number of Boston florists are using Kift's adjustable vase holders and all speak highly of their usefulness.

John Husband, of Belmont, is bankrupt with liabilities of over $1600 and no assets.

N. F. McCarthy sails for Holland on February 15, to be away for about one month.

John Galvin and J. W. Howard were guests at the January meeting of the Horticultural Club.

C. S. Pratt, nurseryman, of Reading, is in bankruptcy with liabilities over $3600 and no assets.

F. L. Harris has been confined to his home for some time with an attack of bronchitis.

Indications are that ten or twelve will go from here to the Buffalo carnation meeting.

Callas very abundant now.

QUIET SEASON IN THE CITY OF BROTHERLY LOVE.—ROSES THE ONLY SCARCITY.—PLANTS SELL SLOWLY.—EASTER STOCK IN DEMAND.—CRAIG VISITS NEW YORK GROWERS.—FERNS IN HIGH FAVOR AT LOW PRICES—OTHER JOTTINGS.

Business is in a state of calm, the transient trade being particularly quiet. There are some large balls and the usual run of dinners but it will take much more than is in sight now to keep everybody working. Good Bridesmaids and Brides are the only flowers at all scarce; the crops of these teas seem to be still off and it takes considerable hustling to get enough specials for the orders. Prices are $10 to $12. Beauties are quite equal to the demand and $6 per dozen now buys the four-foot specials, which size we are assured by a large grower were quickly sold this time last year at $8. Carnations are good and plentiful; $1.50 per hundred buys the quick moving grade, and good flowers they must be; select stock brings from $2 to $4. All other stock is in full supply at last week's prices. Daffodils are coming in slowly and are poor as yet; $5 to $6 is the price. J. Welsh Young, who has made a specialty of this flower for some years past, has the best. Blooming plants are moving slowly. There are a number of fine azaleas but they are not selling as they should. W. K. Harris is sending in some nice genistas and rhododendrons, which make a fine showing and are worth the price, for their decorative effect.

Easter stock is being looked after by both grower and dealer. Lilies appear very promising so far, there being but little disease apparent. Perhaps it is too early as yet to feel we are out of the woods but the fact is that from many sources it is said that stocks look better than for several years past. It is said that large Crimson Ramblers are scarce and already orders are being placed for select stock.

W. P. Craig has returned from a trip through the New York carnation belt (we believe that each state has now a girdle all its own) and says that the New York market appreciates the improved flowers and that fine blooms bring almost if not quite as much as roses, while a few special varieties really bring more. He would not say much about 1901 possibilities which he might have seen, saying it was hard to beat the meritorious new kinds now in the market.

Chas. Dards, of New York, was in the city the past week, picking out the choice of the palm growers' stocks. He is considered a judge par excellence of palms.

Good ferns are scarce; the table fernerries are using them up faster than the growers can supply them. The prices are so low that careful men say they can not give the space and care necessary to produce fine plants for $6 to $7 per hundred. This is probably true and it is also a fact that 10 cents retail will not pay the dealer, who must send for the dish, fill and return it, and is lucky if he doesn't have to do it over again without extra charge. Yet this is the figure some men seem to think is enough. K.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—ROSE SHORTAGE MORE PRONOUNCED.—HOSTS OF CARNATIONS AND OCEANS OF BULBOUS STOCK.—BASSETT APPROVES GRAFTED LIBERTY.—MANY FUNERAL ORDERS.—LYNCH TO MOVE.—MRS. BRADT PLENTIFUL.—JOHNSON HOME FROM EUROPE.—VARIOUS JOTTINGS.

The cold wave has had the effect of a further curtailment of the already short rose cut and prices on this line now average higher than they did for Christmas. The specials, Brides, Bridesmaids and Meteors, bring 15 cents, the first grade 12 cents and all but the very poorest bring more than 5 cents so that the average is the best in a long time. Carnations are very plentiful but are generally cleared up each day at fair figures because of the shortage of roses, even if qualities are a little off as a rule. In fact the dearth of roses, and some of the growers have almost forgotten what a Beauty bud looks like, has made a fair market for everything else but bulbous stock. Of this there is such a surplus that any figure is usually acceptable. Lily of the valley is one of the usually stable items which has suffered because of oversupply. Violets are, of course, in the dumps; they always are in zero weather unless some special occasion creates a temporary demand.

O. P. Bassett has returned from New York and Philadelphia and reports a most enjoyable trip. As a result of his visit to the owners of Liberty he has decided to plant only grafted stock of the new rose, believing that the own-root plants give neither so good stem or flower. Mr. Bassett was greatly pleased with the Dailledouze Bros.' new carnation, No. 666, and predicts a great future for it.

The funeral of P. D. Armour, Jr., on Thursday, brought the local retailers a heavier run of work than has fallen to their lot in a long time. Those who had most of the orders were Samuelson, Smyth, Weinhoeber, Schubert and Muir. The former's orders aggregated over $1000 and many others than those mentioned were represented.

W. E. Lynch will shortly remove to the basement at the southeast corner of Randolph and Wabash avenue, where excellent quarters are all ready for his occupancy. It is stated that an attempt to raise rentals will, if persevered in, cause the removal of a quartette of wholesalers from one building to another on Wabash avenue.

Since everyone has taken to growing Mrs. Bradt the production of that carnation is all that this market requires and the quality of many of the blooms is only what may be expected of indifferent methods. Mrs. Bradt has recently sold as low as 2 cents per bloom.

Henry Seigers, uncle of the Singler Bros. and for fifteen years connected with their establishment at Morgan Park, died Sunday of dropsy. He was well known to the older generation in the trade.

Chas. W. Johnson returned from England January 28 and reports an enjoyable trip. He is temporarily located at 30 Beach street, Stapleton, Staten Island, New York.

Peter Reinberg made his contract for coal early last spring and still gets his heat at the last year's cost. Since the cold snap he says he would not take $5,000 and give up his contract.

Klehm's Novelty tulips are two weeks later than last year, the first having just made their appearance at Kennicotts.

Fred. Hills is on the Atlantic enroute to his old home in the state of the Isle of Wight for a six weeks' visit.

Lawrence Kelley left W. E. Lynch on Wednesday.

SCARCITY OF ROSES.—PRICES HIGH.—BUSINESS BRISK.—AMONG THE GROWERS AT KIRKWOOD.—MANY FINE CARNATIONS AND VIOLETS.—ARMSTRONG TO REJUVENATE HIS RANGE.—AT "JUCKLIN" UDE'S.—RUMORS OF NEW VENTURES.—EUCHRE IN SIGHT.

The cut flower market is exceedingly short. All growers report off crop and the supply is not enough to go around, so that the commission dealer is getting roundly abused by the retailers, each one thinking he is not getting his share of the stock. The price of roses has gone so high that it takes a long purse to reach them and only those who have a wealthy class of customers can afford to carry them in stock, but even at that there is not enough to supply the demand. There are some good carnations and extra fine California violets, which are eagerly sought. There are a few Harrisii lilies coming in and sell at from 12½ to 15 cents each, wholesale. American Beauties bring from $6 to $8 per dozen, Brides and Bridesmaids from $7 to $10 per 100, Meteors $5 to $10, Perles and Woottons $4 to $6, carnations $1.50 to $4, lily of the valley $4 to $5, Romans $3 to $4.

At Luther Armstrong's place, at Kirkwood, everything is looking prosperous. Some of the houses are a little old but Mr. Armstrong states that as he is now out of the store business he intends to remodel his glass next spring and grow only for the wholesale trade. He shows some fine Brides and Bridesmaids. Mrs. Newman, who succeeded Mr. Armstrong at his Olive street store, is using all his stock at present.

At Theo. Richter's establishment I found two houses, one of carnations and the other a perfect mass of bloom of California violets. Mr. Richter was not around and I was strongly tempted to pick a bunch of violets, but happened to spy a double-barreled shot gun standing on a bench in the work shed, and concluded it would not be healthy, so leaving everything as I found it, I made my way to the houses of F. W. Ude, Sr.

Here everything is in apple-pie order and there are more California violets and carnations. This is the home of the father and mother of the five Ude boys, each one of whom owns his own place and makes a specialty of California violets and carnations. The old gentleman has a fine stock of black Spanish chickens and they are surely beauties. We were entertained by a cock fight between "John Bull" and "Oom Paul." Mr. Ude says they are always "scraping;" sometimes "John Bull" wins and sometimes "Paul;" this time "Paul" got the better of the brief engagement.

At H. G. Ude's all hands were busy picking violets and at Charles Ude's they were at the same task. He grows nothing but violets and they are fine. A. Berdan is getting along in years but is as full of life and fun as an eighteen-year-old boy. His carnations and violets are looking fine and he expects to build two more houses this spring.

F. W. Ude, Jr., has the finest carnations I have seen in a long time. His Mrs. Bradts are exceptionally good. Mr. Ude has a pink seedling which bids fair to beat any pink carnation on the market.

There is a rumor that two more extensive plants are to be erected in or near Kirkwood this spring for growing fancy roses for the St. Louis market.

The Florists' Club's euchre party will take place on the evening of February 23, and it is stated that 100 prizes are to be offered. The committee of arrangements consists of Fred. Weber, J. J. Beneke and John Kunz J. M. H.

TRADE QUIET THROUGH JANUARY.—STOCK PLENTIFUL.—HEADQUARTERS FOR THE CARNATION MEETING.—HOTELS AND THEIR RATES.—NOTES.

Trade has been very quiet throughout January and the stock coming in now is more than equal to the demand. Roses are quite plentiful and carnations, violets and lily of the valley are almost an oversupply. Tulips are in. Winter weather came upon us with a rush and the sudden change has not benefited trade.

The local committee in charge of the arrangements for the carnation meeting has engaged Morgan Hall for the exhibition. The business meetings will be held in the colonial parlors of the Genesee Hotel, which adjoins the hall, and which will be the society's headquarters. The rates are $2.50 to $4 per day, American plan. Two other hotels are close by, the new Genesee, $2 per day and upward, and the Tifft, $2.50 to $4, American plan. Then not far distant are the Iroquois, Broezel, Stafford and Mansion houses with rates from $2 up. Those wishing rooms engaged in advance may secure them by addressing W. F. Kasting.

Adams is preparing for house cleaning and will paint and paper his store throughout.

BUSINESS FAIR.—SOME GOOD DECORATIONS. SMALL & SON DO GRIDIRONS.—AT THE WHITE HOUSE.—OTHER JOTTINGS.

J. H. Small & Sons had the decorations for the Gridiron Club's fifteenth dinner on Saturday evening, January 27, at the Arlington Hotel. The room was a fairyland of flowers and electric lights, hundreds of the later being festooned in glowing garlands of smilax. The ceiling was a mass of southern smilax. The alcoves were filled with palms and back of the president's chair was a solid wall of azaleas surmounted by orchids. In the center of the large mirror hung a large gridiron, studded with electric lights. The tables, placed in the form of a gridiron, were outlined in scrolls of bronze galax leaves, the dark color of which was enlivened by roses. At intervals vases filled with roses were placed.

The American Rose Co. is cutting a fine lot of carnations, especially Luna, and Lilium Harrisii. They are growing a fine yellow rose very extensively but lost the name while in the testing house and call it the yellow Hungarian rose. The plants are in fine condition and are blooming very freely.

The judicial reception at the White House, January 24, was a grand affair and the decorations were very elaborate, as usual, some of the choicest plants grown under the direction of Geo. H. Brown and Henry Pfister being used and the whole a credit to their taste.

After a week or so of bright weather good flowers are more plentiful and in fair demand. Some of the florists are quite busy. Carnations bring from 50 cents to $1.50 per dozen; violets 50 cents to $1 per hundred; roses 75 cents to $4 per dozen.

NOTES AMONG THE GROWERS.—MANY FINE CARNATIONS.—NEW SORTS ON TRIAL.—BUILDING OPERATIONS.—ROSES FOR SUMMER.—WITH THE HARRISII.—NEW FIRMS.

At the nurseries of H. L. Goertzhain I found all their large stock in fine condition. They are making a specialty of carnations and have four houses of them. Wm. Scott and Flora Hill are the chief sorts grown. Quite a fine batch of Triumph was in flower. They have several houses of Harrisii which will be good at Easter. Lily of the valley and chrysanthemums are also grown in large quantities.

Sidney Clack has all the new carnations on trial and some of them are grand. He has also made a trial of Sievers' novelties. Quite a large part of the glass at this place is devoted to roses, all of which are in splendid shape. Mr. Clack has several houses of Harrisii in full bloom. James Mitchell is in charge of this large plant.

G. A. Lehmann's place, at San Jose, is in splendid shape. He is growing large quantities of carnations. His chief sorts are McGowan, Scott and Tidal Wave, of which he has four houses. He is about to begin the erection of another house to be devoted to carnations and is also putting in a very large boiler.

E. & P. Ferrari have completed the erection of two very fine houses at their place on the San Bruno road. They will be devoted to roses for summer blooming. The varieties to be planted are President Carnot, Testout and Belle Siebrecht.

Domoto Bros. are having hard luck with their Harrisii, the disease being much worse than usual; fully half the stock is affected.

Grallert & Co., at Colma, have everything in good shape and report trade as very good. Their lily of the valley is especially fine.

Eugene Lacazette and Frank Peterson have opened a store at Fourteenth and Webster streets, Oakland.

D. Rolleri & Co. have opened a store at 327½ Grant avenue. METEOR.

MEETING OF THE SOCIETY.—MUCH ENTHUSIASM.—NEW OFFICERS TAKE HOLD.—CARNATIONS THE THEME OF THE EVENING.

Despite unfavorable weather there was a fair attendance at the meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society on January 25, when President-elect Wm. Turner and the new staff of officers assumed the reins of management. Mr. Turner made a brief address, in which he asked the co-operation of every member in his effort to build up the society, and then proceeded to the business of the evening.

There were several excellent exhibits of carnations and the committee awarded President Turner a certificate of merit for a collection including New York, Mayor Pingree, Gold Nugget, Mrs. James Dean, White Cloud and G. H. Crane. Honorable mention was made of a vase of Albertini staged by John Egan & Sons and a vase of John Young shown by Cooke & McCord. In the discussion which followed Wm. Scott said that it was poor policy for private gardeners to grow the old varieties of carnations when so much interest attaches to the new and more meritorious sorts. He recommended Mrs. Lawson, Mrs. Dean and Cerise Queen among the pinks, G. H. Crane and Hector among scarlets and Mrs. Bradt as a variegated. He said that Eldorado is the best of the yellows and predicted that Lily Dean will be superseded by J. Whitcomb Riley. Mr. Scott further remarked that the new sensation, No. 666, is a sort which may not appeal to every one but that it is the forerunner of a class which will be in strong favor with many.

President Turner related his experience in growing carnations indoors all summer and stated that White Cloud and Mayor Pingree were improved by this treatment but that it had an opposite effect upon Mrs. Bradt, Melba, Gen. Maceo and others which he had tried. J. I. Donlan spoke upon the history and the evolution of the carnation since the date of its introduction and several others contributed to the discussion, which was the liveliest in the society's history.

A number of contributions to the premium fund were put on record and five new members were elected, Michael Ward and James Clarke, of Irvington, Theodore Dinkle and Peter Smith, of Tarrytown, and Wm. Kearney, of North Tarrytown.

TRADE BRISK BUT WEATHER UNFAVORABLE.—NEW OFFICERS OF THE LOCAL SOCIETIES.—CARNATION AND VIOLET SHOW PLANNED.

Business continues fair notwithstanding the disagreeable, changeable weather, unfavorable to the production of good stock.

The Toronto Horticultural Society held its annual meeting January 10 and elected the following officers: President, Edward Tyrrell; first vice-president, Thomas McQueen; second vice-president, E. F. Collins; secretary and treasurer, Chas. E. Chambers; directors, Henry Lucas, Dr. J. O. Orr, J. McP. Ross, Herman Simmers, G. R. Copping, A. G. Chambers, J. P. Slater, Dr. Hamilton and A. H. Watkins. The directors met January 23 and arranged the preliminaries of a violet and carnation exhibition to be held at St. George's Hall about March 8.

The new staff of officers of the Toronto Gardener's and Florists' Association are: President, Wm. Jay; first vice-president, E. Grainger; second vice-president, C. Pragnall; treasurer, G. H. Mills; secretary, W. C. Jay; assistant secretary, Ernest Collins; directors, Thos. Manton, J. C. Chambers, W. Muston, W. Woods, A. H. Watkins, J. W. Goodier and Frederick Brown.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB.—THE OFFICERS ELECTED.

The annual meeting of the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held January 22 and, after several very favorable reports were read by retiring officers, the following elections were made:

Hon. president, Lord Strathcona; president, G. A. Robinson; first vice-president, F. C. Smith; second vice-president, R. W. Whiting; treasurer, Walter Wilshire; secretary, W. H. Horobin; assistant secretary, Fred. Bennett; executive committee, John Walsh, John Eddy, James McKenna, W. J. Wilshire, William Hall and C. A. Smith.

The annual dinner, which was held at McHugh's hotel, Lachine, on January 29 was a great success.

Rochester, N. Y.

All through the month of January trade was fairly steady, and now the supply of flowers is adequate to meet existing demands. Some of Walter Salmon's roses compare favorably with the best grades anywhere. Violets have greatly improved and are now quite plentiful. Carnations, too, have gained in size and quality. Freesias are cheaper than usual. Tulips are rapidly improving; good La Reines sell well. Plant trade keeps up steadily; azaleas take the lead in flowering plants with cyclamens closely following. Dendrobium nobile in 5 and 6-inch pots seems to find more favor with each succeeding year.

The Western New York Horticultural Society held its annual sessions here last week. The attendance was large, as the organization now has a membership of 457 and the society is in prosperous condition. Many subjects of interest were discussed. A very creditable exhibition of fruit was laid out on long tables. Ellwanger & Barry had the largest exhibit but several others made good showings. J. B. K.

CENTRAL NEW YORK HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The eleventh annual meeting was held at Syracuse January 30, when the principal feature was an address on "How not to do it" by Grove P. Rawson, of Elmira. The following officers were elected: President, S. T. Betts; vice-presidents, E. A. Powell, A. D. Perry, J. William Smith, L. E. Marquisee, C. W. Snow and A. C. Chase; secretary, N. H. Chapman; treasurer, David Campbell; members of the executive committee for three years, S. W. Rose and C. A. Fox.

THE directors of the American Window Glass Company have authorized a further reduction in price of two and one-half per cent and the war between the combine and the independents goes merrily onward.

EDWIN LONSDALE does not claim the delicate pink sport of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, illustrated in our issue of January 27, as his own, its origin being in doubt. No authentic information is to be had as to its origin. What Mr. Lonsdale does claim, however, is that he recognized the value of the sport and aided in making it popular.

WE are in receipt of some very good samples of cyclamen blooms from J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati. If the habit of the plants is up to standard quality, these flowers should make them almost ideal. Some blooms of the Papilio section were very fine, and it is to be regretted that this new group has not the free-flowering habit and handsome foliage of the grandiflora type.

A Directory Correction.

Through a misapprehension on the part of the proof-readers, the address of John Niven, an advertiser, is given in the latest edition of our Directory as Crieff, N. The American Rose Society.

A meeting of the executive committee of the American Rose Society was held in New York on Saturday, January 27, when the arrangements for the approaching show on March 27, 28 and 29 were nearly completed. It has been decided, in order to make the work of the society more substantial, that a bulletin shall be issued containing notes of the society's doings and of progress with roses. This will be sent free to every member of the society but will not otherwise be available. The number of premiums for the March show continues to grow in a most satisfactory manner and there is every encouragement offered to growers in all parts to compete. The gold and silver medals given by the New York Florists' Club are offered for the best 100 roses in four varieties from growers residing outside a radius of 150 miles from New York city as measured by the distances shown on the railroad time tables. This should insure a representative competition from growers distant from New York and will place their competition on an even basis.

LEONARD BARRON, Sec'y.

Longiflorum Lilies for Easter.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—We removed our longiflorum lilies from the frames November 20; they are now six inches high, stocky, with the pots full of roots. Please state when we should commence giving liquid manure, and the temperature to maintain in order to have the plants in bloom for Easter. We are holding them at 56° to 58° now. How much more heat, if any, will they require than Harrisii? The bulbs are from Japan.

T.

If the Japan longiflorum plants are at this date, January 29, six inches high and stocky they will be in bloom by Easter, which comes this year middle of April, if kept at night in a temperature of 55° to 60°; much depends on the number of bright days; if there is much cloudy weather the temperature may have to be slightly increased. We think it is time enough to apply manure water after the buds can be seen. The liquid should be made of sheep or cow manure and applied once or twice a week until the plants are nearly in full bloom.

ROBT. CRAIG.

Reclaiming Sandy Soil.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Kindly let me know the best way to prepare for cultivation an acre of sandy soil which has never been cultivated? State also whether horse manure or cow manure are as good as any artificial fertilizer and which is the cheapest? F. R.

"F. R." does not say for what crop he wishes to prepare his land, but as a general rule cow manure is more retentive of moisture and therefore better than any other for a light sandy soil. The main thing to consider in reclaiming such soil is to get as much vegetable matter into it as possible; a good heavy dressing of cow manure will produce a good crop of clover or similar green crop which can be plowed in green; this will make a good foundation for almost any crop desired. Artificial fertilizers at the same cost will not give as good results.

JOHN N. MAY.

"Sports."

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I note what is said on page 698 in the AMERICAN FLORIST of January 13 respecting a sport from a chrysanthemum, and that you take exception to the statement of the owner thereof, namely, William Gallagher, Little Rock, Ark., that it is a sport from the variety W. H. Chadwick. Your comment to the effect—"This hardly seems possible, the latter being a distinct incurved variety, while Mr. Gallagher's flower is as distinctly reflexed"—is likely to provoke further observations, for instance: It is supposed from said editorial comment that Dame Nature when in a sportive mood confines her predisposition to variation to change in color of the flower only, but such may not always prove to be the case. There is no known reason why she should not change the form as well as the color of the flower. We have many evidences where dwarf varieties in growth have been secured from different cultivated plants, and also some with larger or stronger growing tendencies, as Climbing Kaiserin, among roses, and drooping or the so-called weeping, among deciduous trees and evergreens. All these, and others which might be mentioned, being facts, then why should not the statement as made by Mr. Gallagher be true? E. L.

Hydrangeas and Spiraeas for Easter.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please state how and when hydrangeas and spiræas should be started for Easter flowering? Give also the treatment the plants should receive after starting. H. M.

The most important point in growing hydrangeas which are to be flowered for Easter is to have the wood well ripened in the fall; assuming that the plants have made a good growth in summer, water should be gradually withheld, beginning middle of September, and this in conjunction with the cool autumn nights will gradually harden and ripen the wood.

The plants should be taken into a cool, dry house, temperature as near freezing point as possible, before danger of frost severe enough to badly freeze the tops. Water should be entirely withheld now until the middle of December, taking care only that the wood does not shrivel. The plants should be put in more heat (say 55° night temperature) about January first and so maintained until the buds appear, when the heat may be increased to 70° or 80° if necessary to get them in. It is better to have hydrangeas in full bloom at least a week or ten days before Easter, so that the temperature may be reduced and more air given to harden them and better fit them to stand removal from the greenhouses; if kept in a high temperature until a day or so before Easter they wilt easily when put in a lower temperature or when subjected to draughts of air, which is likely to be the case if they are exposed for sale in stores, etc. ROBT. CRAIG.

Greenhouse Construction Problems.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I have a piece of ground 160 feet square upon which I wish to build some greenhouses. It will be more convenient to place the boiler shed in the middle of the plat, running it north and south and then running the houses east and west each way from the shed. What objection can be urged against building the short slope on the south, and if so built, at what angle should the rafters stand, and what the length of rafters for a 20-foot house? What about the arrangement of benches —what height and width, and how far should the south bench be placed from the south wall? It may be well to state that we have very little cloudy or dark weather, over 300 days of the year being clear. SUBSCRIBER.

While many owners of greenhouses with the short span to the south seem well pleased with them, it must be confessed that comparatively few have been built during the past three or four years. Where the space is limited they certainly have the advantage of permitting the houses to be built "ridge and furrow." Different angles have been used for the rool, but most commonly the walls are of the same height and the sash bars on the north and south sides are respectively sixteen and eight feet. The height of the benches varies with the height of the walls and the kind of crop to be grown, but about three feet is an average height. The width of the benches varies from four feet for roses to about seven feet for carnations, violets and similar crops. The width of the south walk is usually about twenty inches. L. R. T.

He had lived at Warren since 1828. Mr. Gaskill worked in his son's greenhouses up to within a few days of his death. Mrs. Gaskill survives him.

MRS. JOSEPH HILL.

Jean L. Hill, widow of Joseph Hill and step mother of E. G. Hill, died at her son's residence at Richmond, Ind., on the morning of January 26. Deceased was in her eighty-second year, having been born at Glasgow, Scotland, in 1818. She was married to Joseph Hill in 1858 and was well known to many hundreds of florists who have been entertained under her son's roof. She entered peacefully upon her eternal rest. Interment was at Earlham Cemetery on January 30.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres.; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

VISITING BOSTON: A. T. Boddington, New York.

THERE has been plenty of rain in California and planting is progressing better than usual for this time of year.

AT Dunkirk, N. Y., John M. Hackett and James L. Drohen have formed a partnership under the name of the South Shore Seed Co.

S. W. CALLENDER has left S. F. Leonard, Chicago, to embark for himself at Minneapolis in the fruit and produce commission business.

As an indication of opinions as to prospects for spring it is pointed out that the mail order houses are doing more advertising than usual in the early numbers of the magazines of general circulation.

Prize Seed Contest.

In October last Prof. Robertson, commissioner of agriculture and dairying, Ottawa, personally offered $100 in twenty-four prizes to boys and girls for 100 heads of wheat and oats bearing the largest number of seeds. The farmers' boys and girls took the matter up with interest. All the provinces were represented in the competition. British Columbia took first prize for both wheat and oats. The prizes went to the provinces in the following order: Ontario, 13; British Columbia, 3; Northwest Territories, 2; Manitoba, 2; New Brunswick, 2; Nova Scotia, 1; Quebec, 1. Many very superior samples of grain were submitted and some of the competitors showed much skill and taste in arranging the heads daintily and packing them carefully. However, some lots arrived in poor coverings and a generally dilapidated condition.

Prof. Robertson says that a generous friend, who has the best interests of the farmers' girls and boys and of the agricultural community closely at heart, has made it possible for him to offer cash prizes to the amount of $10,000 for a competition in the selection of seed grain in all the provinces during the next three years. Full particulars regarding this splendid encouragement to farmers' boys and girls will be published early next month.—Detroit Free Press, Dec. 30.

Sweet Peas for Florists' Planting.

Cupids and Burpee's Bush.

These most distinct types have greatly increased and widened the area of successful Sweet Pea culture, as the low, compact growth and wonderful root-system of the plants enable them to resist heat and drouth to a much greater extent than the tall-growing sorts, which, under similar unfavorable conditions, are apt to suffer from the red spider and other troubles, the vines drying up after only a brief period of bloom. These new types are not so well adapted for growing in cool, moist locations; the dense, compact growth of foliage being quite apt to "damp off" under such conditions, so that the two distinct types of tall or running growth and the low, bush-like and spreading growth should be used to complement each other.

The flowers of the CUPID type are borne on stiff stems, too short for bunching effectively, but quite desirable for boutonnieres and design work, strikingly resembling rosebuds when freshly opened. It is as a border or bedding plant that they develop the greatest beauty; the rich, dark-green carpet of foliage being literally hidden by the clusters of lovely flowers. The new BUSH SWEET PEA has flowers of large size and fine form, borne on long stems, equally as well suited for bunching as those of the tall-growing varieties, and from present indications we shall soon be able to offer quite a complete assortment of shades and colorings, so that florists having light soils or very dry locations will be able to grow a supply of Sweet Peas for summer cut-flowers quite as readily as those situated in cool, moist locations.

The Best for Forcing is Burpee's "Earliest of All."

For planting under glass we recommend only the tall or running varieties, which can be trained to strings or other supports, although some growers have succeeded splendidly with the Cupids as pot-plants under glass. Our new variety, BURPEE'S "EARLIEST OF ALL," is distinctly the finest and most profitable Sweet Pea for forcing, by reason of its extremely early flowering and beautiful coloring. From seed planted in raised beds the last week in August the vines began blooming the last of October, and continued to flower until cut off by the heat of the late spring months. The seed is sown thinly in drills twelve inches apart running across the beds, and the vines supported with light wire stakes. The vines branch freely and furnish a profusion of fine large flowers on long stems, usually three in a spray. The standards are a rich, bright rose, well expanded, and the wings of a creamy white, frequently tinged or spotted with rose, identical in all respects with the popular Blanche Ferry. In the open ground the growth is quite dwarf, only eighteen inches to two feet in height, and the plants are in full flower from a week to ten days in advance of even the Extra Early Blanche Ferry or Emily Henderson, while under glass no other variety at all approaches it in earliness, the ordinary varieties seldom flowering before February, even from seed planted early in the fall.

The Best Pure Whites.

Pure white is also a most useful color for florists. The Emily Henderson is the earliest flowering, but rather delicate in texture and with distinct notch at the top of the standard. BLANCHE BURPEE blossoms later, is of very strong growth, and continues longer in flower; the flowers are of very large size, grand form, and good substance, lasting a long time when cut. "SADIE BURPEE" is considered by Mr. Eckford his finest variety, "absolutely the grandest white." The vines are of very strong growth, the flowers of extra large size and beautiful, shell-like form on long stem. One type of "Sadie Burpee" is distinct in having black seed, so that it can be planted earlier in the spring. Under exceptionally favorable conditions the standards of the longest flowers are "notched" near the base as in Butterfly.

BURPEE'S MODESTY is a creamy white with only the faintest tint of delicate pink, black-seeded and hardy, and would answer well as a white sort.

Popular "Pink and White."

As stated before, the combination of Pink and White, as in the Blanche Ferry, is the most popular coloring in the Sweet Pea. For outdoor planting we recommend that BURPEE'S "EARLIEST OF ALL," Extra Early Blanche Ferry, and the regular strain of Blanche Ferry should all be planted, as they will flower in succession in the order named, giving the longest period of bloom.

Clear Light Lavenders.

In Lavender we recommend BURPEE'S NEW COUNTESS, Lady Nina Balfour, and Lady Grisel Hamilton, all of the most soft and pleasing shades, differing slightly in tint.

Pinks of Several Shades.

In pink we recommend Lovely, a soft shell-pink with creamy border; Prima Donna, beautiful light blush-pink; Prince of Wales (an improved Her Majesty), very large, finely-hooded flowers of a rich, glowing rose-pink; Hon. F. Bouverie, soft flesh-pink tinted with buff, a most distinct shading; Royal Rose (an improved Apple Blossom), a bright flesh-pink, grandiflora size, and beautiful form.

The Best Two Scarlets.

In scarlet, Salopian is the most glowing in shade. BURPEE'S BRILLIANT and the improved "SUNPROOF" SALOPIAN will best resist the strong sunshine, being free from the blackening of the standard so troublesome with the other scarlet varieties.

Creamy Yellow or Primrose Tints.

In creamy yellow or Primrose tints Mrs. Eckford is the deepest in shade, while Queen Victoria is the largest in flower and of finest form. STELLA MORSE is of a rich apricot tint bordering on buff.

Two Bright Blues.

The rich BURPEE'S "NAVY BLUE," introduced last year, is most distinct and one of the finest for cut flowers; vines of strong growth, wonderfully free and continuous bloomer with three and four large flowers on a long stem. The flowers are of very large size, fine, open form, and a rich violet-blue or purple. Extremely rich, it should be planted by every florist, as it will be without doubt the most popular dark-colored variety.

Eckford's Countess Cadogan, also introduced last year, is a most charming bright blue of a lighter shade. It is vastly superior to Captain of the Blues, and is sure to become very popular for cut-flowers.

The Most "Gorgeous" of All.

For a rich, glowing orange we recommend BURPEE'S GORGEOUS and Lady Mary Currie, which are quite similar in shade, but distinct in form, the latter having a tall, pointed standard. Both are of a rich orange-salmon tint, with darker and richer veinings. A most distinct and striking shade.

The Best Orange-Pink.

Lady Penzance has been for years a great favorite, but is now surpassed by BURPEE'S ORIENTAL. This is the largest and finest in coloring of this type (unless we place Lady Mary Currie in the same class) and it does not fade under the hottest sun.

The Best Very Dark Varieties.

For the darkest and richest colors aside from Navy Blue we would plant Othello, a beautiful dark brown with satiny finish; and Duke of Westminster, a deep maroon, both of the largest size.

All the above are self-colored flowers of the largest size and finest form in their respective colorings, these self-colored flowers being the most popular for bunching. Florists should include also the following fancy or variegated sorts to complete the finest assortment: GRAY FRIAR, violet-purple, watered veinings, and shading on a silvery-white ground; PINK FRIAR, the same markings, but of a soft cerise-pink; AURORA, a grand, large, silvery-white flower, delicately striped and flaked with salmon-pink; WAWONA, white, striped with a beautiful heliotrope shade; LOTTIE HUTCHINS, daintily flaked with pink on a creamy-white ground; Lottie Eckford and MAID OF HONOR of the dainty "blue and white" blendings.

The above selections cover an extensive range of shades and colors, but our list of varieties offers many others of distinct shades, suitable for cut flowers, from which florists can select those most desirable for their needs.

These are varieties of the moss pink (Phlox subulata) which is readily propagated by division of the old plants shortly after they have ceased blooming in spring, transplanting in the open ground. Where the work is deferred until later in the season the divisions should be planted and wintered in cold frames, removing the plants to their permanent location the following spring.

GENEVIEVE LORD.

THE peer of any light pink Carnation ever offered to the trade. A commercial triumph. Its beautiful color, large size and its matchless length and stiffness of stem make it, beyond a doubt, the queen of its class. There is nothing like it. We offer it to the commercial grower as a money getter of the first magnitude.

As an exhibition flower, it ranks high. It will take care of itself in its class. It has carried off the highest honors wherever shown. The blooms are now being sold in the most critical market and bringing highest prices. It will not be over-propagated. Our book will close as soon as the limit is reached. Order early and be sure.

$75 00 per 1000, $10.00 per 100, $2.00 per doz.

☞Pleaee Note: Stock for delivery prior to March 15th, all sold. Are now booking orders for that date and later. Stock ie going fast. Don't delay.

Convention Preliminaries.

The committee which the New York Florists' Club has placed in charge of the sports of the convention, wishes to hear, before March 1, from the captain of each team which intends to compete in the convention tournament. The purpose is to arrange the preliminaries. Captains should address Chas. Schenck, 38 West Twenty-eighth street, New York, N. Y.

At New York.

A tournament has been arranged to take place between the bowling teams representing the New York Florists' Club, the North Hudson County and the Flatbush Florists' Bowling Clubs. The first struggle will occur at Hiflick's Assembly Room, Paterson and Summit avenues, Hoboken, on Wednesday evening, February 7. On Monday evening, January 29, there was as large a crowd present at the Fifty-seventh street alleys as could be accommodated comfortably. Much hilarity prevailed and several samples of silver coin changed owners on individual results. The scores were as follows:

Player	1st	2d	3d	Player	1st	2d	3d
Traendly	120	119		Burus	117	123	167
Hafner	148	105		Lang	171	198	129

Chinese Azalea.

Azaleas.... for Easter

Although our stock of Azaleas this season is larger than ever, we strongly recommend early orders. Many of our customers were disappointed last year in not being able to procure stock several weeks before Easter, and we have taken more than ordinary precautions to prevent a repetition of this the coming season, but all indications are that the demand this year will be greater than ever, besides this the plants can be transported with so much greater satisfaction while they are still in a semi-dormant condition, that this point alone should be sufficient to induce early orders, for no matter how carefully packed, the plants are certain to receive some check when turned out of pots after the buds have developed, and we assume no responsibility for injuries arising from late shipments.

We can still supply full assortments in the following sizes:

	In. diam.	Per doz.	Per 100.
5-in. pots, nice bushy crowns,	10 to 12	$5.00	$40.00

Was the exclamation of one of the best growers in the west when he discovered this sport, four years ago. By carefully handling it, and not over-propagating it, we are now able to offer to the trade a clean, healthy stock of the best

ETHEL CROCKER

Absolutely the BEST PINK CARNATION ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another). By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety). In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July. With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and the order filled by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished, prepaid, at $1.00 per dozen—amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date, every sample, excepting one, out of several hundred sent, has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES, good little plants, at 75 cts. per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

AMERICAN FLORIST CO., 324 DEARBORN STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Portchester, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Westchester County Gardeners' Association was held Saturday evening, January 27, President Shore presiding. A lively discussion, on the advisability of holding monthly exhibitions took place. It was decided to have a carnation exhibition at the next meeting and John W. Duncan, Robert Williamson and George M. Hay were appointed a committee to make arrangements and to report on the advisability of holding future exhibitions. It was decided to have discussions at each meeting on subjects pertaining to the craft. The subject for next meeting is the pruning of shrubs, to be introduced by John W. Duncan. The question, "Do grafted roses bloom more freely than those on their own roots, during December and January? brought forth an interesting discussion participated in by Messrs. Draycott, Williamson, Hay and others. The society meets again Saturday evening, February 24, at Irving Hall, Portchester, N. Y., and visitors are welcome. JOHN W. DUNCAN, Sec'y.

CLARE & SCHARRATH,
ORLANDO, FLA.

El Reno, Okla.

E. J. Perry is young in business and has only one greenhouse, about 1700 feet of glass, but he is making excellent progress toward a permanent success. El Reno has only 6000 population and the red man is still there, but he, in company with the rest of the community, looks with delight upon flowers in mid-winter, and Mr. Perry grows a general stock. He has all the standard varieties of the rose and is very successful with American Beauty, growing them in a night temperature of from 45° to 50°; not a bloom goes to waste although prices are not as high as in the east.

TRINIDAD, COLO.—Chas. F. Swayger, the well known landscape gardener, has taken charge of the greenhouses of S. C. Thorp & Son.

Horticultural Reminiscences.

[Read before the New Jersey Floricultural Society, Orange, N. J., on February 7, 1900, by John N. May, Summit, N. J.]

This subject may not be very agreeable to the younger members of this association, as it will carry us back into the cloudy past. Still there are some among us whose memories will carry them back a few years; probably they may find some little interest on being reminded of the past. No man who is a man in the strict sense of the word, can help looking backward with some pleasure; memory returns to the happy past more frequently as we pass the meridian of life than many of us are ready to admit, hence my excuse for the above title.

One of the first things horticultural impressed on my memory was being put to pull the weeds (and they were very numerous, too) out from between the bricks of a paved courtyard in dry, hot weather; the hot bricks burnt my knees and the weeds would break off, leaving their roots fast wedged between the bricks; my fingers were sore, and my patience sorely tried many, very many times daily, particularly when being told that I was trying to make a good job last as long as possible. There was a certain cynical emphasis put upon these remarks which were not particularly pleasing to a boy who would very much prefer a game of leap frog, cricket, base ball or any other active sociable game to solitaire weeding. Yes, I can look back now and feel glad that I am not still weeding that courtyard, yet I am compelled to admit that the experience above has been of considerable benefit to me in many ways since. For want of better amusement one evening during the time I was so employed, I figured out what it would cost in wood and labor to heat to boiling point a given number of gallons of water, enough to kill all the weeds I could pull in one day, and found, according to my computation, that the employer could save twenty-five per cent in the cost, or by using a given amount of common salt to accomplish the same result he could save thirty per cent; after I had struggled to get this into intelligent form, which was a very difficult thing for me, as I was and always have been rather a dull boy at arithmetic, I ventured to show my figures to the foreman under whose orders I was working; he shrugged his shoulders and told me to keep my own counsel, as he did not want anything said that would tend to reduce the number of help given him, but it left an impression on my mind which the number of years elapsing since have not entirely effaced.

Passing on from this, my earliest experience in gardening matters, I often pause to think of some things which favorably impressed me during those years of probation. Among the first plants with which I gained some slight knowledge were achimenes, balsams, Boronia megastigma, with its slender, drooping racemes in graceful beauty; Callicarpa purpurea, with its lovely violet colored berries; Camellia Donckleari, Lady Hume's Blush, Alba Plena and many others equally beautiful; chorizema, a charmingly graceful thing; Cantua dependens, with its bright glowing pendent flowers produced in such profusion; Correa cardinalis, with its tube-like flowers, blooming for such a long period under the simplest treatment; epacrises, with erect, stately spikes of bell-shaped flowers in such varieties as acuminata, grandiflora, obtusifolia, pulchella, etc.; epiphyllums of Russellianum and truncatum types, grafted on pereskia stocks, glorious winter blooming plants; Linum arboreum and L. flavum, with their golden flowers; Erythrina crista-galli, with its brilliant scarlet flowers; Euphorbia splendens, with its bright flowers, steel gray foliage and long spines which plainly forbid any one from appropriating its charming clusters of flowers under penalty of dire punishment. Among other well remembered plants were fuchsias in great variety of form and color, and what charming plants were the pyramidal specimens, four to six feet high, covered with countless blooms, or the standards, with heads large enough for umbrellas? Then there were the mesembryanthemums, to which family our common garden weed, pursely (?), belongs, yet the genera contain many gems for greenhouse culture. Mimulus cardinalis was always interesting on account of its musk-like fragrance and beautiful flowers. Plumbago Capensis and P. rosea, one with its azure blue, the other rose-colored, afforded charming variety of color. Rondeletia cordata, R. odorata and R. racemosa are all exceedingly attractive things, with their long pendulous spikes of brilliant colored flowers, and are so easy of culture. Thyrsacanthus rutilans, of brilliant color and very free flowering; torenias, lovely dwarf bushy plants, and a host of others equally interesting and beautiful, where are they to be found now? Once in a great while I come across some poor, neglected plant of one or the other and it is like meeting a very old and dear friend who has been unfortunate through no fault of his own. It brings back in unspoken words pleasant reminiscences of happier days for that and many other old friends.

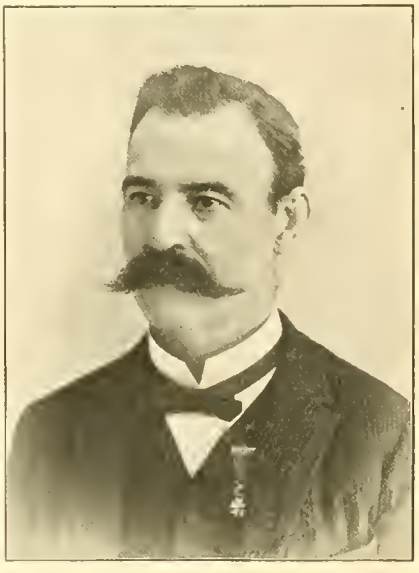
Time and tide wait for no man, but are ever on the move, and as we moved with them we met at the various flower shows, in many of which some of the grandest of nature's floral gems figured very conspicuously, such as Acacia Drummondii, with its golden tassels and A. Riceana, another gem of this family; Allamanda grandiflora, A. nobilis, A. Schottii and others; azaleas in pyramids ten and twelve feet high and five to six feet in diameter at the base, with their thousands of blooms open in one solid sheet from top to bottom; Bignonia magnifica, with its mauve flowers shaded with crimson; calothamnuses, with grand racemes of scarlet flowers, of very easy culture in any ordinary greenhouse; Clerodendron fragrans, flowering from August to December, always beautiful; Clianthus puniceus, with its brilliant scarlet shrimp-formed flowers, and C. Dampieri, red and purple, exquisitely beautiful things; Dipladenia amabilis, D. Boliviensis and D. crassinoda, grand specimens in full flower. Probably no family possesses more floral gems than are found among the ericas; such varieties as Turnbullii andromedæflora, blanda, Bowieana, cerinthoides, Cavendishiana, Fairieana and grandiflora are perfect gems of floral beauty, as I have seen in the past; alas, they are now almost total strangers.

Eriostemons are beautiful greenhouse plants; where are they? Gesnera refulgens, bicolor, etc., with their handsome flowers and foliage are strangers to almost every one. Hoya bella, H. carnosa and H. imperialis, are most charming things, amenable to almost any kind of treatment; they can be trained to any form to suit the fancy and bloom for a long period, deliciously sweet, yet how rarely do we see them. Ixoras in such varieties as barbata, Chelsoni, coccinea superba and floribunda, with their handsome laurel-like foliage and brilliant colored trusses of flowers make the most distinct contrast imaginable; no family of stove or hot-house plants are more beautiful than are these when grown into nice specimens. Lapageria rosea, L. alba and L. superba are among the most beautiful of all greenhouse climbers which can be trained to any form; their handsome wax-like, large bell-flowers are always objects of great admiration. Luculia gratissima and L. Pinciana are two grand greenhouse shrubs with handsome large trusses of flowers. Nerium oleander and its varieties are lovely things of the easiest culture. Pimeleas of such sorts as elegans, glauca, rosea, spectabilis and hypericina are all exceedingly beautiful, lasting a long time in flower, requiring cool greenhouse culture only. Stephanotis floribunda is possibly the most beautiful white flowering climber we have. Thunbergia alata, T. grandiflora and T. coccinea are among the best of this family of fine climbers for a warm greenhouse. Veronicas formosa, glauca, cærulea, speciosa and pimeleoides are all very beautiful greenhouse shrubs, covering many shades of color from deep violet to pink; and lastly in this line comes Rhyncospermum jasminoides; what a lovely thing it is with its pure white sweet flowers! These are only a few of the old friends which we miss as we travel around. There are many, many others whose acquaintance I would very much like to renew, and I often wonder why lovers of nature's gems having greenhouses to grow plants for pleasure only, do not seek out some of these treasures. Unfortunately the majority want only the leading fashionable flowers of the day, such as can be found in any florist's store in the country, and neglect others possessing equal beauty and certainly much greater variety in color and form.

In hardy plants we miss the auriculas, a charming class of dwarf spring flowering gems, and often wonder that they cannot be found in the gardens of the wealthy, with hundreds of other equally attractive border plants. In shrubbery and lawn decoration how few have taken up the rhododendrons, Kalmia latifolia, hardy azaleas, etc. I never think of the rhododendron without associating with it some very pleasant rambles through immense avenues of these in all their glory of full bloom and infinite variety in form, color and size, yet these were growing in a climate no better suited to their wants than is ours here. Why are so few used in the large places in this country? Possibly those of you who have the best half of a life to live yet may see these and many other grand plants not mentioned above cultivated in all their perfection in this country. I hope you will.



THE LATE J. M. JORDAN.

Not only in plants and flowers do we miss old friends, but also in the cultivators of the same. We have many gaps left unfilled by the passing away of men, some in the prime of life, others just past the meridian, and some few who had ripened into grand old age, but all had spent their best energies to improve the cultivation of nature's greatest gems, the plants and flowers, in their respective spheres, and to diffuse a greater love for the beautiful among the masses throughout this broad country.

Of those who have gone, leaving only pleasant memories of their many good qualities, I was fortunate to know intimately such noble men as Patrick Barry, of Rochester, N. Y., who did so much for pomology; Wm. Bennett, of Flatbush, Long Island, whose life was devoted to growing and introducing many of the finer classes of plants and flowers; Isaac Buchanan, of New York, one of the pioneers of horticulture in this country; David Clark, of New York city, who did so much to elevate the retail florist business; H. B. Ellwanger, of Rochester, the author of the best work on the cultivation of the rose in America and a general lover of everything in the floral kingdom; W. J. Davidson, of Flatbush and Brooklyn, one of the best botanists and most genial men it was ever my privilege to know; Wm. Grey, of Albany, N. Y., who did so much for the orchid family and for entomology; Peter Henderson, of Jersey City and New York, whose writings are known all over the civilized world and whose whole life was given to advance the interest of gardeners and horticulture; M. A. Hunt, of Terre Haute, Ind., a man of sterling worth and the author of a valuable book on the cultivation of florists' flowers; Rob't J. Halliday, of Baltimore, Md., ever kind and courteous to the lover of horticulture and a warm advocate of its advancement; James Littlejohn, of Chatham, N. J., one of the first to develop the rose to its highest perfection, and many other plants, named above; F. T. McFadden, of Cincinnati, who loved plants and flowers for their intrinsic beauty; R. Maitre, of New Orleans, a great lover and all round grower of flowers; James Taplin, of South Amboy, and later Maywood, N. J., who grew and exhibited the finest plants ever shown in America; James Vick, of Rochester, who did so much to introduce the finest annuals and other plants easy to raise from seeds, and lastly William McMillan, of Buffalo and later of Newark, who did so much in landscape embellishment. Poor friend McMillan, thou wert known to many present to-night, a true horticulturist and a noble man!

These are only a few of the good men who have left us to carry on the work they so nobly started; let us try to fulfill the mission intrusted to us, and our reward will be the assurance that we are trying to elevate the human race by increasing the cultivation and love of the beautiful which nature furnishes for every one who will turn his thoughts to horticulture.

The American Rose Society.

It is to be presumed that most of the readers of the AMERICAN FLORIST know that last March an attempt was made to organize the American Rose Society. Thirty or forty interested men met and went through the form of electing officers, adopting bylaws and a constitution, and further decided that two shows should be given in 1900, one in March, the other in June. These men started this society feeling that there is a necessity for a rose society, devoted exclusively to the welfare of that flower. They further felt that they deserved the support, not nominal and subjective, but active and encouraging, of all who not only love the rose for the rose's sake, but especially of those who owe to that flower the foundation of whatever success they may have had in the florist business.

Are they warranted in going on with this enterprise? This is a question addressed directly to you as one for whom the rose has a special interest and claim. You are one who makes his living by either growing and wholesaling or by buying and retailing roses. It is no good to say that the rose is only a part of your stock. It always has been and always will be your one great standby. You have it, like the poor, always with you. No other flower is like it. The chrysanthemum is the flower of a day; it is showy but its perfume is not attractive; it has only color, form and size. The carnation is sweet, has color and form but not size. Each has its own society, its own followers, its own advocates.

The rose has color, form, size and fragrance. It has been with us for years; the dear people buy it, want it, call for it, will have it, and it has heretofore had no adherents willing to devote time, money, energy and attention to urging its claims to improvement and advancement. (I am speaking only for America.) Are you willing this state of affairs should continue? Do you want to desert this old, tried and true friend? Are you going to sit calmly down and permit the buyers to be refused roses and be compelled to take some other flower instead, because you are too lazy, inert or careless of your own best interests to move at a critical time, to turn in and make a success of this society? I do not believe you are or can be so blind to your own advantage.

It is not the paltry sum for dues that will make a success of this society, but it is the encouragement of your names and your presence at the meetings and at the shows. If you want any one else to take an interest in your undertaking, you must show your own interest first, and this is what I want to impress upon you. You are in the florist business for success and not for amusement. You need to widen the scope of the business and do everything within your power to keep its lines from being contracted or limited. Has it ever struck you what an advantage it would be if you could double your sales of any one flower or plant? Then what greater good can you do your business than to make the rose so popular that two blooms may be sold, two plants put out where now one is?

This can only be accomplished by your individual aid, uniting all the efforts of all at interest. Get at the public by bringing to their notice that you are working, and this you can best do through the channel of the American Rose Society. I beg of you to consider your own interests. This year the society will meet in New York. It will depend upon you where it meets, if ever again. Will you let it die, or will you give it your support by your presence and by your exhibits? With you it rests and with you alone.

BENJAMIN DORRANCE.

Graham's Ball Decorations.

Hugh Graham makes a specialty of large decorations and has done some very fine work in Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, this season. As many as twenty-five carpenters have been employed on one decoration and these, together with the electricians, upholsterers and greenhouse men, have made a small army. An immense amount of work has often to be done in a short time. As much as 2,000 strings of smilax have been used for one affair. Large quantities of palms and blooming plants are also used. Cut flowers are extensively employed in various ways, as much originality as possible being given to each affair, as nearly all the balls are held in the same building. The illustration shows but a small portion of one end and side of the hall, all of which was just as elaborately trimmed as the part shown. The raised balcony is a part of the decoration and stands about four feet above the floor of the hall. The entire ceiling was canopied with smilax as partially shown. The ball room is about 75x125 feet. K.

Helpful Reminders.

By making some careful calculation on our needs for the next five months we find that to properly care for such stock as we now have in process of development, with its gradual increase in size and the number of additions which will be desirable as springtime business approaches, we will be short of room. We will then advocate expansion; perhaps some of you built an addition to your plant since last spring with the firm belief that you would not be cramped for room this season, but if you possess the ordinary instinct of the progressive florist your houses are all well filled now and you are facing the problem of a year ago; but do not let that worry you. A greenhouse well built is too expensive for simply caring for the spring overflow; you did well to fill it. You should have a yard convenient to your potting shed, well sheltered from the cold wind, a hedge of Norway spruce being good in the country or in city property or for immediate use, a tight board fence twelve feet high. Within this enclosure arrange a set of cold frames on which will fit the 4-foot square sash; have them all a trifle highest at the end farthest from your boiler room; place in each a flow and return water pipe (1-inch gas pipe is sufficient) and connect with your boiler, or what is better, have a small boiler or water heater separate. These frames, of course, in length and number depend on size of your business. This sort of arrangement is not expensive; it can be put in now before you are very busy. As soon as the spring rush is over the whole outfit can be taken apart and packed away ready for another season; the sashes can be used on north slopes of your greenhouses for additional protection in November, December, January and February, until you are ready to fill up frames again. Such an outfit is not attended with the large amount of labor and uncertainty that pertain to hotbeds, except in forcing plants like tuberoses and caladiums; they are far better for young plants of chrysanthemums, stevia, geranium, seedlings of various kinds, carnations, verbenas, etc. C. B. W.

St. Valentine's Day in the East.

Valentine's Day in Boston has always been a busy and profitable occasion for the florist. February 13 and 14 are equally busy with the wholesalers, the out of town trade buying briskly on the earlier date for demands of the 14th. Small flowers sell best, violets leading everything else, but the demand really covers everything in the flower line and applies to all grades of the business. Flowers for Valentine gifts are sent almost invariably in boxes, a fancy card or valentine being laid on top of the flowers, and there is little or nothing done in the way of special design work or decoration. Last year was a most unfortunate one for the Valentine trade as the big blizzard struck in the day before and, everything being blocked, people who wanted violets had to go without and the dealers missed the benefit of the much-needed business in the worst coal-eating season they had seen for many a year. All are hoping for better luck this time. With good weather and modest prices the violet market ought to round-up in good shape and show a surplus sufficient to build a couple more greenhouses.

Valentine's Day in New York means little more to the florist than a moderately increased call for boxes of cut flowers and a few dinner parties. There was a time, years ago, when such sentimental devices as lover's knots, interlocking hearts, Cupid's darts, etc., were quite generally ordered for the observance of this occasion. Valentine's Day gifts and table decorations were alike built on these suggestive lines, but all that is entirely out of date now with New York florists and their customers, and only the old stagers are able to tell of its rise and fall. The made-up Valentine design has gone the way of the made-up Christmas piece and the ingenious "floral artist" of those days is no more a factor in metropolitan flower work than are the antiquated toothpick and wire, which were the most indispensable implements of his profession.

In adorning a room or table for a Valentine celebration refined taste is, as always, the main requisite in the decorator, whose eye will tell him at once what may or may not be used with good effect against or among the furnishings of the room. In general, however, he will be safe in avoiding as far as possible massive or gaudy display and confining his efforts to the development of sweet and dainty effects. Spring flowers are especially acceptable for the occasion. Violets meet with a largely increased call and such material as tulips, lily of the valley and daffodils share in the special demand. Forget-me-not and pansies are also peculiarly appropriate. One tasty florist has for some years followed the custom of making up a number of little open-centered violet hearts, one of which he adds gratuitously to each box of flowers exceeding a certain value which goes out of his store on Valentine's Day and the recipients appreciate it.

If anything novel for the occasion this year is contemplated by any of the florists here who make any attempt at originality, he has it snugly hidden "up his sleeve" and it will not emerge until the proper moment, but with the bountiful supply of splendid long-stemmed flowers that this market affords at the present time and the very moderate observance of the occasion there is really little to incite the exercise of one's ingenuity to any special effort.

SEATTLE, WASH.—F. Fountaine, who conducted a florists' business in Racine, Wis., for fifteen years prior to 1893, has opened a flower store at 706 Second avenue.

DELIVERY WAGON OF DANIELS & FISHER, DENVER, COL.

"Judge Not, Lest Ye Be Judged."

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I see in your issue of February 3 an article under the above head by W. N. Rudd and notice he is taking the Chicago judges' side of the controversy in giving Carnation Enquirer 100 points. I have been one of the judges in Cincinnati on the same variety. In the latter city it was given only 92¾ points and that was an average reached simply on account of one judge or it would hardly have reached 90 points. Now, if the Chicago judges were correct, I was certainly away off the mark. I simply want to state here how I came to rate it away below 100 points and at the same time I think to-day that I was right in doing so, whether or not the Chicago judges think different. My way of judging is very plain and simple. There were at the time in Cincinnati a great many novelties before the judges and the following is the modus operandi I employed in the work: Here I have Enquirer. Is it perfection in color? No; it has too much salmon to be a true pink. Is it perfection in size? No; No. 666 stands right there and is decidedly larger. Is it perfection in calyx? No; Armazindy and Mrs. Bradt have finer calyxes. Is it perfect in stem? Certainly not; Armazindy stands right there as straight as a lot of cane stakes. Is it good in substance? Yes, very fair, but not perfection. Is it good in form? Why, Indiana is there; which is better. Is it good in fragrance? Not much, or I must have a bad cold that my smeller is out of condition. Has it the full petalage? I think not; Indiana is there and is doing better. You will see from the foregoing that it would be impossible for me to give Enquirer 100 or even 90 points. I think there is nothing in the court easier for a judge than to say to a prisoner, "My man, you are innocent, you are free." But it is different to state whether such a decision is good law. THEO. BOCK.

Progress Westward.

Were evidence lacking of the remarkable strides of floriculture in the west, the illustration of the delivery wagon of Daniels & Fisher, of Denver, Colo., reproduced herewith would be amply sufficient to convince the greatest skeptic. It is not for the mere glitter of the thing that so much capital is invested in such costly vehicles. These must be a cause for their maintenance and it must be admitted that the principal purpose of a florist's delivery wagon is the delivery of floral products to customers, its value from an advertising standpoint being secondary. The Daniels & Fisher wagon is of an attractive violet shade, with gold lettering and trimmings. The oval panels of the sides show green-leaved palms on a dull white ground. The wheels are rubber tired and in cold weather warmth is imparted to the interior by means of a Lehman heater. The coachman and footman wear livery consisting of a green coat, lavender breeches, black boots with white tops and a black silk hat with lavender cockade. The entire outfit is from designs supplied by G. M. Geraghty, the enterprising manager of Daniels & Fisher's floral department.

TORONTO JUNCTION, ONT.—A. Gilchrist, who was authorized by the Deputy Minister of Agriculture to organize the Toronto Junction Horticultural Society, was rewarded by being elected honorary president of the body. W. H. Post is secretary.

CARNATIONS.

CARNATION MRS. BERTRAM LIPPINCOTT.

This new variety is now offered for the first time by Henry F. Michell, of Philadelphia. It was originated by John Kuhn, of that city, about four years ago and is said to be a cross of Daybreak and Wm. Scott. The flowers are described as a shade darker than Daybreak, three to three and one-half inches in diameter, with non-bursting calyxes, and borne on good stems, blooming freely and continuously. The illustration shown herewith is from a photograph.

CARNATION MRS. BERTRAM LIPPINCOTT.

TO GROW WITH SCOTT.

ED. AM FLORIST:—What is the best white carnation to grow with Scott? I can grow very nice Scotts, but McGowan does not do so well. I have tried Flora Hill one year but consider this hardly as good as McGowan. H. W. B.

Try John Young and White Cloud. White carnations usually can stand a little more heat and more regularity of heat than Scott requires.

CARNATIONS REGISTERED.

A. R. Walker, Flint, Mich., registers Michigan, color dark red, a seedling from McGowan, freer in bloom than Scott and blooms the whole season through from time of planting in until thrown out; stem wiry and from fifteen to twenty-four inches long; foliage dark green and healthy, the cuttings easy to root and the plants easy to lift in the fall.

J. L. Dillon, Bloomsburg, Pa., registers Queen Louise, a strong grower, no grass, every shoot producing a flower, very strong stem, an early and continuous bloomer, pure white, fragrant, does not burst and as large as Mrs. Geo. M. Bradt.

ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

THE CARNATION MEETING.

What promises to be the banner meeting of the American Carnation Society will be held at Buffalo next week, Thursday and Friday, February 15 and 16. We want every one interested in carnations to try to attend this meeting. If we can get the attendance as near the 200-mark as we usually have it to the 100-mark, we can by another season easily procure from the railroads the fare and one-third usually enjoyed by societies of this kind. After the attendance from outside points is once brought up to 200 the attractiveness of the meetings and exhibitions will easily keep it up to that figure. All that is necessary to make a regular attendant of a carnationist is to get him to one of these meetings; nothing unimportant will keep him away thereafter. There is no reason why the membership of this society should not be five times its present enrollment, and all that is needed to accomplish this is the proper effort by members, each in his own locality.

Retail men and commission men are quite as much interested in the welfare of the carnation as are the growers and should be well represented at these meetings to see that their end of the business receives proper attention. The silver cup offered by the society to the storemen should bring out an exhibit worthy of the prize and Buffalo will no doubt see the beginning of new life along this line.

Any grower who has an exhibit should not be deterred from bringing or sending it, for he may rest assured that it will receive proper attention. Exhibits must be prepaid and addressed to Chas. H. Keitsch, 481 Washington street, Buffalo, N. Y.

The meetings will be held in the Genesee Hotel and the exhibition in Morgan Hall, next door. ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

Credit and Collections.

I notice that the matters of credit and collections are not given the close attention in this trade which they should have and which they receive in most lines of business but I have recently been reminded that wholesalers are giving more thought to this subject and every one must have noted the increased frequency with which requests for "cash please" appear in the advertisements.

One would hardly believe that when a florist has credit he will buy almost anything reasonable which is set before him, accept the price, seldom question the quality and take liberal quantities, but just call him down and force him to pay cash and see what a different man he is; I know, for I have been wholesaling cut flowers for many years. You'll find that nothing is good enough and nothing cheap enough and he'll only buy what he can't do without.

Now from this standpoint one would say that the commission man who has the most capital and can give the largest credits can make the best returns to his growers, but this is not always true; the returns depend on the salesman. The commission man must sell to those who pay the highest price and if the buyer has no credit he must get cash or ship C. O. D. if the stock goes out of town. But this is drifting away from the point I started out to make.

There are not a few buyers who have credit who become wrathy, almost insulted, when you ask them to pay. They do not stop to think that it is not their money you are asking for, but your own. Buyers seem to forget that the commission man must pay his growers on demand, that brokers only represent the stock on hand and that as soon as a sale is made the producer must get his money. Why in common justice should a debtor, be he either wholesaler, retailer or consumer, feel insulted at a request for payment? I have seen a deal of this lately. If you have bills that are due, think of the last time the collector called; I hope the shoe doesn't fit.

ROSES.

TEMPERATURE OF WATER.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—What is the best temperature of water with which to syringe roses? READER.

The best temperature of water for syringing roses is the temperature of the house at the time the plants are to be sprayed with the water, and taking the average of the temperature of a rose house in the early morning (which is the best time to syringe) at say 60°, then the water should be at 58° to 60°. In this condition it is much more congenial to the plants than when several degrees colder. On the other hand if the water is much warmer than the natural atmosphere of the house it has a tendency to make the foliage soft, which leaves it very susceptible to mildew and kindred troubles. JOHN N. MAY.

AMERICAN BEAUTY AT NATICK, MASS.

Mr. Montgomery says that American Beauty has done very well with him this season. The plants have set buds better than usual, a possible explanation of this being the bright weather that has prevailed most of the time. They are now receiving a light mulching to encourage the new growth that is starting after the cutting of the heavy Christmas crop.

All the American Beauties on this place are grown on benches this year. They are also all grafted stock and a portion of them are two years old. Benches are preferred because the plants are more easily handled and are not so liable to produce the enormously thick canes with flat headed buds that come from plants in deep beds. Second year plants are especially satisfactory in their behavior this year, setting bud much better than the one-year stock. Before transplanting last summer, these roses were allowed to dry down and given a week or two of rest and the canes were cut back to within eight inches of the bed.

Mr. Montgomery's experience is that grafted stock is less liable to run to blind wood than is the case with own-root plants. His theory, however, is that much of the blind-wood trouble can be avoided by careful selection of the cuttings, propagating only from plants that flower evenly and rejecting the long twenty-foot canes which are likely to produce plants of like character. When such growths are made the only resort is to keep the beds on the dry side, with an abundance of air, for a period, and bend the canes a little so as to check the flow of sap. The plan of cooling down sufficiently to stop the growth and then starting them on again after a rest, which worked successfully with Mr. Asmus last season, has been tried here but the results were not satisfactory.

One of Weathered's new No. 12 sectional boilers is just being set up and great efficiency is expected of it.

The Fruit and Flower Men.

Each one of us would like to be
A horticulturist,
If we could get the fruits we want
In seasons when they're missed.
Big strawberries we then would have,
And feast on them all year,
As well as all the other fruits
That often are so dear.

And each of us would like to be
A floriculturist,
If we could get the flowers we love
By turning of the wrist.
The choicest roses we would have,
And cull them every day,
As well as all the other blooms
That now so soon decay.

But as we find we cannot be Exactly what we would,
And, furthermore, as it's too late
To change so if we could,
The next best thing that we can do
Is just to cultivate
A friendship with these men and hope
That they'll reciprocate.

So to the horticulturists
Now in convention here,
And to the noted florists who
As delegates appear,
The warmest greetings we extend,
And earnestly we call
On loyal citizens to give Fond welcome to them all.

And as their stay is limited—
They'll just remain two days—
Let all who have the time turn out,
And at them throw bouquets.
Let every man who yearly digs
A garden in his lot
Contribute, if he can't give more,
A sweet forget-me-not.

Perhaps from seeds thus freely sown
A harvest we shall reap
In friendship which will show itself
In prices that are cheap.
But, whether this be so or not,
We now join in salutes
To those who cheer their fellowmen
With flowers and with fruits.

BUSINESS BRISK.—SHORT SUPPLY OF STOCK.—PRICES STIFFEN.—HORTICULTURISTS MEET.—EXHIBITION AT AMERICAN INSTITUTE.—DEATH OF JAMES NEAL.—JOTTINGS HERE AND THERE.

A very refreshing activity that reminds one forcibly of the good old times, pervades the wholesale districts. Considering that we are now right in the middle of the flower-buying season, the volume of business done is, however, far short of what it might be without being notably extravagant and the exact reason for this is not apparent. The activity now noted is undoubtedly due more to the decreased production than to extraordinary demand and is likely to continue at the present rate until the houses are in bearing once more.

Roses are, naturally enough, in this emergency graded considerably higher than at seasons of normal supply and values are well stiffened up. It is noticeable that the medium grades are snapped up with more eagerness than the fancy stock and it is not an infrequent occurrence to see buyers chasing around for four or five-dollar stock in Brides and Bridesmaids when the wholesalers have nothing to offer except the twelve or fifteen-dollar kind. Beauties are very much off crop. All sizes are advanced fully fifty per cent in quotations and they sell at sight instead of loafing around as they did not long since.

Carnations are up somewhat, in sympathy with the roses, but seem to be coming in in sufficient quantity for daily calls. There are signs that the trouble on violets is over, at least until after Valentine's Day as the growers are now holding back a little for that event and the surplus is not so unmanageable. Cattleyas are selling well, lilacs have improved also and with the slacking up on bulbous flowers of the smaller kinds comes a trifling advance in rates.

The fourth annual meeting of the Eastern New York Horticultural Society, opening on Wednesday of this week, was largely attended by fruit growers and others. There were numerous interesting papers and discussions. The American Institute exhibition, in connection with the horticultural society's meeting, brought out a fine display of orchids from Lager & Hurrell, carnations from C. G. Hayden and George M. Hay, violets from Thomas Talbot, J. W. Feeter and others, Liberty roses from E. G. Asmus, and other good exhibits.

James B. Neal (Neal, The Florist) put an end to his earthly career by drinking a quantity of carbolic acid on Monday, in Central Park, Washington, Chicago and San Francisco papers "please copy."

Thos. H. Davis, associated with H. A. Bunyard in business, is sick with typhoid fever at the Presbyterian Hospital.

Thos. Young, Jr., is receiving a fine lot of gardenias daily. Philadelphia, Chicago and other suburbs get a few of them.

The annual ball of the Monmouth County, N. J., Horticultural Society will be held on February 22.

J. M. Keller is supplying the stores with some very finely grown plants of Bougainvillea Sanderiana.

Alex. S. Burns has purchased three acres of land at Spring Valley, including five greenhouses filled with carnations, violets and mignonette.

MONTHLY MEETING OF THE CLUB.—AN ESSAY ON ROSE PROSPECTS AND POSSIBILITIES.—AN INTERESTING DISCUSSION.—VIEWS OF VARIOUS GROWERS.—RETAILERS TAKE ISSUE.—REASONS FOR SHORT LIST OF ROSES.—STATE OF THE MARKET.

The February meeting of the Florists' Club was very interesting and lively to a degree. There are times when from the rap of President Harris' gavel to the monotonous "move we adjourn" of one of the tired ones in front, there is scarcely excitement worth the car fare. This Tuesday evening, however, it was different. Mr. May's paper on "What has the Twentieth Century in Store for the Queen of Flowers?" proved to be a song of the thistle and the rose, with the emphasis on the rose. The essay was excellent but we forbear discussion, as it is to be published broadcast, in the hope that it will be read by every retail florist in the land and educate him up to the growers' idea of the possibilities there are in retailing roses. The discussion which followed brought out some interesting points. The fact that there are but four standard varieties of fancy roses, Beauty, Bride, Bridesmaid and Meteor, seemed to be acknowledged by both growers and retailers, but the reason that the many other excellent and beautiful kinds introduced from time to time and meeting with more or less favor were not added to the regular list, was a matter of opinion, the growers laying the blame on the retail dealers, which these gentlemen indignantly disputed. Mr. May was of the opinion, referring to the New York storekeepers, that they were opposed to new roses because each new applicant for favor means another twenty-five roses to be carried in stock, in addition to the twenty-five each of the standard sorts that the average dealer starts the day with. They discourage every attempt to introduce new varieties and put off customers who desire them in various ways. Edwin Lonsdale said he thought Mr. May was right; the fault lay with the dealer, who would not pay for new things anything like their value, which so discourages growers that they are afraid to venture out of the beaten path.

Mr. Durlee, of Washington, has solved the question to his own satisfaction. He does not grow Bridesmaids or Brides. Mme. Chatenay and Golden Gate are, he finds, much more profitable; they produce very many more flowers to the square foot of table space than do the old sorts and the demand in the store is at nearly all times greater than he can supply. He said the way to solve the problem in Philadelphia is for three or four of the large growers to get together and fill their houses with these and choice sorts other than Bride and Bridesmaid, then get a large store and knock "splithereens" out of the retailers, as there was no question but that the general public would flock to them. He spoke very highly of Ivory, the white sport from Golden Gate. He also said that Golden Gate should be left on the plants a little longer than the other teas and the buds would grow to a much larger size and still last a long time when cut.

John Burton said he thought things had come to a dreadful state when people measure their roses by the yard and the chief qualification is size. Has the American public so degenerated in its tastes that they can find no beauty in a flower unless it is as large as a cabbage? He believed not, he thought there were many beautiful roses that they would prefer if they could only see them. The list should be greatly enlarged. Where is the Perle? It is a beautiful rose and yet it is not to be found. What is the matter? There is certainly a screw loose somewhere.

Robert Craig said over-production was the main trouble. Prices on the standard roses are so low that new applicants for public favor have a hard time of it; the dealers will not pay more than prevailing prices and as many beautiful new roses prove not as profitable to grow as the older kinds, they are dropped. He used to sell 40,000 young Perle roses each season when the rose was in the race, but now there is no demand at all. Mr. Heacock said there is only one rose and that is the Beauty. He grows the four standards but will likely drop one of these next season and grow more Beauties because the business with him is not sentiment; he is after what gives most returns and finds them in the Beauty.

Mr. Cartledge said the lack of variety in roses is no fault of the retailers, for they are always willing to pay for good stock of any kind and would be glad to see the rose list considerably extended. Novelty is what is wanted and people are always willing to pay for a good thing. Robt. Kift also spoke in the same strain. He said that if the retailer wants to get anything out of the ordinary he has to hire a grower to grow it for him and guarantee him as much money out of the space occupied as he could get from his best crop. There was not a word said about carnations, which now bring prices unthought of years ago, while rose prices are declining. The speaker asked Mr. May why the Perle and other old time favorites had dropped out and he could give no certain reason. The discussion was much enjoyed and, while there was nothing approaching a solution of the problem, no doubt some seed was sown that will grow and blossom in the future.

A number of gentlemen were elected to membership, among them David Scott, of Buffalo. David is all right and we are glad to extend the hand of fellowship to him. "The Begonia as a Commercial Plant," by Edwin Lonsdale, is to be the March essay.

Business is still quiet. There are plenty of flowers for the demand, all lines seeming full and some running over. The four-foot Beauty is having quite a time to get along nowadays. It would seem as if the public are getting tired of these ulster stemmed roses. They are all very well for extra occasions and for the swain who wants the very best, but the every-day buyer or the regular run of trade seems to be satisfied with thirty to thirty-six inch stems. Growers will please take notice and "educate" themselves to the changed situation and drift of the demand. Prices are about the same as last week, a little weaker if anything. K.

ROSE CUT AT LOWEST EBB.—STOCKS CLEANED OUT.—DEMAND NOT HEAVY.—SUPPLY IN OTHER LINES.—PRIZE DAY AT HORTICULTURAL HALL.—FINE EXHIBITS.—MONEY IN THE SOCIETY'S TREASURY.—A LECTURE.—MARKET GARDENERS MEET AT WAVERLEY.—VARIOUS ITEMS AND VISITORS.

Receipts of roses have been cut down to the lowest notch during the past week. All varieties are decidedly off crop. A small box suffices to hold the day's cut from some quite pretentious establishments and the wholesalers' ice chests that have not been emptied before for weeks are as bare as Mother Hubbard's cupboard. It is generally accepted that if the cut flower demand was as brisk as it should be to average well with past seasons there would be plenty of fun with rose prices just now, but business lacks the activity which belongs to it at the height of the mid-winter season and there is an unaccountable dullness all along the line. Carnations are not so scarce as are roses, there being just about enough for the legitimate call. Violets are over abundant and prices below the average. Bulbous stock is in full supply, narcissi and tulips improving in quality daily and lily of the valley much better than it was but selling cheap. The stores are well supplied with the little odds and ends that are always so popular with the Boston buyers, such as marguerites, yellow primroses, corn flowers, coreopsis and pansies. A little acacia is seen occasionally. Callas are very plentiful with prices low. The market seems oversupplied with azalea plants of rather inferior quality. Weather fairly cold but not a scrap of snow.

Saturday, February 3, being the regular prize day of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, brought out a superb exhibition of orchid blooms. First premium was won by E. O. Orpet, with a very extensive collection of cattleyas, odontoglossums, cypripediums, lælias and cœlogynes, and second by J. E. Rothwell, with an equally fine lot, but of lesser extent, including some of the best phalænopsis spikes ever shown here. James Brydon brought a stunning plant of Cattleya Trianæ bearing twenty-five flowers. There was a large display of carnations, including most of the later novelties, from M. A. Patten, also collections of violets of a much finer grade than generally seen here, from Norris F. Comley, James Comley and Alex. McKay, N. F. Comley taking first prize. Primroses from W. E. Coburn, orchids from H. A. Wheeler, camellias from James Comley, narcissi from James Anderson, acacia from J. L. Bird, cut flowers from Mrs. Gill and primula plants from Mrs. J. L. Gardner were among the other attractions and the vegetable forcers exhibited high skill in contributions of tomatoes, radishes and other appetizing things.

The annual report of the treasurer of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which was presented at the monthly meeting on Saturday, February 3, showed a surplus of $434,631. There are 650 life members and 199 annual members. Eight new members were admitted at this meeting.

A very interesting lecture was given by Miss Mira L. Dock, of Harrisburg, Pa., in Horticultural Hall on January 27, her subject being the "Procession of Flowers in Pennsylvania." Numerous beautiful stereoptican illustrations were made use of and the various pictures excellently described by the lecturer to the large audience.

E. F. Atkins has established a new fellowship of $1500 at Harvard University to further the study of certain unfamiliar plants that may become useful in commerce. Research work in the East Indies is now under way.

The Market Gardeners' Association held its last regular meeting at the greenhouses of E. N. Pierce at Waverley. The care, construction and heating of greenhouses was the subject for discussion and Mr. Pierce's establishment served as an object lesson. A nice collation was served.

John D. Twombly is just recovering from a severe case of appendicitis which has confined him to his bed for six weeks.

STATE OF TRADE.—ROSES SCARCE AND HIGH.—POOR LILAC AND HARRISII.—LOSSES BY FIRE.—OTHER NOTES.

There has been a slight improvement in business the past week. In roses Bride and Bridesmaid are becoming scarce and range in price up to $15 per hundred. There is only a fair demand for American Beauty. Carnations are a little more plentiful, but the finer grades clean up pretty well. Bulbous stock becomes more plentiful daily, but prices are well sustained. Lilac is not good, but Harrisii have improved somewhat; they are badly diseased, but bring as high as $25 per hundred.

Wm. Erminhouse, 2903 Perrysville avenue, suffered a loss of about $3,000 through fire in his greenhouse last week. Thos. McGowen, of East End avenue, also suffered by fire during our cold snap last week. W. A. Herbert, of Wellsville, Ohio, had considerable bedding stock destroyed by frost.

Oswald Ferguson, son of J. B. Ferguson, has gone on a trip to Philadelphia and the suppositions are that he will return with a bride.

The death of Fred Beckert, son of E. H. Beckert, occurred last week.

BUSINESS GOOD DESPITE UNFAVORABLE WEATHER.—SHIPPING ORDERS HEAVY.—SCHILLER INVALIDED AND WILL DISPOSE OF GREENHOUSES.—MONINGER'S RECORD FOR LAST YEAR.—CLUB MEETING.—THE CARNATION PARTY.—KLEHMS FORCING THEIR OWN VALLEY PIPS.—CYCLAMENS FROM CINCINNATI.—VARIOUS JOTTINGS OF INTEREST.—VISITORS.

Trade has been lively this week and the scarcity of stock has not been much less pronounced than last week, although rose cuts have increased somewhat and prices have eased off a little. There are a great many carnations on the market, some of them very good, and they nearly all move promptly. Violets have been in better favor with warmer weather and bulbous stock, which is both good and plentiful, goes better, nearly all the retailers using this class of material for their show windows. Shipping trade is heavy.

Herman Schiller is suffering from the effects of an accident on January 16, when his wagon was struck by an electric car. Mr. Schiller was thrown against a telegraph pole but retained possession of the reins and was dragged two-thirds of a block before his horse could be stopped. He has not been himself since and has moved to town from Niles Center. Because of his physical incapacity to look after the big greenhouses Mr. Schiller has determined to sacrifice the establishment to get it off his hands, but he will, in the event of his selling the greenhouses, continue to run his three retail stores on the west side.

To give an idea of the extent of greenhouse building last year it is stated that the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, supplied the material for entirely new structures which, placed end to end, would make a continuous house 47,000 feet long and that this house would cover an area slightly in excess of 970,000 square feet. The Moninger Company expects to do even more than that amount of building this year.

The Florists' Club at its last meeting elected seven new members, transacted routine business and listened to several of the gentlemen who are oratorically inclined. At the next session there will be a discussion as to the advisability of inviting the S. A. F. to meet here next year.

Chicago will probably be represented at the Buffalo carnation meeting next week by W. N. Rudd, Peter Reinberg, Henry Wietor, Jas. Hartshorne, J. D. Thompson and O. P. Bassett. The party expects to leave on the Wabash at 3:15 Wednesday afternoon.

Herman Holtz, of Hammond, Ind., has purchased one-half the stock of the new scarlet seedling carnation, Carter Harrison, which originated with Herman Streening while he was located at Roselawn. Mr. Streening is now gardener to M. M. Towle, at Hammond.

Klehms' Nurseries are now sending considerable quantities of their Novelty tulip to Kennicotts' and also some splendid lily of the valley forced from pips of their own growing. They have been growing pips for several years with only medium success but now seem to be on the right track.

McKellar & Winterson are selling a fine lot of cyclamens from J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati. The plants are well flowered and move readily at from $6 to $12 a dozen.

E. J. Batcheler, recently with Jno. N. Kellenberger, of Fort Dodge, Iowa, is now traveling for McKellar & Winterson and Albert Fuchs.

The Invalid Appliance Company reports that there is already a lively spring call for their plant tubs.

Halle's windows are a bright spot on West Madison street, but for the matter of that all the retailers on that thoroughfare make pretty fine showings these days.

S. Blair Winter on Monday sat up for the first time in five months. He expects to be about again shortly.

The boy is growing so fast and so comely that Gus Lange thinks he will have to go to Paris this year to buy clothes for him.

W. N. Rudd left last Monday evening for New Orleans to gather strength for the coming meeting at Buffalo of carnation experts.

Oechslin Bros., of the Garfield Park Flower Co., have a big stock of ferns and are getting some nice wholesale orders.

Geo. M. Garland has put a section of his iron gutter on exhibition at McKellar & Winterson's.

F. F. Benthey and his wife celebrated their silver wedding last Monday.

Visitors: J. A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.; Michael Bloy, of Denver, Col.; E. G. Eggeling, St. Louis; Herman Holtz, Hammond, Ind.; Albert Knopp, Columbus, O.; L. J. Stuppy, St. Joseph, Mo.; Henry Faber, Kankakee, Ill.

FRESH GOSSIP OF THE CAPITAL CITY.—SOME MORE GOOD DECORATIONS.—TRADE GOOD.—A NEW STORE AND A CLUB.—ROOTING CHAMÆDOREAS.

At the second bachelor's cotillion, at the National Rifles Armory, the decorations by J. H. Small & Sons were somewhat similar to the last, except that yellow and pink were the predominating colors, the draperies yellow and the flowers pink. Southern smilax and palm leaves were used with fine effect. The flower favors were Bridesmaid roses.

The congressional reception at the White House was another grand affair. The decorations as usual were very elaborate and admired very much. Noticeable on the Blue Parlor mantel was a fine specimen of Sphærogyne latifolia and two specimens of Cattleya Trianæ. More flowering plants were used than usual.

A. Gude & Bros'. new range of rose-houses are working very satisfactorily. They are planted with American Beauty, Golden Gate, Madame A. Chatenay and Meteor, with a few benches of carnations, which are in fine condition; in fact all their stock is looking very good. They have an extra fine lot of Nephrolepis Bostoniensis, an Cypripedium insigne with good flowers.

The retail cut flower trade was very good the past week, but on account of the cold weather business was very dull in the markets. Roses are scarce, but carnations, violets and bulbous stock are plentiful.

J. Shine and J. D. Davidson, formerly with J. L. Loose, have opened a stand in Center Market, doing business as Shine & Davidson.

Some of the younger florists met January 24 and organized a club, electing O. A. C. Oehmler, president, and J. Shine, secretary. The other officers will be elected at their next meeting.

I do not think it is generally known that chamædoreas can be rooted up near the crown, when they get tall and unsightly, by making an incision in the stem about six or eight inches below the lower leaves and placing some fibrous peat and moss around it and keeping it moist; when the roots show through the moss take a 4 or 5-inch pot, split it in two, clasp it around the moss and fill it with light soil. This will give you nice, sturdy plants, much finer than the seedlings. Henry Pfister has been very successful lately with Chamædorea elegans, and is trying C. Ernestii and others. P. G.

TRADE VERY GOOD BUT STOCK HARD TO GET.—BULBOUS MATERIAL IN DEMAND.—A LADIES' NIGHT PLANNED.—ON TO BUFFALO.—A CUT FLOWER EXCHANGE.—A NEW GROWER.

Flowers of all kinds have been very scarce during the past three weeks. Retailers whose trade has been generally good and in some cases extra fine have been seeking relief from distant markets but there, too, the same conditions seem to exist. The prices for everything good obtainable have ruled very much higher than is usual at this season of the year. At the present time very fine roses are hard to get at any price and but few Beauties are carried in stock by anyone. Bulbous stock is beginning to come in quite plentifully and is eagerly sought by the retailer and quickly disposed of. Violets are good and in fair supply while the demand for them is brisk and daily increasing.

At the club meeting on Wednesday evening arrangements were made for an entertainment in the near future, designed especially for the pleasure of the ladies, who have been looking forward to such an event for some time. Ten members signified their intention of attending the carnation meeting at Buffalo next week. Geo. A. Rackham is trying hard to make the party as large as possible and will make a strong effort to bring the meeting to Detroit next season. The party will leave here Wednesday evening on the Wabash.

A movement is on foot to establish a cut flower exchange in this city; Wm. Dilger is to be the manager. The idea at present is to make it a stock company, enlisting the support of the local growers and retailers, but consignments and orders will be solicited from all parts. A complete stock of florists' supplies will be kept and all the requisites of a throughly equipped wholesale house are contemplated. The project is taking favorably and it is expected active operations will commence soon.

Louis C. Nall, formerly with C. H. Plumb, will build three houses each 25x100 feet, four miles out from the city; 16x16 butted glass will be used on cypress sash bars; hot water will be the system of heating and the houses devoted to growing roses and carnations.

BUSINESS BRIGHTENS UP.—ROSES VERY SCARCE.—A BURGLARY.—A CRACK SHOT MEETS GRIEF.

Business the past week brightened up very perceptibly but all kinds of stock were sufficient to meet the demand, with the exception of roses. They have been scarcer than at any time during the winter. At the Cincinnati Cut Flower Company's a few vases of the Novelty tulip were seen from George & Allan. While Mr. Allan and family were absent from home one day last week their house was burglarized. The thief was later captured and duly locked up, and to Mr. Allen's surprise he identified the man as a former employe, who is known to the police as Texas Jack. He wore Mr. Allan's shoes at the time of his arrest.

Sidney Murphy, who is known as a good shot in his neighborhood, was firing during the last cold snap and an unwelcome visitor to the greenhouse was a tomcat. His musical strains, as they floated through the quiet night air, was more than Sidney could stand. He armed himself with a shot gun and proceeded to the greenhouse gutter where Mr. Tom was holding forth. A sure shot laid the chorister low, but what a surprise awaited Sidney on his return to the greenhouses! He found glass scattered in every direction; not less than 135 panes were broken.

With much regret did we learn of the death of Mrs. Joseph Hill, mother of E. G. Hill. Mrs. Hill was well known to the florists of this vicinity and the bereaved family has our sympathy.

UNFAVORABLE WEATHER.—STOCK INFERIOR AND TRADE LIGHT.—ANNUAL DINNER OF THE GARDENERS AND FLORISTS.—AN OCCASION OF UNSURPASSED ENJOYMENT.

The weather we have been having here lately, and in fact all winter, has been the worst on record for the production of good flowers and in consequence the stock seen in the stores is very inferior in quality, with the exception of bulbous material, which is about as good as usual. Romans do not seem to be so much in demand as usual and in consequence there is an oversupply. Daffodils are rather scarce yet and what we have seen are inferior in quality. Carnations and roses are in fair supply but both very weak in the stem. Business is dull for the season, owing in a great measure to restlessness occasioned by the South African war. The absence of big social affairs is very much felt by the store-keepers. Funeral business is the only standby, and has been fairly brisk this winter, notwithstanding the occasional addition to a funeral notice of the dreaded phrase, "please omit flowers."

The annual banquet of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club took place at McHugh's popular Hotel Lachine, fifty members and guests participating. It was a grand success in every way. The ride out and back in special trolley cars was very enjoyable and after the splendid menu provided in McHugh's best style, good speeches, songs and recitations were on the programme. All those present agreed that it was unsurpassed by any previous social gathering of the club. Among the many beautiful plants which graced the table was a gigantic cyclamen, grown by Thos. McHugh, having over 200 expanded flowers. It was unanimously agreed that the club's certificate of merit be awarded the grower.

NO CHANGE IN THE TRADE SITUATION.—SORROW AT THE DEMISE OF AN OLD COMRADE.—MUCH FUNERAL WORK.

There is very little change from last week in the condition of the cut flower market. The weather has become decidedly warmer and stock is just a little more plentiful, but not enough to supply the demand. Prices remain about the same. American Beauties seem almost out of the question.

The death of John M. Jordan has caused profound sorrow among the craft. Mr. Jordan was loved and respected by all who knew him. The florists attended his funeral in a body and the Florist's Club sent a large and handsome floral design.

There were a large number of designs sent to the funeral of Charles Mebus, the fireman who lost his life at the great fire on Sunday. All the florists had a share of the work.

PLANS FOR CARNATION MEETING COMPLETE — WM. SCOTT TO DISCONTINUE HIS DOWN-TOWN STORE.—VARIOUS JOTTINGS.

The Florists' Club held a meeting Wednesday evening at which all the preparations for the carnation meeting were completed. Any exhibits consigned here in care of Chas. H Keitsch, 481 Washington street, will be provided for carefully. The use of Morgan Hall has been secured for the days preceding the exhibition.

Wm. Scott has decided to give up his down-town store early next month. The change will make the rest of us feel lonesome, but the change is a wise one, as the business can be handled more expeditiously from the greenhouses. Anyway, it seems trade is gradually moving up town.

Trade shows an improvement this week, but a large part of the increase is in funeral work.

MEETING OF THE FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.—SHOW COMMITTEES REPORT LITTLE PROGRESS.—VARIOUS PERSONAL JOTTINGS.

At the meeting of the State Florists' Association on February 6 reports were to have been received from the various show committees but instead the chairmen of the different committees offered excuses for their inactivity; all promised, however, to do a great deal of hustling during the next month. Henry Rieman, of the executive committee, made a strong but unsuccessful attempt to resign; it took all the eloquence of all members to persuade him that his services were indispensable. The secretary read a letter from Mr. Stuart, of Anderson, in which he thanked the association for its sympathy. Mr. Stuart is recovering rapidly and will be able to attend to business in the near future. Sydney Smith passed the evening very pleasantly sitting on Junge's stiff hat.

Robt. McKeand's usual jovial countenance looks quite sad; he is subsisting on liquid food, while his chewing apparatus is undergoing repairs.

About ten Indianapolis florists will visit Richmond Saturday, some of them going on to Cincinnati.

We are all very sorry to hear that Ernst Huckriede is seriously ill with pneumonia.

John Grande is the happy father of another son.

Mr. Hill, of Richmond, was present at Tuesday night's meeting.

TRADE GOOD AND STOCK SHORT.—PARTY FOR THE CARNATION MEETING.—VARIOUS ITEMS.

The cold snap we have been having has caused the supply of flowers to shorten up, which combined with a very fair amount of business makes everything worth having decidedly scarce. Roses bring from 4 cents to 8 cents; carnations, which have been slightly off both in quality and quantity since the holidays, bring on an average about 2 cents. All sorts of bulbous stock are now in, and the quality is very good.

The local delegation to the carnation meeting at Buffalo does not promise to be very large. Those who are reasonably certain to attend are H. A. Hart, J. M. Gasser, A. Graham, A. Schmitt and S. N. Pentecost. There may be a few more later, but not many.

Mr and Mrs. James Eadie left last Wednesday for a prolonged trip to California by way of New Orleans and El Paso, returning by way of Denver, Salt Lake City and Chicago.

John Barclay, representing Vaughan's Seed Store, and Joseph Rolker, of A. Rolker & Sons, have been recent visitors.

A.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Emil Leuba, who left Aurora, Ill., December 29 without making known his destination, is now employed in this city.

TRENTON, N. J.—Wm. L. Marshall, manager for the Trenton Floral Company, drank carbolic acid on January 27. No cause can be assigned for the act.

OMAHA, NEB.—The Florists' Club meetings are increasing in interest and the organization is gaining members through the question box, which is now the leading feature of each session.

KEWANEE, ILL.—Hamilton & Plummer have sold a one-third interest in their business to Claude M. Hamilton, who has been with the firm since the start. There will be no change in the firm name.

PLANTSVILLE, CONN.—G. W. Matthews, who has for some months conducted the Quinnipiac Valley Greenhouses for Mrs. J. C. Pultz, has secured a lease of the property and will conduct the business in his own name hereafter.

ELIZABETH, N. J.—One night last summer a switch engine on the New Jersey Central railroad shoved a number of cars off the track and into the greenhouses of Henry Leahy, who sued for damages. He has been given a judgment for $1,000.

STAFFORD SPRINGS, CONN.—The Stafford Floral Co. are negotiating for the purchase of the three large greenhouses which were recently erected on the roof of a building in Springfield but which have been ordered removed by the insurance company.

AMERICAN FLORIST CO., CHICAGO.

THERE were 2268 brands of commercial fertilizers registered under the law of New York in 1899.

THERE will be larger stocks of flowering plants than ever before for Easter, but doubtless not enough.

THE city of Berlin has set aside the sum of 2000 marks for the purchase of plants to be placed in the hospitals.

THE production of cuttings of Mrs. Bradt carnation will be much more nearly equal to the demand than was the case last year.

IT takes an analytical and philosophical mind to understand the glass situation in this twilight year of the century, according to a contemporary.

OUR issue of February 17 will contain a full report of the annual meeting and exhibition of the American Carnation Society. Advertisements intended for this issue should reach us early in the week.

IN the advertisement of the Lakeview Rose Gardens, Jamestown, N. Y., in our issues of January 27 and February 3, Bride roses were quoted at $1.20 per hundred when the price should have been $1.50.

THE Journal des Roses lists 85 new roses sent out in 1899, 33 teas, 26 hybrid teas, 10 hybrid remontants, 6 noisettes, 6 polyanthas and 4 miscellaneous. France produced 61 varieties, Luxembourg 12, Germany 6, England 5 and Holland 1.

AN international chrysanthemum congress will be held at Paris by the National Society of Horticulture in France in 1900, says Le Semaine Horticole. It will be held at the same time as the special exhibition of chrysanthemums in the fall, in the Palace of Horticulture at the Exposition.

ACCORDING to La Semaine Horticole there is a great future in store for the new Ficus Eetveldiana as an ornamental plant. It comes from the Congo region of Africa and is stated to be very vigorous, branching close to the ground and carrying very large leaves, which are nearly as broad as they are long.

MR. BRIDGEMAN, of Blue Island, Ill., has a resurrection plant which he is able to state positively has been in his possession since 1874. It expands and colors up as quickly to-day as any ordinary specimen, although it has been packed away in a dry state during the greater part of the twenty-five years which have elapsed since he received it.

Overhead Heating.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—How does overhead heating compare with heating by pipes placed underneath benches? Our greenhouse boiler is on the same level as the benches and we cannot obtain necessary circulation, but with the pipes overhead, nearer the roof, perhaps it could be improved. J. J.

While there is some advantage in having one or more of the heating pipes near the glass to aid in melting the snow and frost and in taking the chill from the air before it reaches the plants, the principal advantage to "J. J." would be in aiding the circulation, as the higher the pipes the more rapid the flow of the water. For houses twenty feet wide it is often desirable to use three 2 or 2½-inch flow pipes, upon the purlin and ridge posts, and have most or all of the return pipes upon the walls, as near the plates as possible. Where the houses are long, a single flow pipe of larger size, placed just beneath the ridge, often gives the best results when the boiler is above the level of the floor of the house. L. R. T.

Spiraeas for Easter.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please state how and when spiræas should be started for Easter flowering? Give also the treatment the plants should receive after starting. H. N.

Spiræas should be kept in a cool house under the bench, ready to place in a higher temperature about nine weeks before Easter. After starting, the plants should never be allowed to get dry and they should be syringed regularly and frequently until the flowers begin to show color. W. T.

Asparagus Plumosus.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I have a solid bed of Asparagus plumosus and would like to remove the plants to another house, dividing them. To what extent should they be dried off before moving? J.

In transplanting asparagus I make it a rule to dry it off as much as possible, in fact one cannot get it too dry. The plants can then be divided more easily and with less injury to the roots; they will also start into growth a great deal quicker, and make stronger shoots.

W. H. ELLIOTT.

Catalogues and Catalogues.

The annual deluge of catalogues is now in full rush. They are coming in by sixes and by dozens; modest little two page folders and great big gorgeous fellows, with jackets bearing all the colors of the rainbow; catalogues accurately illustrated with half tone cuts and those filled with impossible wood cut monstrosities; catalogues full of glaring, baretaced lies and catalogues quietly and seductively deceptive—and some honest ones; good paper and printing and bad; all these are coming to hand in every mail.

However, we did not start out to lecture the trade on the moral aspects of the catalogue question, nor from the artistic point of view. For years past, and the present season is no exception, numbers of the catalogues, especially in the wholesale line, are filled with abominable examples of how not to spell even common horticultural names. Selecting at random, one from a number of these catalogues we find such atrocities as rubbeckia, dieltyra, philox, popaver—about ten names mispelled in a total list of about sixty odd. The list in question is nicely printed on excellent paper, and is in all respects well gotten up except in the spelling.

Aside from the feeling of disgust which every well informed person fells at such an exhibition, there is a very serious commercial side to the question. In buying seeds and plants, one naturally wishes to have them true to name, as well as of good quality. If the list is that of a firm with whom one has not dealt the question that at once arises is, Will not so careless or ignorant a firm be also equally careless or ignorant as to the purity of their stocks or the truthfulness to name of their plants? Here is an element of repulsion and doubt which undoubtedly results in the loss of many prospective good customers.

It is all so needless, too. If one is in such financial condition that he can not afford to expend a dollar or two for any one of the many books which will keep him in the path of virtue, so far as spelling is concerned, there are the catalogues of a dozen leading concerns who pride themselves on their accuracy in this respect, to be had for the asking.

Some Recent Fires.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—A fire in the greenhouses of J. M. Sullivan & Co., on the morning of January 27, caused a damage of $100.

NYACK, N. Y.—Fire in the Lynch greenhouses caused considerable damage to stock in one house on the night of January 26.

CHATHAM, N. J.—Fire inflicted a small loss upon Harvey J. Lichtenwalter at about 2 a. m., January 27. For a time it looked as though the high wind would make it impossible to save any portion of the greenhouses.

MADISON, N. J.—Three greenhouses, belonging to Miss Alice Green, were destroyed by fire on the night of Thursday, January 25. The boiler house and potting shed were consumed and the plants in the greenhouses were ruined by water and freezing.

NEWARK, N. J.—At about five o'clock on the morning of February 2 fire destroyed the house, barn and greenhouses of P. W. L. Strom, in the Township of Acquackonack, across the Passaic county line. As there is no fire protection the loss was total, approximating $7,000, partly covered by insurance.

PADUCAH, KY.—Early on the morning of January 31 fire did $3,000 damage to the establishment of C. L. Brunson & Co. It is not certain how the fire originated, but when discovered the boiler room and office were all ablaze. Several of the greenhouses also went. Mr. Brunson states that he has partial insurance and will rebuild at once.

OBITUARY.

WM. FLANAGAN.

Word comes of the death of William Flanagan, of Providence, R. I. He was only 40 years of age, but had been in business nearly twenty years and was widely known. He had no family.

JOHN F. HICKEY.

John F. Hickey, who died at Denver on January 31, received his training at the establishment of the Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa., where he spent many years of his youth. Entering upon manhood, he married a Philadelphia girl and started for the west, finding service at Vaughan's greenhouses at Western Springs, Ill., where he filled the position of foreman for several years. On arriving at Denver about five years ago Mr. Hickey became foreman for H. H. Given and later assumed the same position with the Colfax Avenue Floral Co., remaining for about three years, when failing health caused him to determine to try the climate of Montana. After a few months at the establishment of Law Bros., at Butte, he returned to Denver, succumbing a few days after his return, to an attack of kidney trouble. He was 45 years of age and leaves a widow and one child.

JOHN M. JORDAN.

The earliest vice-president of the Society of American Florists, John M. Jordan, died at his residence in St. Louis, February 4, aged 70 years. Mr. Jordan had been in failing health for some considerable time past. He was well known to the trade, and had an extensive business in St. Louis for many years. He was a native of Vermont and took his early lessons in horticulture under Francis Brill, of Astoria, Long Island. In 1855 he married Miss Hannah Brill, who, with six children, three sons and three daughters, survives him. Soon after his marriage he moved to Bloomington, Ill., settling in St. Louis after the civil war. He served in the St. Louis city council and was an active worker in many social and fraternal organizations, including the Mercantile Club, Tuscan Lodge A. F. and A. M. and Ascalon Commandery, Knights Templar, Legion of Honor, Royal Arcanum and Sons of the Revolution. He was elected president of the S. A. F. at the Buffalo meeting in 1889, presiding at Boston the following year. In the able presidential address delivered in the latter city, he made use of the phrase, "lubricating the wheels of evolution," which retained talismanic power in the trade for many years after. The portrait on page 802 was prepared from an early photograph and is that perhaps from which he will be most easily recalled by his numerous friends throughout the country.

FOR SALE. A first-class greenhouse business about 80 miles from Chicago. Have 11,000 square feet of glass and considerable valuable ground. Located in central part of city of about 20,000 population makes the property quite high priced. Any live florist with small capital can purchase a fine range of glass very reasonably; doing a fine business. Can give long lease of ground with privilege of buying or will sell part of ground. Everything is as good as new and a bargain—a chance you won't often get. Good reasons for selling. Don't inquire unless you mean business. Ad's Florist, care Am. Florist.

New Haven, Conn.

Business has been very satisfactory for the last two weeks, carnations, roses and all bulbous stock being in good demand. Promenade week was a big success for all hands. The decorations were never more beautiful, more cut flowers being used than in former years. Violets were in great demand but the prices were cut to $1 and $1.50 per hundred. The armory presented a very pretty sight after Koster, the decorator of New York, and Champion, of New Haven, finished their task.

The uptown florists met last Friday night to form a sort of arrangement as to prices of all cut flowers up to March 1. It was also voted to close at 7 p. m., Monday and Saturday excepted.

A. J. Thompson, of West Haven, has recovered from his recent illness and is attending to business again.

The Malley dry goods store has opened a floral department.

Recent visitors: Walter Mott and S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia; Stephen Horan, of Bridgeport; S. E Banks, of Westport; Charles Schwake, of New York.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

THE onion set market is quiet and prices but little changed.

CARL CROPP, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, left for St. Louis on Thursday.

THE past month has been a very active one for contract growers of peas and beans.

LAST year Great Britain and Ireland imported grass and clover seeds to the value of 549,535 pounds sterling.

VISITED CHICAGO: Frederick S. Plant, of the Plant Seed Company, St. Louis; J. McHutchinson, representing Aug. Rhotert, New York.

S. Y. HAINES, now in charge of the putting up of the government seed orders at Washington, will return to his home in Minneapolis February 15.

NEW HYDE PARK, N. Y.—Burglars blew open the safe in the seed store of J. C. Baylis on the night of January 31 and secured $25 in cash and some papers.

RECENT advices from France are to the effect that the prospects for good crops are very favorable so far, with the exception of cabbages, which look very badly. The plants could not be set out until very late and a great many of them perished in consequence. The weather in the past four weeks has been very wet there.

ON February 1 a co-partnership was formed by Alex. Rennie and W. S. Pino to conduct a general seed and horticultural supply business under the firm name of Rennie & Pino, at Washington and Eddy streets, Providence, R. I. Mr. Pino has for several years been associated with Wm. Elliott & Sons, New York, and Mr. Rennie for the past twelve years with Hamlin Johnson & Co. and their successors, Walter A. Potter & Co., of Providence.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—This city was visited by a 2,000,000-dollar conflagration on February 4, four blocks of business houses being wiped out. Among the losers were the Schisler-Corneli Seed Company and the Plant Seed Company. The former's establishment was totally destroyed and they are reported to have lost $25,000 worth of stock but were fully insured. The loss on building was $15,000 but was also covered by insurance. The Plant Seed Company has sent a circular letter to the trade announcing that their loss was wholly by water, and that confined principally to one store. They state that they are open for business and prepared to fill all orders promptly.

FLOWER SEEDS FOR FLORISTS

We are the Largest Growers of Flower Seeds of any American seedsmen, both at FORDHOOK FARMS, where large areas of flowers are planted in the open ground and where greenhouses and protected frames are devoted to the finest Florists' flowers, and by our contract growers in the most favorable locations of California and other States. Not only are all these grown under our personal inspection, but frequent visits to the leading growers of Europe, combined with the most complete trials at FORDHOOK FARMS, where all our strains are tested each season in comparison with strains from other sources, enable us to know that our stocks of choice Florists' flowers are unsurpassed. They are equaled only in a few instances by specialists growing single varieties.

Both in Europe and America there are noted specialists growing a single variety of flower under the most favorable conditions, and our extended trials enable us to select the finest of these special products for our customers.

In the descriptive headings of the different flowers will be found suggestions as to the best varieties to plant for cut-flowers and to grow for flowering and ornamental potted plants for retail sales. We are glad to assist our customers at any time in the selection of the most suitable varieties for the above purposes, and shall cheerfully answer any inquiries in this line, from the experience gained in our extensive trials and familiarity with the cut-flower markets of Philadelphia and New York. We would request, however, that such inquiries be written separately from the order to secure prompt attention, as under our system the orders are filled at once on receipt and the answer to questions is somewhat delayed when written in the order.

It is hardly necessary for us to refer to the complete assortments of SWEET PEAS, PANSIES, and NASTURTIUMS offered by us, having so long held the leading position in these specialties. We can equally recommend our grand strains of ASTERS, BALSAMS, BEGONIAS, CINERARIAS, COLEUS, CYCLAMEN, DIANTHUS, GLOXINIA, HELIOTROPE, HOLLYHOCK, MIGNONETTE, PETUNIA, PHLOX, POPPIES, CHINESE PRIMROSES, STOCKS, SALVIA and VERBENAS, all of which are of the finest types and richest colorings, and especially desirable for Florists' planting.

All Flower Seeds are tested thoroughly, both for vitality and trueness to type, —just as thoroughly as are our Vegetable Seeds. There are so many "cheaply grown" California and European Flower Seeds upon the market that some of our prices may seem high—when for the quality, they are really moderate. Florists will find it more profitable to pay cash for BURPEE'S SEEDS, rather than to buy upon long credit, even at lower prices.

BURPEE'S BLUE LIST FOR 1900.

A complete catalogue giving lowest prices possible for Florists and Market Gardeners mailed free upon application. It is a book of 144 pages, giving much useful information and offering all the "Best Seeds that Grow."

The White Caryopteris.

The white form of Caryopteris Mastacanthus mentioned in a recent issue is by no means a novelty. I procured plants from a Long Island grower some three years ago, and the same season I procured seeds from a New York seed house. I see they still catalogue it in their seed list. It is not so showy, nor is it likely to prove such a favorite as the blue form; still it is worthy of a place in every collection. It commences to bloom about a month earlier than the blue variety, and as the season is then much warmer the flowers do not last so long. Unfortunately the severe winter of 1898-99 killed all our plants, so that from our experience, it is not so hardy as the blue, which escaped with the tops being partly killed back. JOHN W. DUNCAN.

A Dinner at Poughkeepsie.

The annual dinner of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society, on Wednesday evening, was an unqualified success. Over fifty were present, including the mayor and other prominent citizens. Messrs O'Mara, Henshaw, Weathered, Sheridan, Ward, Donlan and Stewart came up from New York. Richard Connell acted as toastmaster, but there was no prearranged programme. The repast was excellent and the music good. Numerous generous premiums were pledged for the next exhibition.

At New York.

Theo. Roehrs has been elected chairman and Chas. Schenck secretary of the local committee on the tournament to take place next August. E. Schultheis, Wm. Elliott and Emil Steffens are the special committee on the proposed shooting contest. Mr. McKnight, of Jersey City, has offered the use of his meadow for the shooters

The following scores were made on the Fifty-seventh street alleys last Monday evening:

Player	1st	2d	3d	Player	1st	2d	3d
Manda...	122	125	118	O'Mara....	146	178	157
Traendly...	114	129	102	Siebrecht.	166	148	108
Lang.....	158	163	164	Shaw.....	182	131	123
Burns.....	125	120	133	Hafner.....	157	147	102
Donlan....	122	143	131	Taylor.....		76	94

The first contest in the tournament between New York, Flatbush and Hudson County was a victory for Flatbush at West Hoboken on Wednesday evening. There was huge enjoyment and a hospitable supper was served. The next games will be rolled on New York alleys at three o'clock on next Wednesday afternoon.

At Philadelphia.

The national tournament is now on and there will be a great struggle to get on the team. President Harris is making great strides in that direction and it would not surprise us the least whit if he should "make" the team and put up another St. Louis score of 240 or even better. His average for three games a day or so ago was nearly 170. If this pace is kept he will soon be scratch man. David, the son of William, of Buffalo, is cutting great swathes on the alleys and is preparing himself in great style for next summer's contest. Our first team defeated the strong college team of the U. of P. last week by over 500 pins. Snowed 'em under, as it were. Below are the averages for the last three months for the first twenty-five members:

Hamilton	167	Smith	139
Moss	158	Baker	137
Connor	157	C. Craig	132

CLAIMING THE EARTH.

A local house in the Cut Flower commission business has acquired the habit of claiming everything in sight, as instanced in a recent advertisement of theirs in which they say: "We claim to be the oldest, most reliable and largest dealers in Cut Flowers in Chicago, and we can prove it."

Now we take exception to these claims of theirs; they are too broad and strong. There are several thoroughly reliable dealers in Cut Flowers in Chicago; we are one of them, our record proves it. If the claimant in question is MORE reliable than any other house here, we should like to have them prove it—as they say they can do.

Again, but a matter of no vital interest to us, they say that they are the "largest dealers in Cut Flowers in Chicago." We do not claim to be this; we probably are not even the largest commission dealers in Cut Flowers in Chicago; however, while they have their proofs handy, they might also prove this claim, as they say they can do.

They also claim to be the "oldest" dealers in Cut Flowers in Chicago. We do not consider them to be so; we certainly are not and we think another firm to be. They might also produce "proof" to support this claim.

Incidentally let us remark that we are wholesaling Cut Flowers on a commission basis, that our stocks are as good as any other firm's here, that we ship at current market rates, that we do not "scalp," that we are building up a rapidly growing business by close attention and honest effort, and that we CHALLENGE ANY FIRM in the Cut Flower business in Chicago to "prove" that they are more "reliable" than we are.

Azaleas.... for Easter

Although our stock of Azaleas this season is larger than ever, we strongly recommend early orders. Many of our customers were disappointed last year in not being able to procure stock several weeks before Easter, and we have taken more than ordinary precautions to prevent a repetition of this the coming season, but all indications are that the demand this year will be greater than ever, besides this the plants can be transported with so much greater satisfaction while they are still in a semi-dormant condition, that this point alone should be sufficient to induce early orders, for no matter how carefully packed, the plants are certain to receive some check when turned out of pots after the buds have developed, and we assume no responsibility for injuries arising from late shipments.

We can still supply full assortments in the following sizes:

		In. diam.	Per doz.	Per 100.
5-in. pots, nice bushy crowns,		10 to 12	$5.00	$40.00

Also a grand lot of specimen plants of Mad. Van der Cruysen of exceptionally good value at $1.50, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00 and $5.00 each.

GENEVIEVE LORD.

THE peer of any light pink Carnation ever offered to the trade. A commercial triumph. Its beautiful color, large size and its matchless length and stiffness of stem make it, beyond a doubt, the queen of its class. There is nothing like it. We offer it to the commercial grower as a money getter of the first magnitude.

As an exhibition flower, it ranks high. It will take care of itself in its class. It has carried off the highest honors wherever shown. The blooms are now being sold in the most critical market and bringing highest prices. It will not be over-propagated. Our book will close as soon as the limit is reached. Order early and be sure.

$75 00 per 1000, $10.00 per 100, $2 00 per doz.

☞ Please Note: Stock for delivery prior to March 15th, all sold. Are now booking orders for that date and later. Stock is going fast. Don't delay.

Nahant, Mass.

Those who have never visited Thomas Roland should see in their mind's eye a small tract of land far out to sea, connected with the mainland only by a thread-like roadway, and with the ceaseless waves beating upon the rock-bound coast; such is Nahant, the home of Roland, whom everybody in the Boston market knows and likes. Paying a recent call, I found him taking every advantage of the mild weather to complete two houses which will bring his range of glass up to about 20,000 feet. The establishment is mainly devoted to carnations and violets and the latter are without exception the finest I have seen this season. Marie Louise is grown for quality, Camphell for quantity and Princess of Wales for single. The principal varieties of carnations are White Cloud, Mrs. Bradt, Daybreak, Frances Joost, Eldorado, New York, Mrs. Jas. Dean, Scott and last, but grandest of all, G. H. Crane; as grown here it is certainly the best scarlet to date and a splendid keeper. White Cloud and Eldorado are fitting companions for Crane here but Mesdames Bradt and Joost do not stand up as well, although they are fine. Daybreak, I must say seems to be going backward. New York is rather pleasing but everywhere I notice that the edges of the petals have a bleached out appearance.

ETHEL CROCKER

Absolutely the BEST PINK CARNATION ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another). By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety). In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July. With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and the order filled by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished, prepaid, at $1.00 per dozen—amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date, every sample, excepting one, out of several hundred sent, has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES, good little plants, at 75 cts. per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

"MACK RICHMOND"

The Red Carnation. A Sport from Tidal Wave.

We know there have been many red sports from Tidal Wave, but we claim that this one is the peer of its class.

We have grown it for three years, and under the careful selection of our foreman, Mr. Mack Richmond, it has improved each year.

It is not the only red, nor is it the largest, but it will outbloom any carnation ever grown by us, and we have grown a few.

The flowers are borne upon strong, stiff stems, never bursting, entirely free from rust and a splendid grower. Come and see it growing--it may astonish you.

NOW READY; $6 per 100, $50 per 1000.

Syracuse, N. Y.

On a recent Saturday evening a party of florists from Syracuse visited Utica and was entertained by Utica florists. An elaborate collation was served, and toasts were responded to by many of those present. Later in the evening the Syracusans and their hosts engaged in a bowling contest at the Maennerchor alleys. After a close and exciting game the Uticans won by a small margin. Those present from Syracuse were R. H. C. Bard, David Campbell, George Ham, Richard Davis, Charles A. Fox, W. B. Dow, Joseph Huller, Henry Burt and Charles Smiley. The Utica florists will visit this city in the near future.

FORT WAYNE, IND.—Alice M. and Clara Flick have invested $4,000 in a lot adjoining their recent purchase and upon which they propose to shortly erect a building for their florist business.

.....It's a "CATBIRD"

Was the exclamation of one of the best growers in the west when he discovered this sport, four years ago. By carefully handling it, and not over-propagating it, we are now able to offer to the trade a clean, healthy stock of the best

Red Carnation

On the market, for both grower and retailer. Not quite as large as Crane or Jubilee, but an intense red, on long, stiff stems, averaging Sixty-five Blooms to the plant. Received honorable mention at the Carnation show in Chicago January 19. Rooted Cuttings, $2.50 per 100; 2-in. pots, $3.50 per 100.

THE NEW PINK CARNATION

"Mrs. Bertram Lippincott."

(Originated and grown for the past four years by John Kuhn, Philadelphia, Pa.)

The mere fact that this variety is a cross between "Daybreak" and "Scott" is a sufficient guarantee and should recommend it to every grower throughout the land as the only carnation that will be sure to yield good returns. Its pedigree, however, though much in its favor, is by no means its strongest point or recommendation. "Mrs. Bertram Lippincott" is possessed of many good points of its own and is being introduced upon its own merits. The meritorious points in its favor are:

1st FORM. The very acme of perfection. Full, well rounded, and double, with a calyx that never bursts.

2d. COLOR. A soft, rich pink, a shade darker than Daybreak—a color that "takes" or sells at sight.

3d SIZE. 3 to 3½ inches in ordinary soil—with chemical fertilizers this size can still be increased.

4th. STEM. Of the Daybreak type, averaging from 2 to 2½ feet

5th. HABIT. Exceptionally strong and healthy. Has never been known to be a victim to rust or any other disease.

6th. KEEPING QUALITIES. No other carnation can surpass it in this respect.

7th ITS STRONGEST POINT. It crops from the time it is housed until it is thrown out. No "between season," no "let up." In a word, it is the carnation you want to grow.

STOCK NOW READY.

We control the whole stock of this valuable carnation. Orders will be filled in strict rotation as booked.

PRICES: $2.00 per Doz.; $10.00 per 100; 25 and over at 100 rates; $75.00 per 1000; 250 and over at 1000 rates.

Joseph Bock has what might well be called ideal greenhouses. The structures, which are about twelve years old, have all the appearances of new ones because of their excellent state of repair. The plant consists of 10,000 feet of glass. In connection he has a two horse-power gasoline engine and pump with a capacity of forty gallons per minute, the cost of running which is 14 cents for ten hours. His stock is all first-class. From 720 Bride and Bridesmaid plants the cut during the months of October, November and December was 7546 roses. During the same time the cut from 240 Beauties was 1270 buds. He has one house devoted to violets, which is a perfect mass of bloom. Much credit is due Harry Bock, as he has full charge of the growing. Mr. Bock will build another carnation house 18x70 this spring. S.

Gladioli

BY THE 100,000.

PEERLESS STRAIN—A fine strain of select seedlings, about 50 to 70 per cent light shades. Recognized as a superior mixture, in fact, the best that grow.

PREMIER STRAIN—A choice strain of good seedlings; fully 50 to 60 per cent light shades; just what every florist should plant for cut flowers for the hot summer months when flowers are scarce.

POPULAR STRAIN—A choice strain of good stock; fully 50 to 60 per cent light shades, but of 1st and 2nd size bulbs.

WHITE AND LIGHT—A choice strain of white and light shades suitable for design work of any kind. Especially selected for florists's use.

LEMOINEI STRAIN—A select lot of seedlings of this grand type so popular with many people.

CANNAS—A select lot of bulbs of excellent merit and of a wide range of colors. 50,000.

AMERICAN FLORIST CO., 324 DEARBORN STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Worcester, Mass.

With fairly good weather, trade has remained steady. Flowers are fairly plentiful, with the exception of roses, which are a bit short in the better grades, but there is plenty of good stock in sight. Carnations retain their popularity and, though the department stores and a few imitators advertise fresh carnations at 19 cents a dozen, the best stores get 50 cents to $1 per dozen. Violets are in good supply and demand is equally good. Princess of Wales is coming very fine and is the popular variety this season. Bulbous stock in pans is being brought in regularly and meets with a ready sale. Azaleas are also handled, but in smaller numbers.

The winter meetings of the horticultural society, held weekly in their hall, have proved very interesting and instructive.

As yet but one or two growers have expressed their intention of going to Buffalo; they will probably join the Boston party. A. H. L.

A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.—STATE OF THE MARKET.—MRS. HILL MEETS AN ACCIDENT.—AN ARTIST'S SUCCESS.—DOINGS OF SEIDEWITZ.

Market men, without exception, complain of slow sales since Christmas. The store people generally seem a little more cheerful, as there was a great run of receptions and balls last week. Roses are not at all plentiful, but the supply of carnations would be hard to beat in either quantity or quality. Good smilax is scarce. Plenty of freesias are to be had, and some very good white chrysanthemums. Violets are becoming almost too plentiful.

Mrs. Fanny R. Hill's many friends will be sorry to learn that she met with a very painful accident. In alighting from a street car near Messrs. Feasts' store, where she has charge, she stepped on ice and fell, breaking her wrist.

Mrs. Otto Schuler's son, Hans, who is at the Academie Julienne in Paris, has taken three first prizes at three consecutive exhibitions of sculpture and considering the closeness of the competition and the ability of the judges in that city of art, Mrs. Schuler is justified in her pride at his success.

Mayor Seidewitz, of Annapolis, was in town the other day. Municipal cares have not lessened his avoirdupois, nor abbreviated his smile. His plan of making a stock company of his business, will give him much more time to enjoy the dignity and honor of the mayoralty.

Simplicity in Greenhouse Construction.

During our long experience we have not only made many improvements in greenhouses, but we have so simplified the construction that building a greenhouse is no longer a matter so full of complications as to tax the patience and the ingenuity of even the most intelligent mechanic. Our is worked out in the best manner ready to be put up, and we furnish our customers such complete detail drawings that any workman of only ordinary capabilities can put it up correctly.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

NINTH ANNUAL CONVENTION, BUFFALO, N. Y., FEB. 15 and 16, 1900.

Scenes in and about Morgan Hall, where the flowers were being staged for exhibition, gave indication early on Thursday morning that the meeting of 1900 was to be the banner event to date in the history of the American Carnation Society. Outside the rapidly falling snow and increasing wind, together with the absence of a number of expected participants, recalled vividly the big blizzard that so seriously impeded matters at the meeting one year ago, but it was only a suggestion, and serious difficulties were not anticipated. Crowds gathered round the tables and commented upon the striking points of the big beauties as they were carefully arranged in the vases by their owners, and this, with hand shaking and friendly greetings between old friends, occupied the time till at 11 a. m., when Mr. Scott, in stentorian voice, announced that all were requesed to convene in the meeting room in the Genesee Hotel, next door, and get ready to open the formal business of the convention.

About one hundred gentlemen filled the comfortable little hall when Mr. Scott called the meeting to order and introduced Dr. Conrad Diehl, Mayor of Buffalo. The mayor said that he wished he could speak as forcibly as he felt the pleasure it afforded him to welcome the carnation society to his city. He was sure the deliberations would be beneficial to the members and to mankind. Their efforts in creating a love for plants and flowers would result in making the world better and men better citizens. As a physician he paid a touching tribute to the influence of flowers in the sick room, which brought comfort and pleasant thoughts to the invalid, whether rich or lowly. He extended the best wishes and freedom of the city of Buffalo to all the visitors and asked them to remember the great exposition to be held in 1901, and to use their influence to bring the S. A. F. convention here at that time, so that the horticultural department might be, as was hoped, the leading feature of that great event.

John N. May responded briefly on behalf of the carnation society, saying that he knew from many past experiences the meaning of a Buffalo welcome and assuring his hearers that Buffalo can hold up her end as well as any city in the Union. He recalled a visit of twenty years ago and commented on the marvelous advancement seen in the noble and progressive city, as well as the equally striking evolution seen in the carnation flowers on exhibition to-day as compared with the diminutive flowers that were common twenty years back. He thanked the Mayor for the kind hospitality extended and for the honor of his presence, promising on behalf of the florists that the Pan-American Exposition would not be forgotten.

President Kasting then said a few words of welcome on behalf of the Buffalo Florists' Club and was supplemented by Mr. Scott, who recalled the meeting here of the carnation society nine years ago, facetiously advising the visitors not to take the Mayor's offer of the freedom of the city too literally, but advising those who wished to put it to the test to place themselves confidingly in the hands of Messrs. Fancourt, Kasting and Rebstock.

President W. P. Craig then assumed the chair and appointed tellers to distribute, receive and count ballots for six judges of the exhibition. While the tellers were at work payment of dues was in order, and Mrs. Herr, the cheery little associate secretary, gave assurances later on that the number and alacrity of the responses were far ahead of anything heretofore in the history of the society. The secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting and the reading of the annual address of the president then followed.

The suggestion in the address regarding the change in points for judging was here briefly discussed. Mr. May emphasized its importance from the retailers' point of view. Mr. Hill saw many difficulties in putting the plan proposed into practice. He remarked that keeping qualities in a flower are largely a matter of growing, soil and temperature as may be easily seen by comparing the product of different growers of the same variety. He said that if double judging should be followed at these annual meetings the judges must necessarily take cognizance of the time a flower had been cut before they could arrive at a just conclusion and that some system of time allowance for exhibits from a distance would be imperative. Mr. Witterstaetter agreed that all depended on how a flower had been grown and how cut, and thought that the points given to substance, in the schedule fully covered the point, stating that a certain number of his own flowers now on exhibition had been cut in January. Mr. Hill created much merriment here by stating that he had visited Mr. Witterstaetter's cellars and had noted a certain volatile atmosphere that seemed to give the place preservative qualities of a high order, with which the many casks stored therein migh have something to do. Here the tellers appeared and Chairman Dillon reported names of judges as follows:

On seedlings, Messrs. Wm. Scott, W. N. Rudd and Adam Graham.

On commercial classes, Messrs. F. Burki, J. M. Gasser and W. J. Palmer, Sr.

It was voted that the exhibition hall be closed between the hours of 2 and 4 p. m., while the judges are at work, and adjournment was ordered at 12:30, to reconvene at 2 p. m.

The first business at the afternoon session on Thursday was the presentation of the report of the Lawson medal committee, by M. A. Patten. After receiving designs and bids from a a number of manufacturers one made in Boston was selected by Mr. Lawson and, with the unanimous approval of the committee, was ordered at a cost of $300. This included one medal each of gold, silver gilt and bronze and two silver. The report was accepted with thanks and the medals, which were passed around, were greatly admired.

Discussion of the proposition to incorporate a change in the judges' schedule recognizing the comparative keeping quality of seedlings exhibited for award was then resumed. Mr. Crabb expressed very radical views on the subject and thought that in addition to a certain number of points in the scale it should be required that a duplicate set of flowers be sent three days in advance of an exhibition and their condition noted at time of judging, in justice to those growers who might buy with a view to growing for the wholesale market. He further advocated some plan of visiting, by a committee, to ascertain the freedom of bloom of any variety which was to be placed on the market. Mr. Wittersaetter thought that as flowers with light, thin petals go to sleep most quickly, the feature of substance in the scale is sufficient to cover the point at issue. Rob't Craig's opinion was that the only way to ascertain the keeping quality of a variety is to try it and that no one can tell by examination whether a flower will keep or not, but Mr. Hill disagreed and attributed results to methods of culture, character of soil, etc., and thought that to attempt to determine such a quality in flowers on exhibition would be treading on dangerous ground.

Mr. Kasting believed that if flowers were cut at the proper time and kept in proper temperature afterwards there would be little trouble about keeping them and Mr. Herr agreed that there is as much or more art in picking as in growing carnations. Mr. Baur suggested cutting with a sharp knife in preference to picking and Mr. May attributed frequent trouble to overheating in transit. Mr. Murchie called attention to the tendency of the carnation to go to sleep as soon as hybridization is effected and the advantges of removing the pistil as soon as the flower has opened. Mr. Herrington, Mr. Weber and others joined in the discussion and then Mr. Crabb offered a motion which, as amended on motion of Mr. Craig, was adopted as follows: That a committee of five be appointed to revise the scale of points in such manner as to incorporate, if found practicable, the points raised in the discussion, also if any method could be devised to induce the express companies to handle cut flowers with more care than is now exercised and that the committee, if it be not able in a practicable way to determine the keeping qualities of a carnation by means of the scale of points, be instructed to report the means whereby said keeping quality may be determined.

The committee as appointed consisted of Messrs. G. F. Crabb, F. Dorner, Jr., J. L. Dillon, Wm. Weber and Jas. Hartshorne.

Mr. Hill expressed his opinion that express companies can be made to pay for negligence in handling flowers if the society will only make a test case and put up a big fight in connection with the S. A. F.

The question of reduced railroad rates to the meetings was considered and Secretary Stewart, of the S. A. F., gave his experiences in similar cases, advising that an effort be made to secure one and one-third fare for the next meeting. Mr. Herrington spoke favorably of the possibility of arranging for union meetings with the rose society and Mr. Craig agreed with him that many advantages might be gained thereby. Messrs. May, Nicholson and Herrington were thereupon appointed a committee to bring about a conference with the rose society.

Peter Fisher was then called upon for some remarks on hybridization but declined. Mr. Witterstaetter also disclaimed any knowledge of the subject and declared most varieties now popular to be largely the result of accident, but he is keeping strict records and hopes to evolve something yet. Color, he said, appears to be more dependent upon the pollen parent, but habit and other characteristics are oftener taken from the seed parent. Mr. Dorner's experience was that results are mostly chance as far as color is concerned but that it is possible to work on blooming qualities and habit and Mr. Besold agreed with him.

Messrs. Wm. Scott, Adam Graham, E. G. Hill, J. N. May and Wm. Nicholson were appointed a committee to prepare a premium list for next year and at 4:30 the meeting adjourned until 7:30 p. m.

Reports of judges were read and accepted at the opening of the evening session. Mr. Hartshorne then read his paper on the merits of indoor culture.

Quite a lively discussion followed the reading of this paper. Mr. Dailledouze said that in his experience indoor culture favored quality slightly but outdoor culture gave quantity in ratio of three to one. He believed that if a man should want to grow carnation flowers for exhibition purposes he would do better under glass, as a rule, but that results varied and with some varieties there was no great difference in results either way. Triumph is the best under glass variety. Mr. Weber said that Buttercup was practicable only under glass all the time.

Mr. Ward, as the original advocate of indoor culture, said that he had found that the cut was much less in quantity than from field planting but the quality was decidedly superior. Mr. Hartshorne enumerated Jubilee and Maud Dean as good indoor varieties and Mr. Hill endorsed this as far as Jubilee was concerned and said the same was emphatically true of Evelina, but on the whole favored the out-door plan. Mr. May said he had found Mrs. Dean all right under glass but as to Olympia results were two to one in favor of plants lifted from field early in September. The slight advantage in quality would not compensate for disparity in cut. Mr. Scott also advocated field culture, even if only for three months, as the best course for the average carnation grower.

Mr. Marquisee advanced the view that the character of the greenhouses had much to do with results. Mr. Ward endorsed this and favored wide houses ventilated at sides and ends and with double ventilation at the top. Messrs. Hartshorne, Marquisee, Dailledouze and others participated in the discussion of this point, it being generally conceded that as low a temperature as possible in summer is essential to successful indoor culture, but a difference of opinion being evident as to the wisdom of syringing continuously to reduce temperature. A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Hartshorne.

Nominations for place of meeting were then in order and Indianapolis, Baltimore, Detroit and Cleveland were severally nominated and eloquent and witty speeches made by the advocates of each place. A ballot was then taken and Baltimore won by a fair margin and amid much enthusiasm.

Nominations of officers were then made as follows: For president, Robert Halliday, Baltimore, Md.; vice-president, Wm. Weber, Oakland, Md.; secretary, A. M. Herr; treasurer, F. Dorner, Jr. There being no contest for any of the offices it appears that Baltimore and "Maryland, My Maryland" is decidedly "in it" this time.

Friday morning's session opened with a discussion of the best method of culture for plants grown outdoors for summer blooming and the question of varieties was also touched upon. Several members joined in recommending Portia,

Mrs. Fisher, Scott, Daybreak and New York. It was advised that cuttings be struck early, planted out in April and pinched back once.

The question of price cutting was broached and W. N. Rudd remarked that the only prevention lay in stimulating the fool killer to increased activity.

The subject of sub-irrigation proved a fruitful theme. C. W. Ward, who has given close attention to this matter for several seasons, stated that as yet he had formed no settled views, that he was compiling facts and proposed continued experiment along this line, but that it will take a long time to reach definite conclusions. At F. Dorner & Sons' they find varying results with different varieties grown by this method. Mr. Dorner uttered a caution against over-watering and stated that they do not feel encouraged to extend their experiments. Messrs. Weber, Dale and Rudd reported that they are following up sub-irrigation in a small way but have not as yet achieved any noteworthy results. Witterstaetter has trouble with the brick bottomed benches drying out too rapidly when heat is on the houses but John N. May stated that there would be no difficulty if the bricks are laid on a board foundation. He finds great benefit from a brick bottom in the propagating bench.

The question of consolidation with the rose society on the time of the annual meeting was very freely discussed and several objections were urged as more than counterbalancing the advantages. It was pointed out that deferring the carnation exhibition until March would interfere with the spring business of the rooted cutting men and that February is too early for a comprehensive exhibition of roses Mr May, for the committee, recommended a fusion of interests and some thought the plan would result in gain for both organizations, but others believe that it would cause a deplorable mutual interference, and the whole matter was finally returned to the same committee for further consideration.

An exhaustive discussion on rules then ensued, it being at length voted that 1 p. m. on the opening day be the time limit for staging flowers for competition, seedlings entered for certificates only being excepted. It was also decreed that entries must be in the secretary's hands on the Saturday prior to the exhibition, all later entries to pay a penalty of $1 each.

A discussion followed on the necessity of giving judges some official standard on which they shall base judgment and the arguments concerning objective or ideal standards culminated in the appointment of a committee of five to report, at the next annual meeting, instructions to judges and suggestions as to the establishment of standards for their guidance.

Mr. Scott, for the committee charged with the revision of the schedule, reported that modifications seemed advisable in the requirements to win the Michel cup. It was also recommended that the Lawson gold medal and silver medal be duplicated and a bronze medal added. It was further recommended that the sweepstake competition be omitted. The report was adopted and a motion prevailed that no variety be hereafter considered by the judges unless it bears either a name or seedling number.

A unanimous ballot was cast for the officers placed in nomination on Thursday.

At the afternon session Prof. F. A. Sirrine, of Jamaica, N. Y., read a paper on carnation pests, confining his remarks to insects that are pests of the forcing house, giving the habits and life history, methods of reproduction and depredations and known remedies against greenfly, red spider, thrips, cut worms, cabbage looper, white grub, rose leaf tyer, white ants, rose beetle, etc, illustrating his remarks with a number of photographs which were passed around among his audience. It developed in the discussion following the paper that cyanide of potassium in small quantities, such as one-half ounce to 1,000 cubic feet of air space, with houses closed all night, is as effective and less likely to result in harm than exposure to a stronger dose for a shorter time, also that low plants such as violets are less liable to suffer from it than are carnations and chrysanthemums, on account of the gas banking overhead. Several speakers had found Aphis Punk efficacious in the case of green fly, and highly recommend it, but some objection was made to its odor and it was represented to be rather expensive to use. A vote of thanks was given Prof. Sirrine for his valuable paper.

CARNATION MARY HILL

Fred Dorner, Jr., then reported for the committee appointed yesterday, that it was deemed impracticable to incorporate in the scale of points any recognition of keeping qualities of flowers, but presented for consideration a scheme for three judges in each large city to whom introducers of new varieties may send blooms at intervals for test as to keeping qualities, a plan somewhat similar to the seedling committees of the chrysanthemum society. After a full discussion the report was laid on the table until the next meeting.

The committee also reported itself unable, in the short time at its disposal, to formulate any practical remedy for losses through acts of express companies, and a long discussion followed, participated in by many large shippers of flowers and plants, who related experiences and results of effects to collect damages for goods delayed or otherwise injured through negligence of common carriers. The Adams Express Company was censured for disposition to avoid reasonable responsibility and general discourtesy in relation to such claims, and the American, National and United States express companies were spoken well of. The value of a good understanding with local express agents was dwelt upon and the use of the special red flower label was recommended. General opinion was that every man meeting loss should hold the carrier sharply liable and insist on full settlement, calling upon the national societies for help in pushing test cases if necessary, and trade papers to be called upon to assist in giving publicity to all instances of oppression.

During the afternoon the public thronged the exhibition hall so that the floor was almost impassable at times.

On Friday evening the exhibition hall was transformed into a splendid banquet room and at 8:30 more than 150 guests sat down at the laden tables, laden not alone with vases of carnations but with good things solid and liquid with which to regale the inner man. The menus were gems in their way and a good evidence of the ability in this line of their designer, D. B. Long. On the cover was a bunch of carnations in colors, with a gold embossed buffalo in the corner and the inscription:

"Guests.—American Carnation Society.
Hosts.—Buffalo Florists' Club."

On the inside, on deckle edged paper, the following:

Entertainment—des dianthus la divinite
An attempt at hybridizing
Wit and common sense crossed with gastronomy.
Informality the rule.
Everything ad lib. No restrictions.

Chef des hybritizeure,	W. F. Kasting.
Assistes,	Wm. Scott, Chas. H. Keitsch.
Demonstrateur des resultat.	Wm. Scott.

On the other side were inscribed edibles and irrigation in equally witty form.

President W. F. Kasting, presided and Wm. Scott officiated as toastmaster. Wm. P. Craig responded for the carnation society, Wm. Weber for "Maryland, my Maryland," John N. May for "Our Naval Forces," E. G. Hill for "The Hoosier State," Robert Craig for "Horticulture," C. W. Ward for "Greenhouse Odors," J. F. Cowell for "The Higher Branches,"

W. N. Rudd for "Midnight Prowlers," Chas. Keitsch for "Exhibition Management," Wm. Gammage for "Our Neighbors," Wm. J. Stewart for "The Press," D. B. Long for "Art in Floriculture," L. E. Marquisee for "Titles of Nobility," Eugene Dailledouze for "Triple Six" and G. E. Fancourt for "Cheap Fuel."

The Awards.

The following were the premiums awarded:

One hundred blooms white, first, J. L. Dillon for Queen Louise.

One hundred blooms light pink, first, L. E. Marquisee for The Marquis; second, E. G. Hill & Co. for Ethel Crocker.

One hundred blooms scarlet, first, Chicago Carnation Co. for Jubilee.

One hundred blooms crimson, first, Chicago Carnation Co. for Gen. Maceo.

One hundred blooms variegated, first, Chicago Carnation Co. for Mrs. Bradt; second, E. G. Hill & Co. for J. Whitcomb Riley.

Fifty blooms crimson, first, Robert Craig & Son for Gen. Gomez; second, same for Gen. Maceo.

Twenty-five blooms dark pink, introduction of 1899, first, E. G. Hill & Co. for Leslie Paul.

Cottage Gardens prize for fifty blooms Gen. Gomez, won by Dailledouze Bros.

Cottage Gardens silver cup for best crimson seedling, won by Cottage Gardens with Gov. Roosevelt.

Chicago Carnation Co. silver cup for light pink seedling not yet disseminated, won by Dailledouze Bros. with No. 3.

Lawson gold medal for 100 blooms any variety, won by Dailledouze Bros. with No. 666.

Lawson silver medal for twenty-five blooms of undisseminated seedling, won by R. Witterstaetter with Adonis, scarlet.

In the sweepstake competition Dailledouze Bros. were first with Mrs. Bradt, Witterstaetter second with Eugenie, pink, and third with Adonis.

The following seedlings were certificated:

Witterstatter's Estelle, scarlet, scored 86 points. Eugenie, pink, scored 88 points. Elinor, white, scored 89 points.

Kuhn's Mrs. Lippincott, light pink, scored 86 points.

Cottage Gardens' Gov. Roosevelt, crimson, scored 93 points.

Dailledouze Bros'. No. 666, variegated, scored 89 points.

Preliminary certificates were awarded as follows:

Fisher's The Maine, white, scored 88 points.

Dailledouze Bros.' No. 100, white, scored 87 points. Delight, pink, scored 88 points.

Witterstaetter's No. 550, white, scored 90 points.

CARNATION QUEEN LOUISE.

The President's Address.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, AND MEMBERS OF THE AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY:—Nine years ago, in the city of New York, was held the first regular meeting of the American Carnation Society. The society since that time has grown greatly in membership and in influence. The good it has done is apparent to all who have watched its workings. It has diffused among its members much valuable information, and has greatly stimulated the production of new varieties, and among these new varieties there comes occasionally, at rare intervals, one which in one or more points is superior to anything previously existing in its particular class. I suppose it is safe to say that, on an average, it is necessary to raise and test a thousand or more seedlings in order to secure one that will, by its own merits, secure a place, more or less permanent, as a commercially valuable carnation. Our exhibition tables show that this year there have been put on the market at least half a dozen which promise to add to the already great prestige which the carnation has as a florists' flower. I need not name these candidates for popular favor; they are here to speak for themselves, more eloquently than human tongue can, and to testify that the standard of quality is being raised higher and higher, year by year.

As a matter of fact, the quality of the carnation is being so rapidly improved that it is not possible to name a single variety that was largely grown nine years ago, when this society was organized. At that time, such varieties as Grace Wilder and Portia represented the highest standard of quality, and what chance would they have in competition with the leading varieties of to-day? It is a matter of great regret that there have not been more new roses of merit introduced in the last decade. While we have at least a dozen varieties of carnations which can be grown in quantity and disposed of at a profit, there are practically now only four roses in anything like common use. Let us congratulate our brothers, the rose growers, on the formation of their rose society, and express the hope that it will do as much or more for the rose as our organization has done for the carnation, and we feel sure that this will be the case. Now that there is such a society devoted to the interests of the rose, growers will be encouraged to devote time to the crossing of varieties with a view of raising new shades of color which shall be fit companions for the Bride and Bridesmaid, and perhaps it is not too much to hope that a white or pink rose shall be raised which shall be in the class with the magnificent and peerless American Beauty; the fact that there is now an official and powerful tribunal ready to recognize and give full publicity to any meritorious new comer, will certainly stimulate the production of new varieties. The carnation society extends congratulations to the young brother (or sister) and wishes it every success.

How to conduct a carnation or a rose society so that it may continue to advance in power and influence can only be learned by experience, and the measure of the advance will be in proportion to the earnestness of its members, and to the faithfulness with which they shall apply themselves to the problems which arise from time to time. If we shall be able to improve the methods of conducting our society as much as the growers have improved cultural methods, those who conduct our society a decade hence, may look with a feeling akin to pity on our present feeble efforts.

I will not venture to take up your time with any allusion to improved cultural methods because these advances are made known from time to time in our trade journals, which are devoting more space to carnation matters than to the interests of any other class of flowers. The papers which are to be read, and the discussions which will doubtless take place during this convention will also fully illustrate these points. I will, however, suggest what seems to me would be an improvement in our scale of judging carnations by points. In our present scale there is no provision for recognizing the keeping qualities of a flower, which is very important. Many of our leading retail florists consider this the most important quality in a flower. No matter how beautiful the variety may be, if it "goes to sleep" soon after delivery to the customer, nothing but dissatisfaction can result. I would, therefore, suggest that we drop from the scale the ten points for substance and together with the ten for plant, which has been done away with and which points were allotted to color and stem, and also the five for calyx, and give these twenty-five points for keeping qualities—the flowers could be judged on the first day as to all the points excepting those awarded for keeping qualities, which latter would be determined just before the close of the exhibition.

And now, in closing, let me bespeak a full attendance at every session of this convention. Do not allow the attractions of this fascinating city of Buffalo to lead you away; and do not forget that we want to increase our membership; the greater our numbers, the greater our power may be.

Secretary's Report.

Your secretary begs leave to report having issued the proceedings of the meeting held in Philadelphia, Pa., in due time and having mailed the same to all members not in arrears for dues.

The resolution of thanks to Prof. Arthur was printed and forwarded to every experiment station in the United States and a separate copy to a number of officials, state and otherwise.

Membership in the society has remained about stationary, the few dropping out having been replaced by about an equal number of new members.

Registration has been pretty generally followed up by members and by non-members, wherever a variety has been named with the view to introducing it to the trade, and thus quite a few cases of the duplication of names avoided.

Growing Carnations Under Glass All Summer.

BY JAMES HAIGHORNE, JOLIET, ILL.

What first induced me to try this method was the reading of some carnation notes by Mr. Edwin Lonsdale, of Philadelphia, some five or six years ago, telling of the success he was having with certain varieties, notably Buttercup and Helen Keller. I first tried it in a small way, planting about 100 or so of each variety, and on the first experiment secured blooms far superior to any that I had ever been able to produce from fall lifted plants. I became so convinced that I was on the right track that each year following I increased the quantity of plants for trial, so that now, the fifth season of my experiment with this method, we grow practically all our carnations indoors. I feel that we have passed the experimental stage, and can conscientiously recommend this method to anyone who wants high-grade carnations from September to July. My understanding of growing carnations inside all summer and that of others regarding the matter undoubtedly makes the title of the subject a trifle misleading, as I do not think it practicable or advisable to keep the plants indoors entirely. They should be planted outside as early in the spring as possible. Plant close together in the rows, say about six to eight inches apart, and allow just enough room between the rows to work a hand cultivator. By July 1, if you have attended faithfully to the pinching process, you will have nice bushy little plants. At this date, or as soon after as you can prepare your houses to receive them, they should be housed. Allow me here to lay stress on the fact that the greatest enemy to successful indoor culture is red spider, and that the grower should thoroughly cleanse his houses of this pest before planting young stock in them. I also would advise giving the plants a good syringing before lifting, as some of the varieties get badly infested with spider in the field, at least we find it so in our locality. The houses should be shaded during planting, unless you can get a few days of cloudy weather, which is seldom likely at this season.

Treatment after housing is much the same as that ordinarily practiced, except that the details of culture demand greater carefulness. The walks, walls and surfaces underneath the benches should be well syringed to keep down the spider. If this is given close attention, as it should be, it will not be necessary to syringe the plants more than once in two or three weeks. If done early in the morning, I find is very beneficial, as it washes the dust off the plants and keeps the pores of the foliage open for action. It is also well to get the hose outside occasionally to wash the dust off the glass, as the more light the plants receive after they are established the healthier and tougher will be their growth. The soil should not be too rich, or it will cause a too soft and spindling growth. If the soil is naturally good, rotted sod, etc., it is best not to add any manure whatever. Superfluous manure is one thing in particular which must be guarded against to insure success, as with such a high temperature and a regular supply of moisture at the roots the plants will grow fast enough without it. It means more labor feeding later in the season, but at the same time it is, in my belief, very essential for the health of the plants. One of the principal drawbacks to growing inside is the baking and cracking of the soil, conditions peculiar to our soil as soon as it becomes dry after watering. Where this happens it makes a great deal more work cultivating the soil by hand as against using a cultivator outside; but to do away with so much extra of this labor, when scratching up the soil between the plants, I find it a good plan to leave a ridge or little elevation of the soil between the rows, thus affording for the rows of plants a sort of gutter, where all the water should be applied and not allowed to run over the surface of the entire bed. It is necessary not to use a too strong force of water or it will wash the loose earth in heaps. The ridges of soil between the rows are intended also to act as a mulch for the roots, which is better for the health of the plants than a mulch of manure, unless the latter be very fine and minus nutriment.

The ventilators should be left open night and day until the temperature gets down to 40° at night. It is quite important to give them the benefit of this low temperature, if it can be done before the blooms appear, which for our market would be about September 15 to October 1, as it seems to give the plants a more vigorous growth, the foliage a nice bluish color, and the stems additional stiffness. As soon as the blooms appear, one can readily note the superiority of the flowers of inside stock to those from plants lifted only two or three weeks before. The former are in good demand at sometimes double the price of the latter, which are often hard to dispose of at any price, owing to the large quantity of such stock in the market at this period. I do not believe that as good blooms can be produced by field grown plants until about February 1. At this date the outdoor stock begins to catch up; but there are already gone four of the best months for marketing the product, and right here is where the indoor grown stock gains the advantage over the outdoor and the real reason why I advocate indoor culture in preference to fall lifted plants. I notice that the majority of growers around Chicago are planting a week or two earlier each year, so that now some of the most prominent growers are planting in July, and they keep making a better reputation each year for carnations. To be as brief as possible, I might sum it up in this way: It requires more labor to care for the plants when grown inside, consequently it brings a higher cost on the product; but the grower will not have such a grassy growth of plants, thus enabling him to plant closer and to cut as many or more blooms from a given space than from field plants, and as I claim one can get a higher price for the blooms during at least a considerable portion of the four months already indicated, the additional receipts from the indoor method will be so much more than the extra cost of production as to still leave a very considerable balance in their favor.

Scraps.

The visitors represented a very wide range of country, from the extreme east to the far west and from Canada on the north to Tennessee on the south, and the good things were not confined to any one section. It was unquestionably the most representative gathering in the carnation society's history.

On Thursday evening J. D. Thompson entertained about twenty-five friends at dinner at the Iroquois. It was an elegant "spread" and extended well past midnight. John N. May acted as toastmaster, but the talking was informal, somewhat on the lines of the Ananias Society, with stories of varying veracity. Mr. Hartshorne sang most entertainingly.

One gentleman was overheard to say: "I find these meetings great educators. The day I began going to exhibitions, that day I commenced to progress."

The very small percentage of bald heads in the meetings was remarkable. There is lots of youthful material in the carnation society, from the president down.

The meeting hall in the Genesee was admirably adapted for the purpose.

A lively fire in the basement of the building in which the exhibition hall was located, came very near demolishing the entire business. Luckily a strong odor of smoke was the only evidence of the narrow escape.

THE LATE FRANK BECKER.

Two visitors, both experienced travelers, showed up without their satchels and had to resort to the telegraph and express for comfort.

The Lawson medals are beautiful in design and fine specimens of the engraver's art.

A Trio of Carnationists.

HENRY WEBER.

The subject of this sketch had his own little garden in the Province of Hesse-Cassle, Germany, long before he had reached his fourteenth year and completed the customary course in the government schools, when he was apprenticed to a florist, becoming foreman before he was nineteen, at which age he entered the British army, serving in the Crimean war in 1854 and 1855. During the following ten years he was stationed at various points in Asia, Africa, Australia and New Zealand, meeting many thrilling adventures, particularly in the Hottentot war. In 1865 Mr. Weber came to America and, with his brother John, who had preceded him, embarked in market gardening at Mt. Savage, Md. At the end of five years he sold out to his brother and removed to Cumberland, combining floriculture with gardening. In 1879 he bought a tract of swampy land near Oakland, much against the advice of his associates, redeemed it and made it a veritable garden. It was his intention to grow cauliflower and celery for the eastern markets and his greenhouses were only designed for meeting local demands, but it was only a few years before he became alive to the possibilities of carnation culture and for the past nine years he has given particular attention to this specialty. He was among the first to adopt modern methods and believes that the improvement has only fairly begun. He takes great pleasure in the raising of seedlings and has achieved much success in this line. As a result of his efforts we have Genevieve Lord, now being disseminated, and in 1901 several more fine sorts will be put on the market, all seedlings of 1896, among them No. 110, a large white; No. 30, a bright pink, and No. 126, a sweet-scented, long-stemmed crimson. He has also a number of later seedlings which have not yet passed through the period of testing. Sub-irrigation, side-ventilation and indoor culture are problems in which Mr. Weber takes much interest and he believes they will soon be recognized as essential to the best development of the carnation.

THOMAS W. LAWSON.

There is not a man in America who is not identified with the trade who has done as much to raise the carnation in puplic esteem as has the man whose name is interwoven in the story of Peter Fisher's celebrated pink. The narrative of Mr. Lawson's forty-two years abounds in incidents which show him to be just the man to enjoy such negotiations as resulted in bringing the flower which bears his wife's name to its present status and made it the most famous product of the hybridizers' brush. Copper king, horseman, yachtsman, genius, Mr. Lawson is a genial, modest gentleman whom few carnationists have ever met but who will always be held in highest regard by the members of the American Carnation Society, who have benefited more than he by the discussion of the carnation which followed the widespread stories of the "30,000-dollar" flower. Least of all his aid to the flower of his choice is his contribution of medals to the society of which he is an honorary member. The photograph which we herewith reproduce was taken in Mr. Lawson's Boston office some time prior to his appearance as a factor in floricultural affairs.

FRED. DORNER, SR.

Fred. Dorner, Sr., of Lafayette, Ind., was born in Baden, Germany, November 29, 1837. Until eighteen years of age he remained in Germany with his parents and during that time acquired a good practical education in the public schools of that country. In 1855 he sailed for America and at once made his way to Lafayette, Ind., where he has since resided. For a number of years he followed varied employments but in 1870 went into the floral business on his own account. For a number of years he rented greenhouses and engaged in the cultivation of a general line of florists' stock. In 1891 he purchased nine acres of land in the eastern section of the city and began the development of his present extensive establishment. First he erected three greenhouses, to which he has added from time to time until the establishment now comprises seventeen greenhouses of 50,000 square feet of glass. He carries a general line of stock for the retail trade, but makes a specialty of carnations for the wholesale trade, shipping flowers and plants to all points in the United States, from New York city to San Francisco and from New Orleans to Winnipeg, Manitoba. He makes exhibits of flowers and plants at all the leading flower shows. Business is carried on under the firm name of F. Dorner & Sons Co., and associated with Mr. Dorner are his two sons, Fred. E., Jr., and Theodore, also his three daughters. Wm. Scott was the first of Mr. Dorner's new carnations that is still grown extensively to-day; of the later introductions, Mrs. Geo. M. Bradt, White Cloud, Gold Nugget and G. H. Crane are well and most favorably known. He makes quite a specialty of carnation cuttings and the greater part of the range of glass is devoted to that purpose, although a considerable portion is reserved for the production and trial of new varieties, two of the houses being entirely occupied in this way at the present time.

CARNATIONS.

SOME NEW VARIETIES.

Mary Hill (Hill).—Triumph is the pollen parent of this variety. It has a stiff stem two to three feet in length, a perfect calyx, and produces a flower three and one-half inches in diameter. The color is Triumph pink on opening, but it lightens and becomes more beautiful as the bloom matures. It does not bleach at the edges. It has remarkable freedom of bloom and requires more space on the bench than do most varieties, owing to the size of the plants by mid-season.

No. 110 (Weber).—This is a white seedling of 1896 and will not be sent out until next year. It is a very vigorous grower and produces large blooms on extra long, strong stems. The blooms may very easily be classed as fancy, as few of them come under three inches. It is easy to handle, and Messrs. Weber & Sons report it very profitable.

CARNATION ESTELLE.

Queen Louise (Dillon).—The originator describes this as a pure white flower nearly as large as Mrs. Bradt, borne on long stems, but requiring no tying, because of their strength. It is very fragrant and possesses remarkable keeping qualities. The variety possesses a vigorous constitution, is easily propagated, easily transplanted, and is, moreover, very prolific in bloom.

Estelle (Witterstaetter).—A very free flowering scarlet of medium size, the result of crossing various scarlet seedlings during the past eight years. The work began with Portia and Jubilee was used as pollen parent in the last cross.

Adonis (Witterstaetter).—It has taken eight years to develop this scarlet variety by the frequent crossing of scarlet seedlings, the final seed parent being a seedling of Adelaide Kresken and The Stuart, obtained five years ago.

CARNATION PERU.

W. W. Coles writes: Having seen this carnation blooming for the past three years in two different locations and last year having seen it in nearly every month from November to May, I wish to say I consider it the best money-making white carnation that has come under my notice. It is a very easy variety to root, makes a strong, quick growth, and lifts easily in the fall. But the crowning point of this peerless variety is its healthy growth and free and everlasting blooming qualities. It starts to bloom early and is never once off crop until pulled out in summer. The color is a pure white, large flowers on long stiff stems. It originated in 1895 with F. B. Tinker, Peru, Ind. I have not grown a plant of this variety but am pleased to be able to get some stock this year as I regard it as a first-class commercial sort.

RED SPIDER ON CARNATIONS.

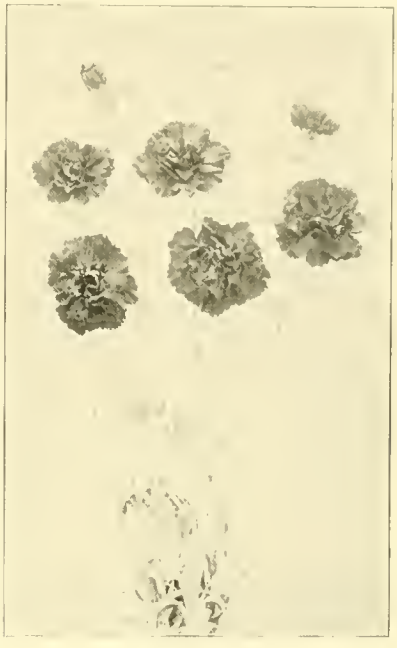
ED. AM. FLORIST.—Please state how the extensive carnation growers keep the red spider off their flowering carnations or the best and safest way to get rid of these pests. I have always had trouble with them from this time onward.

B. A. W.

Where an abundance of fresh air is allowed to circulate in carnation houses there is very little trouble from red spider up to March 1. After that date the increased sun power favors a greater day temperature and in corners of houses the spider is apt to make its appearance. We use water slightly impregnated with salt. This we have found effective. Care, however, must be taken not to have the salt in too great quantity; a good plan is to taste the water for its strength after the salt is introduced. A little experience will enable one to judge as to the quantity of salt to put in; just enough to cause the taste of the salt is all that is necessary. Continue the application two or three times each week. H.

MORE ABOUT CARNATION HOUSES.

I do not know that I can settle down to any particular form of house as the best for carnations. However, I would give preference to either the three-quarter span running east and west, or an even-span house running the same way. The exposure of the southern slope in either case can be a few points to the east or west of the south, without materially injuring the efficiency of the house. Speaking without much consideration I should say that a house facing slightly west of south would, perhaps, in our section, give the best results, as we are apt to have more sunlight from 10 to 4 o'clock during the winter time than we have in the early mornings, and a slight lacing towards the southwest might secure a little more sunlight. In other localities this might not be the case. For general purposes, twenty-two feet wide, inside measurement, ranging anywhere from 100 to 250 feet long, I consider a splendid size. This will give three benches, each four feet four inches wide, with ample walks all around each bench. This, of course, does away entirely with side benches, and here I would say that I deem a side bench an extravagance in carnation growing. It always gives a crop inferior to that of a center bench. It puts one side of a bench entirely out of your reach and it also keeps the side of your house damp and in such condition that the life of the house is materially reduced.



CARNATION ADONIS.

As to heating, for a small plant where there are only two or three houses and where a night watchman cannot be employed, I should incline towards hot water under pressure, using, however, 2-inch wrought pipes instead of the 4-inch cast pipes that used to be in vogue. In very large plants where it is necessary to keep a night watchman I should prefer steam. The piping should be either 1-inch or 1-¼-inch. Our experience seems to indicate that 1-¼-inch piping is preferable to every other size.

There should be at least one line of ventilation at the ridge and if the house is over twenty-five feet wide, two lines should be put in at the ridge. I also prefer a full line of ventilation on each side of the house, and in very large houses where the attempt is made to grow stock inside during the summer, they should be entirely detached from all adjoining buildings and the ventilation should be continuous around the sides, under the eaves, and also across both ends, so that the house could be practically opened to such an extent that it might be considered almost equal to outdoors.

As to glazing, I should by all means lap the glass, should use a first-class putty, should employ a first-class glazier who thoroughly and unquestionably understood greenhouse glazing. As to glass, I should use only the best quality of double thick glass, securing it free from blebs or blisters, if possible. I prefer glass 16x24 inches.

In painting such a house I should make the first priming coat of white lead and pure linseed oil. Most greenhouse builders dip the sash bars in a solution of oil and yellow ochre. This, of course, is cheaper but I think that in the end it would be much better to spend the time and lay on the priming coat thoroughly with a brush. I should use only the very best quality of Atlantic White Lead and the house should properly be painted in the hot part of the season. The wood should be perfectly dry when the priming coat is applied, and the structure should also be dry whenever the second and third coats are put on. I of course prefer the modern iron-framed house to any other class of structure, not upon the ground of its being less expensive to build, but for the reason that such a house once secured is kept in order at a much less expense than where you have wooden frames that rot out.

In case a grower is to build a house in front of another house which he does not wish to shade he may use the short-span-to-the-south house to advantage. In this house he will find the two south benches very fine for growing carnations; but his rear bench will be weaker than the other two, so that on the whole I do not consider the short-span-to-the-south house fully equal to the modern even-span house, although a first-class grower will attain excellent results in any of the three forms.

The poorest type of house for carnation growing I consider the even-span house so placed that the ridge runs north and south. This house proves a rather weak growing house in the winter time, while in the spring and summer months, the sun being directly overhead, makes it an extremely hot house. For this reason I prefer all of the types of houses to run east and west. C. W. WARD.

More About the Enquirer Controversy.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I note that Mr. Bock charges me with taking the Chicago judges' side of the controversy, and do not think that my notes on the matter can be so construed. The intent was simply to show that different judges, working from a different standard, might arrive at decidedly different results. Mr. Bock's method and the results he gets may be right or not, according to one's individual point of view. It will be noted that in no case did he compare Enquirer with another variety of its own color. Can there not be plausible arguments advanced against the fairness of this method? I think so. Suppose Mr. Bock were called upon to judge a true blue carnation having the size, form and other attributes of Scott. It would not come within forty rods of a certificate under his method. Would he have the courage to turn it down? Every one would pronounce such an act a crime, and yet how could he avoid it? Mr. Bock makes constant use of the word perfection. I must register a most emphatic protest against that. The word is absolutely and entirely out of place in connection with any horticultural product.

As the above is being written the mail brings the current issue of your New York contemporary, in which the writer is not only flayed, but salt is liberally sprinkled over his bleeding remains. First, about that alleged misquotation of Scripture: Did our friend ever see the elder Sothern as the "Crushed Tragedian?" Probably he is too young to have seen him. The tragedian, many will remember, was in the habit of delivering some high flown sentiment followed by the words, "Part Shakespeare, part my own—mostly my own."

After reading the aforesaid article carefully, I am unable to understand exactly what the gentleman is driving at, and—begging his pardon—I doubt if he quite knows himself. He seems to be in the position of the man astraddle of the fence—a very convenient position by the way—but in endeavoring to get down on both sides of it at the same time, it is very difficult to avoid becoming a bifurcated biped. The writer in question says he has always supposed the scale of the American Carnation Society was a uniform standard to judge by. A scale of points is not a standard to judge by—never was a standard to judge by—never will be. It is a numerical statement of the society's idea of the relative value of the attributes of a carnation, and can only be used in estimating the total value of any flower by comparing that flower with some standard either existing or ideal. No official standard exists today, and it is evident that different judges are working from entirely different standards. Let the society give us a definite standard and with good judges much more nearly uniform results may be obtained. The gentleman's discussion of the results to be obtained by judges lacking knowledge of the flower is useless. There is no method by which an incompetent judge can be relied upon for trustworthy work.

W. N. RUDD.

Being one of the judges who awarded 100 points to Carnation Enquirer, I will claim the privilege of a reply to the remarks of our friend, Theo. Bock. In Mr. Bock's opinion the Chicago judges were away off. He asks himself the question, "Is Enquirer perfection of color?" and answers "No; it has too much salmon to be a true pink." Pardon me, but what does Mr. Bock consider to be a true pink? How many men can you find who agree on any given shade as ideal? Then again, are judges required to interpret what a true pink may be? For myself, Brother Bock, I may prefer a pink with a shade of salmon and you a shade with more red in it, but it does not follow that either shade would be an imperfect color, and for the present color must be considered good if evenly diffused over the flower.

Now to Mr. Bock's second question and his answer: "Is Enquirer perfection in size? No; No. 666 stands right here and is decidedly larger." Let me ask what is the standard of size? Is it John Thorpe's ideal four-inch flower? Is a flower four inches in diameter more perfect than one measuring a half inch less? Third question: "Is it perfection in calyx? Armazindy and Mrs Bradt have finer calyxes." In what respect, Brother Bock? Does not the calyx of Enquirer allow the flower to fully expand without splitting? What more do you want? And again your query: "Is it perfect in stem?" You answer: "Certainly not; Armazindy stands right here, as straight as a lot of cane stakes." Well, if we accept the rigid stem of Armazindy as perfection we might err in judging Enquirer, but I for one do not consider a rigid stem an ideal one. A stem is considered good that bears up a large flower and keeps it in an upright position for a whole day in a warm room, as does that of the carnation under discussion.

"Is Enquirer good in substance?" Mr. Bock asks, and admits "it is fair but not perfection." Perhaps not according to Mr. Bock's standard of perfection, but this is simply a slight difference of opinion. "Is it good in form? Why, Indiana is there, which is better." In what way? Indiana is perfect in form I will cheerfully admit, but in what way is it better? As to petalage we might have been wrong, since we did not count the petals of the different sorts that were under judgment but as 'petalage" does not appear in the scale we will pass that by as not to the point. Now as to fragrance, which according to our rules scales five points; here there might be a chance for a difference. The judges' "smellers" might be off and I will frankly admit that mine were not in perfect working order on that fateful trial day; still there were two other judges besides my humble self, and men, too, with knowledge of the duties entrusted to them and with integrity questioned by none.

Yes, Friend Bock, judges are but human and liable to err but before we criticise the judgment of others let us be sure that the ground we contend for is firmly under our feet. We judge things as they are placed before us. Enquirer, as shown in Chicago, was judged as perfect in its class, as a pink, and pronounced so, not alone by the judges but by all who attended our show, at least by those not directly interested. Still there remains the question of the standard of excellence. Who will solve the problem? Will Brother Bock?

Suppose we ask the American Carnation Society to formulate a set of rules whereby our future judges may be governed. Something to this effect:

First, size.—No carnation flower shall be entitled to score the full number of points which measures less than four inches in diameter; but hold, our present ideal of size may be surpassed in the near future and would it not be safe to say six inches to avoid all possible error?

Second, stem.—The natural tendency (and some of us are foolish enough to think one of the chief charms of a carnation) is a slight droop of the flower, which must be tabooed. Let us adopt a model for a stem, the type of Armazindy, as Mr. Bock suggests. To some it might appear slightly stiff and ungraceful, but never mind that; the stem must be rigid and unyielding; let us compare it to a cane stake, if you will

Third, form.—If the form of Enquirer, Indiana, and we might name several others, is not up to the ideal let our carnation society construct a model, a certified copy of which be furnished to the judges. Let them compare the flowers on exhibition and if found that any of the petals in any one bloom curl in a form not in conformity with the model let us consider it imperfect.

Fourth, substance.—How shall we define its perfection? By the number of petals in the bloom? This might be misleading, as the petals in the blooms of different varieties are of an unequal size. Perhaps we might adopt a scale by weight. I am open for suggestion.

Fifth, color.—Let us say pink for argument's sake. Be sure first you are right as to the exact shade. We have flesh pink, shell pink, rose pink, salmon pink, carmine pink; how many others I don't know, but "true" pink you say is what we want. Well, true pink the artist tells us is a shade of color called, I think, "lake." Let us procure a sample of this pigment and compare our flower with it; if it does not conform to our standard we must reject it. To the vision of us poor mortals the sheen, the glow, the indescribable color tone of a flower, ever changing from different points of view and under different lights, may be infinitely more charming, but it will never be true pink as compared with the pigment color.

Sixth, fragrance.—How shall we set our standard of fragrance? We employ different terms in expressing various degrees of sweet odors. We award 5 points to fragrance. Let us say, slightly fragrant, 1 point; quite fragrant 2 points; sweet, 3 points; very sweet, 4 points; highly scented, 5 points; and then let some enterprising inventor get up a device to register the relative strength of odor and we have clear sailing, otherwise the refractory smelling organ of a future judge might play the mischief.

Yes, it is all very well to set up a model of excellence before your mind's eye and steadily work up to it. You may fondly imagine you have attained it, but don't deceive yourself; some unfeeling mortal is sure to arise and shatter your dream. Perfection to-day will be regarded as only a poor beginning a hundred years hence. F. F. BENTHEY.

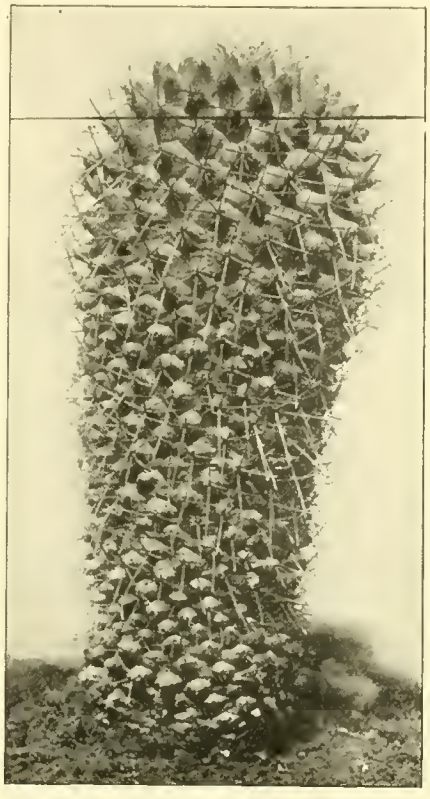
I was pleased to see Theo. Bock take this matter up and very ably point out where, in his opinion, the Chicago judges were wrong in awarding Carnation Enquirer 100 points. It is the general verdict among florists (as far as I have heard) that it was a great mistake. All who have seen Enquirer admit, however, that it is a fine and valuable variety, but I doubt very much if the sort has yet been produced that is worth 100 points. We would like to see a pink carnation as large as No. 666 with the stem of Major Pingree, the fragrance of Jubilee, substance of Mrs. Bradt, form of Olympia and the color of Mary Hill. But can we expect or even hope to see all these good qualities in one variety? While in New York a few weeks ago I saw many new carnations that were marvelous, but not a single variety that was perfection in every point. Mr. Rudd says, on page 774 of your issue of February 3: "The assumption seems to be quite generally made that the points awarded measure the flower's qualities on a standard of absolute perfection." Why certainly it does, Mr. Rudd, and a moment's thought should convince you that 100 points out of a possible 100 means perfection. If, as Mr. Rudd has said, there is no absolute standard of perfection, the American Carnation Society should lose no time in setting such standard. A few years ago the judges in New York awarded Mrs. Perrin chrysanthemum 100 points, which, no doubt, was a greater mistake than was made in the case of Enquirer. W. W. COLES.

Profits of Carnation Growers.

[Read by P. Campbell Erdman before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore, February 12, 1900.]

You ask me to give you some idea of the profit at which carnations can be produced by a commercial grower. As I do not grow any fancy carnations I can only give my views on a medium and usual grade of stock. I will give you the cut and prices obtained from two houses, one 32x50 feet, which is a fairly good one, and one sash house 15x100 feet, which is very ordinary.

The house 32x50 contains about 1,100 plants of Daybreak and several other varieties. Starting from October 13 we cut that month 1,553 flowers, for which we received $22.89. In the month of November we cut 2,200 flowers, for which we received $33. During the month of December we cut 2,250 flowers, for which we received $74. In the month of January we cut 3,800 flowers, for which we received $76, and in February we have cut to date 900 flowers, for which we received $18, making a total cut from October 13 to February 12 of 10,703 flowers, and cash returns of $223.89. Allowing for seven tons of hard coal, which cost $33.95, leaves a balance of $189.84, a cut of nearly ten flowers to the plant, and a fraction over 2 cents each for the flowers.



DISEASED MAMMILLARIA.—REMAINING HEALTHY PORTION INDICATED ABOVE LINE AT TOP.

The sash house has about 1,400 plants of Scott. The cut in October was 1,745 flowers, which brought $17.45. The November cut was 2,000 flowers, for which we received $20. In December we cut 2,800 blooms, which brought $56. The January cut was 3,560, which sold for $53.40, and the February cut to date was 1,175, bringing $17 62. The total cut from the house to date was 11,280 flowers; cash received $164.47. Consider that I burned eight tons of coal to heat the house, which cost $38.80, it leaves a balance of $125 67. This shows about an average of seven and three-fourths flowers to the plant, to date, and something over 1¼ cents per flower.

Our carnations were planted in September, and we kept no account of flowers cut before October 13, as we took no regular orders for them before that date, but I suppose we sold quite a few dollar's worth before that time.

We have never grown any fancy carnations and give no especial care to our plants, but sometimes neglect them for other things we think more important, and which pay us somewhat better; but I think a usual grade of carnations (not fancy flowers) can be grown profitably at 1½ cents per flower. I read in trade journals that in New York they sometimes go at $5 per thousand, but as they are way ahead of us up north, I suppose they make it pay at "any old price." We have no commission to pay for selling our flowers, and, when it amounts into the hundreds, commission amounts to an item. I have tried to give you a correct account of two small houses, and any flower we cut we tried to put down, in the time mentioned. We sold all, and none went on the dump.

Note on Gloesporium Cactorum.

This parasitic fungus was first described by Dr. Bertha Stoneman in 1898 (Bot. Gaz. 26: 82, Aug. 1898). It was found by her on several varieties of cacti in 1896 and 1897. During the last two years the disease has made great progress on the cacti in the conservatories of the Botanical Department at Cornell University, and bids fair to destroy all species of the genus mammillaria grown there. It was found by the writer on Mammillaria meiacantha, M. macrantha, and M. Odieriana, also on the horticultural species M. Roelsii, M. fragalis, M. centriaveta and M. Vocii. The same or a very similar disease was observed on several species of the genera cereus, echinopsis and echinocactus. The general appearance of the diseased plants of these genera was very similar to that of diseased plants of the genus mammillaria, a much poorer development of acervuli being the most important variation, but as this differed considerably with different plants of the species Mammillaria Vocii it is probably not significant. Therefore there is little doubt that it was the same parasite in all cases.

For details regarding the botanical character of this fungus the reader is referred to Dr. Stoneman's paper. The point of attack seems to be, in nearly all cases, near the base of the plant, at the surface of the ground. The first visible indication of the disease is the appearance of small, irregular, yellowish spots on the "stems." Later, these spots take on a rusty-brown color and increase in number and size until the entire stem has become covered. Still later, numerous small dark-colored acervuli make their appearance on the now thoroughly browned, decaying spots. In these acervuli were found pycidial spores capable of reproducing the disease on healthy plants.

The accompanying illustration shows a badly affected plant of Mammillaria Odieriana. Unfortunately the photograph does not show the sharp lines delimiting the diseased from the healthy portions of the tissue, so evident to the eye on glancing at the plant. A line has been drawn across the plate at about the point reached by that stage of the disease developing the acervuli. Practically all below the line has become browned and more or less dotted by the minute, black acervuli. Above the line, the stems are spotted more or less, a few of the youngest stems at the apex only having as yet entirely escaped.

Quite a number of diseased plants were carefully examined and pure cultures of the fungus were grown on various media, but the perfect (ascus) stage has not yet been found. Inasmuch as the parasite develops in the tissues of the plant with the protection of the strongly developed cuticle, it would seem that a plant once attacked is beyond the reach of remedial agents. The development of the disease, however, is slow and with the aid of a hand lens it may easily be detected in a plant before it has reached the stage when propagation on neighboring cacti becomes possible, i. e., when spores appear in the acervuli. It might be well to isolate suspected plants pending further development. All plants showing undoubted symptoms of the disease should be destroyed before spores are matured in the acervuli. J. F. CLARK.

ROSES.

ANOTHER CASE OF EEL WORM.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Under a separate cover I send you a sample of my Bride rose plants and would be obliged if you would give me your opinion as to the trouble. They were planted about July 15. The cuttings were taken from plants which I grew the year previous. The young plants looked healthy enough until about six weeks after planting, when they began to drop their leaves, and now they all look like the sample or have been thrown out. The leaves first get soft at the edges, even on plants with buds ready to open. The Bridesmaids are in the same condition. Some of the Perles are similarly affected and more of them have the healthy appearance of last year. The sod is composed of rather sandy rotted soil, three-fourths of this to one-fourth of cow manure. The latter I purchased as two-year-old material, but I am not sure it was as represented, being a poor judge of such matters. Have the roses club root, or is the soil at fault? I use city water, but it is of natural spring origin and, of course, very cold. It is for anything I know the very same water I used last year with no bad result.

E. M. H.

The sample plant was badly affected with club root, but the modules on the roots were quite small. These may be due to the manure or soil, as both often contain the eel worm in quantity. These pests are much more troublesome some years than others, and, what would appear strange, the condition of the seasons does not effect them as far as can be ascertained. One of the best informed men on this subject that I know once suggested to me that an extra hard freezing during winter would reduce these pests in the soil to a minimum, but on fully testing this later on he came to the conclusion that it had no effect on them whatever. There does not appear to be any safeguard against them but to thoroughly sterilize the soil, or in other words to kill them by live steam. This is an expensive operation, particularly where only a comparatively small amount of soil is required, as it costs just as much to fit up an apparatus as it does where large quantities are to be treated, hence the proportionate extra expense. Outside of this the next best thing appears to be liberal waterings of clear lime water.

New and Noteworthy Orchids at Boston.

The past year will go into history as a memorable one in the annals of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society so far as the introduction of new orchids is concerned, there having been no less than fifty-five new varieties exhibited, many of them for the first time.

One year ago ways and means were discussed, how best to bring about a more general interest in the newer introductions and hybrids of both American and foreign parentage. Knowing that hybrid orchids were being raised in large numbers in this country, it was thought that, as this society had always been at the front in encouraging anything new horticulturally, it might be advisable to put forth some extra inducement to bring such introductions and hybrids before the society for recognition. It was suggested that three prizes, a gold, silver and bronze medal, be offered "for an American seedling orchid, other than cypripedium, to be accompanied by a colored picture of same, for use of the committee," etc. The intention was to offer the above prizes for the first, second and third best exhibits during the year, the colored plates for use of the end of the year to refresh the memories of the committee. The committee on awards being in doubt as to its authority to offer a gold medal, it was printed in the schedule as two prizes, a silver and bronze medal, and it is unnecessary to add that there were no entries for the prizes.

The present chairman of the plant committee, upon taking upon himself the mantle of the late chairman, Azell C. Bowditch, commenced to practice the radical ideas which a business training of twenty-three years had proved to be successful methods of creating interest in any line, and a policy of discrimination and liberality, though not extravagant, was inaugurated with results which at the end of the year appear to be most successful. The following list presents a fair idea of the ground covered:

There have been numerous others of the older varieties shown during the year which were worthy of notice as specimens of the attention our growers are giving to this class of plants.

WM. WALLACE LUNT.

Camellia Buds Falling.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please let me know how to treat camellias. My plants are loaded with buds and look healthy, but in the case of about half of them the buds fall off or burst. F. M.

Before an intelligent reply can be made to the above, we should know in what night and day temperatures the plants are growing, if the buds were judiciously thinned as soon as large enough to handle—late in summer or early in the fall—and whether or not the plants are potted in congenial soil, or mayhap the drainage is defective, or they may have had too much or not enough water.

Any of these shortcomings in plant culture may be the cause of the trouble, or it may be a combination thereof. When asking questions to be replied to in these columns a guide towards a reply would be a frank statement or admission as to how plants have been treated in the past as to temperatures—not average temperatures, but the respective night and the day temperatures—and whether the plants have at any time been found "dust dry" or "soaking wet," remaining so in either case for any length of time. A medical doctor is not satisfied with a description of symptoms of a patient; he must make a personal visit and have an interview with the ailing subject and thus have said subject speak as to the nature of the trouble, where located and everything appertaining thereto, and in that way a more nearly correct diagnosis of the case may be expected.

Briefly stated, camellias should be firmly potted in three parts good loam with a fourth part of peat and enough sand or pulverized charcoal to make the soil sufficiently porous so that water will pass off freely, which, generally speaking, should be copiously applied, excepting when the plants are in a night temperature of about 40°; then greater caution should be exercised. After they have done flowering, they may be placed in a warm, moist temperature, say 60° at night, until growth is completed, when they may be removed to cooler and more airy quarters. At no time should they be allowed to become dry at the root, because a camellia should never be over-potted, and the ball of a healthy plant will be one mass of working, hungry roots, and if it is slighted in watering a few times the ball will naturally become dry to the very center. If that should be the case, an unusual effort will have to be made to give it a thorough soaking. This may be done, if the plant be not too large, by immersing it over the rim of the pot in a bucket of water, allowing it to remain an hour or so, until the operator is reasonably sure that water has penetrated to the very center of the mass of soil and roots. If it is impracticable on account of its size to give a thoroughly dry plant a good watering in the way indicated, a sharp pointed stick, or better still, a stout piece of iron sharpened to a long, tapering point, may be used to pierce holes towards the center of the ball, and then it may take several waterings before saturation is assured.

I have thought it necessary to be thus explicit on the watering question, because dryness at the root, I believe, is the most probable cause of the trouble. E. L.

TOMATO FROGMORE SELECTED.

Tomato Frogmore Selected.

The illustration gives a very good idea of this excellent under-glass tomato, which is rapidly making a place for itself in this country. Mr. Herrington tells me that he likes it better than any as a free cropping, free setting, medium sized variety and finds a ready sale for it on the New York market. The fruit is of medium size, very uniform and smooth in outline, almost round in shape, solid and very firm; color clear bright scarlet, with very deep flesh and remarkably small seed space. It was awarded a first-class certificate by the Royal Horticultural Society. Our cousins across the water certainly know a thing or two about selection and breeding and this tells even with our favorite fruit, the tomato, with which we had flattered ourselves we had almost reached the limit of perfection, and hardly expected to have the pleasure of welcoming improvements from abroad. There are now two foreign varieties, Sutton's Best of All and Frogmore Selected, that have made a place for themselves on this side as good forcers and there are a number of other promising new sorts under trial that may be heard from later.

G. C. WATSON.

Sutton & Sons, Reading, England.

The establishment of Sutton & Sons has long been one of the most famous in England and is well worth a visit, even at the season of the year when outdoor operations are suspended. Sutton & Sons are noted for the excellence of their seeds and the purity of stock sent out and the advanced price charged for their goods is warranted when the extra care is considered that is exercised to bring their product up to the highest possible standard. On the day of our visit a great many of the different varieties were being put up in packages ready for the spring trade. Such seeds as peas and beans are all sorted by hand. All the defective or small seeds are picked out and destroyed, thus insuring a uniformity of quality which can only be obtained by strict measures.

A visit to the accounting department must convince one that the business of this firm is enormous. Two ledgers each eight inches thick are required for the customers whose names begin with the letter S, which gives some idea of the number of accounts the concern carries. In the office there are some eighty or ninety clerks employed. It is claimed by this firm that one colonial agent has been supplied with a consignment of 60,000 packets of horticultural seeds. A single order for farm seeds filled thirty-nine iron tanks, each having a capacity of 400 gallons, and in one ship seed potatoes weighing nearly 100 tons were despatched to a customer in South Africa. With these facts some idea can be formed of the extent of Sutton & Sons' foreign trade, the stock for which is, in many cases, especially prepared.

Primulas and cyclamens occupy nearly all the greenhouses and among the primulas I noted some which pleased me very much. Personally I much prefer the single varieties, though some of the double ones seen here cannot fail to claim a great many admirers. Among the giant flowering varieties which appealed to me for their color, form, size and habit were Giant Pink, a light Daybreak; Giant Crimson, very fine color with darker eye, and Giant White, a grand flower. Sutton's Reading Blue and Sutton's Cambridge Blue are the two best blue primulas that have ever come under my notice and if grown well would be among our best selling pot plants, as would Sutton's Fern-leaved Blue, Crimson King, Snowdrift and Brillant Rose. Some of the excellent double varieties have very pretty crested foliage which is called moss curled. Several forms of Primula obconica grandiflora were in fine shape, as was a house of Primula stellata, which I consider the best of all primulas for decorative purposes, the plants being in full bloom a long time. There were two colors here, white and pink.

Among the cyclamens were some very fine forms, most of them of great size, each plant being covered with bloom. The most distinct variety of cyclamen I have seen is Suttons' Salmon Queen, which as the name implies, is a beautiful salmon pink, and, though not quite as large as some of the giant flowering varieties, it is a decided acquisition. Vulcan is an intense crimson, the darkest of all cyclamens, very much of the color of General Maceo carnation. These two varieties, with White Butterfly, took my fancy the most. These plants are all grown for seed or for tests and experiments and I found everything done with a thoroughness which secured my admiration. CHAS. W. JOHNSON.

MEETING OF THE CLUB.—MUCH ENTHUSIASM.—REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.—SILVER MEDAL FOR THE BIG CARNATION.—NEW MEMBERS.—THE BUSINESS SITUATION.—SEEN AT FORD'S.—BURNS' NEW PROPERTY.—VARIOUS NOTES OF INTEREST.

The February meeting of the New York Florists' Club was one of the best on record. The air was full of enthusiasm on convention preparations and the elation of the sporting element over the bowling incidents of the afternoon was a potent factor in the case, as well. The various sub-committees made reports indicating substantial progress on convention work. That of the committee in charge of the exhibition schedule was particularly interesting and a very fine premium list is now assured beyond a doubt. In addition to the regular prizes it was voted that a special club trophy of $100 value be awarded to the society whose members win the largest number of premiums, either medals or certificates, at the horticultural exhibition. The report on the recent dinner, made by Chairman John N. May, was very gratifying in every respect and in this connection a cordial vote of thanks was passed for those who had contributed flowers and plants, also to Mr. Brower for arranging the decorations. Mr. Ward made a very pleasing and complimentary report on the recent dinner of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society at Poughkeepsie, which he had attended. A silver medal was voted as an award to Dailledouze Bros. for their superb carnation No. 666. There were present Messrs. Ed. Norman, from Lenox, and J. T. Butterworth, from So. Framingham, Mass., both of whom made pleasant remarks. Seventeen new proposals for membership were made.

Business is hardly up to expectations, it being the height of the season and the crop generally off, also a much livelier trade was, with reason, anticipated for this week, and especially for Valentine's day, than has been experienced. Violets tailed to show anything like their activity of the past and all other lines were proportionately slow. Roses are generally lacking in color, even in the best grades.

Shipments of remarkably fine Yellow Prince tulips with very long stems are coming in to Ford Bros. from W. Hillebrecht. A seedling white carnation seen at Ford's gives every promise of being a winner. The flower is large and well-built and stem is all right. It comes from Eastburn, of Kennett Square, Pa., and is named the Eastburn.

On the property recently bought at Spring Valley by A. S. Burns are one house of Scotts, 20x200, and four houses of violets and mignonette, each 12x100. Other houses will be added. It is generally understood that the investment is for A. S Burns, Jr., and is a good bargain as all of Mr. Burns' trades are reputed to be.

J. J. Perkins has formed a copartnership, the new firm being Ghormley & Perkins, and a lease has been taken of J. K. Allen's old stand at 57 West Twenty-eighth street.

A well-gotten up circular, signed by the officers of the New York Florists' Club and sent out from Secretary Young's office to florists within easy distance of the city, calling attention to the great convention and exhibit of next August, has developed much interest and resulted in a substantial increase in membership.

Thos. Young, Jr., has leased the vacant store next door to his present location, thus securing space which more than doubles his facilities.

B. Suzuki arrived from Japan on February 14.

Cleary & Co. will have another big Japanese sale on February 19 and 20.

A BUSY WEEK AT THE HUB.—EVERYTHING SELLS AT SIGHT.—NO ADVANCE IN PRICES EXCEPT UPON EXTRA SELECT BRIDES AND BRIDESMAIDS —FARQUHAR LECTURES ON HAWAII.—EXCELLENT EXHIBITS.—HAYES ESTATE TO BE SOLD—POULTRY PRIZE WINNERS.—VARIOUS ITEMS.

This is a busy week with everybody in the flower trade. These are the days when the wholesalers' ice boxes stand empty and forlorn and the roses and carnations are distributed in little piles as soon as received, each with a piece of paper on top marked "sold," while the telephone keeps up a jingling continuously, and the most persuasive and conciliatory clerk is delegated to attend to its troubles. The market is early cleaned out, and before the doors of the big stores in the neighborhood are fairly opened the box carriers have taken their homeward way, pockets lined with good money, and every man an inch or two taller than he was, and with his head chock full of plans for doubling up either the price or the product or both at once. Still there is an unmistakable stubbornness in the air this season that bodes ill for any attempt to advance values beyond average limits, and the cause for present congratulation lies in the fact that everything is readily sold and nothing sacrificed, rather than that high prices are obtainable. The only advance of note over rates of last week is in the case of the highest grades of Bride and Bridesmaid roses, which, at present writing, are bringing $25 per hundred, but they are superb flowers. All qualities find buyers, however, and the good demand extends all the way down the list, even to the much-abused "bulb stuff," and violets are having the merriest kind of a time.

J. K. M. L. Farquhar delivered a lecture before a large audience at Horticultural Hall on Saturday, February 10, on the Gardens, Fields and Wilds of the Hawaiian Islands, illustrated with a series of beautiful stereopticon views. On the exhibition tables in the lower hall were a number of interesting contributions, including a grand Cattleya Trianæ with forty blooms, from Jas. Brydon, gardener to Bayard Thayer; another cattleya, and an unidentified oncidium from Peter B. Robb, gardener to Edw. Whitin; a collection of cut flowers from Mrs. Gill, and one of the best lots of violets ever shown here, from James Comley.

A decree has been allowed in the Supreme Court, authorizing the trustees of the F. B. Hayes estate, at Lexington, to sell the property as a whole or to lay out streets through the grounds and sell in house lots, as may be found most advisable.

James Rough and Judge Hoitt returned from the New York poultry show with no end of ribbons, and strutting with a self-consciouness rivaling that of their prize pouter pigeons. A special silver cup, valued at $100, was among Mr. Rough's trophies.

C. W. Ward, of Queens, N. Y., is announced to talk before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on "Carnations and their Development," on March 10.

Prof. C. S. Sargent returned on February 4 from a short European trip.

F. Law Olmstead, Jr., has been appointed to conduct the new course in landscape architecture at Harvard University.

Visitors: J. M Gasser, Cleveland, O.; W. E. Chappell, Providence, R. I.; Geo. Cooke, St. Albans, Vt.; C. B. Knickman, New York, and John Gunn, Whitinsville.

A WEEK OF HEAVY BUSINESS.—LOCAL BUYING AND SHIPPING TRADE BRISK.—A CONTINUED SHORTAGE OF STOCK.—VIOLETS THE ONLY ITEM IN THE DUMPS.—REINBERG RECEIVING NEW CARNATIONS.—SUPT. FALCONER IN TOWN.—JOTTINGS HERE AND THERE.—VISITORS.

This has been a busy week in the wholesale district, the busiest week since Christmas. The local retailers have been buying heavily and the shipping orders have been coming in at a rate which puts a "quietus" upon the croaker who decants upon the decadence of the country trade. A great many of the orders came from long distances and called for large quantities of material, and some of them were not shipped in full. The rose cut is increasing and fair quantities were available for the ordinary demand, but the increased call could not be met in all cases. It must be borne in mind that only a portion of any day's receipts is good enough for shipping, and that local buyers must have a part of that. Carnations have been ordinarily plentiful and generally of excellent quality, but the demand has consumed them all; in fact the only item at all slow is violets, and there have been few too many of the first quality in this line. It is rumored that a speculator last week, planned a corner on violets, but it has not developed, and probably will not. Some weeks since, when violets were much scarcer than at present, a retailer had use for a large quantity, and in a few hours placed orders for 70,000 for delivery next morning. One commission house stated this week that they should welcome an order for 50,000 violets for the next morning.

Peter Reinberg has received 3,000 cuttings of The Marquis carnation, a big shipment of Genevieve Lord cuttings from Weber & Sons, and 1,000 of the new white, Peru. It is all good stock. Mr. Reinberg has a big order in for cuttings of Mrs. Lawson, and will have all the new and most of the old favorites on his place next season.

Adam Schillo, who enjoyes almost a monopoly of the lumber trade of the big growers north of Chicago, finds the florists' trade so desirable that he is reaching out for orders from near-by states. He supplied the posts, siding and bench lumber for the South Park Floral Company's new range at New Castle, Ind.

Superintendent Falconer, of Schenley Park, Pittsburg, was a visitor early in the week. Mr. Falconer is taking a brief vacation and intends to visit Denver, Salt Lake City and various coast points.

A. Dietsch & Co. have shipped the cypress for the big range of new houses for the South Park Floral Co., of New Castle, and building operations will be rushed to completion as soon as the weather will permit.

Mrs. Windmiller, of the Windmiller Co., Mankato, Minn., who has been in this city for the past two months, returned to her home on Tuesday.

Wietor Bros. sent their pink sport from Armazindy to the carnation meeting at Buffalo.

There is an unusually good display of Harrisii lilies at Washington Park.

LARGE CONTRACTS FOR BEDDING MATERIAL.—THE PRICES.—CLUB MEETING FULL OF SPIRIT.—PROFITS OF CARNATION GROWING.—PANDORA'S BOX.

The city contracts for bedding plants were finally given out on February 12, as follows: E. A. Seidewitz is to furnish 92,000 at the following rates: Alternantheras, $20 per thousand; acalyphas, $41; cannas, dwarf French in 4 inch pots, $48; celosia, in 3-inch pots, $35; Achyranthes Lindenii, 2½-inch pots, $23; oxalis, 2½ inch pots, $25; Lorenia Montenegro, 2½-inch pots, $25; geraniums, 4 inch pots, $50; ricinuses, 4-inch pots, $38; coleus, 2½-inch poth, $20; petunias, single, 2½-inch pots, $20. The Ruxton Floral Co. furnishes about 45,000 plants, all in 2½-inch pots, at the following rates: Ageratums, $20; coleus, $20; salvias, $25; Vinca rosea, $20. Black Bros. received the contract for $25,000 plants, all in 2½-inch pots, at the following prices: Centaurea, $20 tagetes, $20; Pyrethrum aureum, $18; dwarf nasturtiums, $20; rudbeckias, $20; zinneas, $20; echeveria, three varieties, $35; Caladium esculentum, 4-inch pots, $40. Smaller lots were awarded to G. V. Smith, I. H. Moss, Fred. G. Burger and Wm. McRoberts, Jr.

The club met on the evening of February 12, and there was enough energy in the members present for two meetings. Three new members were elected, Wm. Fraser, W. Norris and H. F. Michell, of Philadelphia. After this, and the appointment of a committee to visit Mr. Julius Lischinger, whose entire left side was paralyzed last week, Robt. Halliday addressed the club in favor of the American Carnation Society and secured a number of members for it and also aroused a determination to have it meet here next year, if possible.

P. C. Erdman's address on the question of the profits in carnation growing was listened to with marked attention and subsequently several members gave their opinions. Mr. Moss thought 2 cents the least that Scott and McGowan could be grown for, and 3 cents the least for fancy varieties. This seemed about the sentiment of all.

The question box was a genuine Pandora's box. The first query was in regard to the city purchasing bedding plants from outside men. As the members present were mostly from inside the limits they had the ensuing debate largely their own way, ignoring the fact that the largest contract went to a man who has been running a store in the city for years. The next question was, "Should the club discourage wealthy capitalists from engaging in the flower business?" A number of members had their say about this, all in the affirmative, when Mr. Binder, at whom the question was aimed, arose and made a statement of the reason why Mr. Parr, his employer, contemplated putting $10,000 in new greenhouses, which silenced all further discussion.

There were several good exhibits on view. MACK.

VALENTINE'S DAY BRINGS EXTRA DEMAND.—A NEW WHOLESALE HOUSE.—NOTES AND VISITORS.

Valentine's day created a demand for choice roses, lily of the valley, violets and Harrisii lilies. The supply of American Beauty roses is limited to a very few and only the wealthy can enjoy them. Good Brides and Bridesmaids are bringing from $6 to $10 per hundred and some extra fine stock as high as $12. Carnations have become scarce but the growers report prospects good for a heavy crop as soon as the weather brightens.

Hudson & Co. have opened a wholesale store with George Walters, the wire design maker, at 1527 Pine street. John M. Hudson is the pioneer wholesale man of St. Louis.

Wm. E. Jordan, who succeeded the Jordan Floral Co., at their greenhouses on Union avenue, report a good business in the retail line.

Ellison & Tesson had a very pretty novelty in the way of a violet box for Valentine's day.

ROSES MORE PLENTIFUL BUT PRICES REMAIN FIRM.—CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS.—CARNATIONISTS GO TO BUFFALO.

Disagreeable weather has tended to make the flower market somewhat uncertain this week. High-grade roses seem to be a little more plentiful but the values have not changed. Funeral work is still using up large quantities of stock.

The Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardners' Club met on February 8, and the following officers were elected: President, E. C. Rineman; vice-president, E. C. Ludwig; secretary, T. P. Langhans; assistant secretary, Geo. Oesterle; treasurer, James Semple; executive committee, P. S. Randolph, Fred Burki and John Bader. J. B. Ferguson was proposed for membership.

The Pittsburg delegation to attend the carnation convention at Buffalo are Fred Burki, Wm. Lauch, J. W. Ludwig, Chas. Siebert, B. L. Elliott, J. J. Murchie and his son.

Visitors: J. M. Gasser, Cleveland; Arnold Ringier, Chicago. G. O.

Joliet, Ill.

The Chicago Carnation Co. is now very busy shipping rooted cuttings of carnations, no less than 75,000 having been already shipped this season. The purchasers of this stock have not yet registered a single complaint, a fact which speaks well for its character. Great care is exercised in the selection of cuttings, and it is thought on this account that the supply of some leading sorts will run short. The demand of high-grade cut blooms at good prices continues surprisingly large. One or two seedlings of unusual merit will be ready for distribution next year, and it is the firm's intention to place several others on the market the following season.

The new establishment of Joseph Labo, Raynor avenue and Shield street, is now in shape for business with good stock and plenty of it. Daybreak carnations grown here in a solid bed are very fine, also Princess of Wales violets. Mr. Labo has a fine line of geraniums for the spring trade.

John Hinds is now in charge of the Illinois State Penitentiary greenhouses.

Chicago's Misfortune.

The following item appeared in the Chicago Record of February 12:

The Illinois House of Correction is about to try an interesting experiment in the reformation of women criminals. Superintendent Sloan has built three large greenhouses, covering a space of four thousand square feet, in which it is intended to grow roses, carnations and chrysanthemums for the Chicago market. The women-prisoners will work in the greenhouses under direction of an expert horticulturist, and it is expected that contact with the growing plants will have a softening and regenerating effect on the hardened natures of the unhappy inmates of the institution.

That's tough on Chicago. Now let the insane asylums, the poor houses and the penitentiaries follow suit with their "softening influences" so that in the concatenation of events the poor devils of flower growers around Chicago may have a little less bread and butter for their hungry kids, and fewer clothes to keep out the icy blasts of Lake Michigan. Anything, O Lord! so long as the Jezebels are softened. G. C. W.

WELL informed glass men now say the price of that commodity may soon go lower.

IT seems that Buffalo is the convention city, not only of the current week, but of the coming year.

E. MOLYNEUX states that Chrysanthemum Mrs. W. C. Egan and C. Countess of Warwick are synonymous and it is highly prized by him.

THE cost of labor and supplies has advanced very considerably in the past few months; the atmosphere of the entire country is saturated with prosperity. If there ever was a time to advance prices in the flower, seed and nursery trades, if there ever will be such a time, that time is now. Let every florist, seedsman and nurseryman take advantage of it.

Names of Plants.

Southboro: No. 2, Begonia semperflorens gigantea rosea; No. 4, Begonia Gloire de Sceaux. The other two specimens were so meager as not to permit of identification.

A New Lily.

In a recent bulletin Prof. W. F. Massey, of the North Carolina Experiment Station, Raleigh, N. C., describes a new lily under the name of Lilium Masseyi. The plant is a native of the high mountain meadows of North Carolina and blooms in July and August, producing reddish-orange flowers.

A Novel Suit.

Some months ago John Coleman, of Williamsport, Pa., instituted remarkable legal proceedings against Daniel E. Gorman, who owns greenhouses directly across the street from Coleman's residence. The plaintiff alleged that the glass sides and roof of the greenhouses are constructed at such angles that at all times when the sun is shining the beams are reflected so that they strike Coleman's lot and the dwelling house with such brilliancy as to render the rooms in the front part of the house and the porch uninhabitable, useless and unfit for occupation and dangerous to the health of the occupants of the dwelling. Mr. Coleman therefore asked for relief as follows: First; that the greenhouses be declared a nuisance; second, that the defendant be compelled to remove the same, and third, that he be restrained hereafter from maintaining buildings constructed of glass on his premises.

The court, after hearing the evidence in the case, gave Mr. Gorman until May 1, 1900, in which to remedy the matter and do away with the reflection, and stated that in the event of his failure to do this, he would grant the injunction as asked. Needless to say, Mr. Gorman feels that this is a very unjust decision, but he has not taken an appeal. If this is good law there may be a good many reflections which will land greenhouse owners in court.

Gardenia Culture.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—What is the best method of propagating gardenias, and how are they most successfully flowered? What is the best variety for market work?

J.

The best gardenias are G. florida and G. Fortunei, though there is a kind in commerce here, under the name of G. Veitchii, which is without doubt one of the above named, and desirable for commercial culture. Propagation is easily effected by cuttings of mature growth in a good strong bottom heat such as is used for the rooting of crotons and other warm house plants. The crop is not available in mid-winter, but from this time on until late fall, the flowers are produced continuously in a temperature of 58° to 60° at night. Rich soil similar to that used for roses is desirable, with abundance of manure water when growing and blooming, as heat and plenty of food are necessary to produce the best results.

E. O. ORPET.

The Federal Inspection Bill.

When the so-called Barlow Bill was first introduced in Congress it was the purpose of its framers to secure a just and uniform protection to all nurserymen, dealing as it did with the matters of inspection of both imported and domestic stock, and it was the intention of the gentlemen in charge to refrain from any act which should involve the florist trade. To this end Section 8 of the bill read: "That the provisions of this Act shall not apply to florists' greenhouse trees, shrubs, plants, bulbs, and so forth, commonly known as florists' stock."

The bill was lost sight of, by all save those most directly interested, in the session in which Congress grappled with the questions of the Spanish war, but has now been re-introduced at the request of C. L. Watrous, of Des Moines, Ia., chairman of the committee on legislation of the American Association of Nurserymen, and recently that committee, with others interested, met at Washington to urge its passage. They found no opposition to the bill in the sub-committee of the House, and it was subsequently reported favorably, but with slight, though important, amendments.

Most important of these amendments, from the florist's standpoint, is the insertion of the words "in interstate commerce" after the word "apply" in Section 8. This has the effect of making all the restrictions of the proposed law apply to florists' stock imported into the United States.

The provision which now must command the attention of all importing florists is as follows:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That it shall be unlawful for any transportation company, after July 1, 1900, to offer for entry at any port in the United States any trees, plants, shrubs, vines, grafts, cuttings and buds, commonly known as nursery stock, unless accompanied by a certificate of inspection by a government official of the country from which the exportation was made, which certificate shall be made in the manner and form prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture, certifying that the contents have been examined and found apparently free from all insect and fungous diseases dangerously injurious to nursery stock. In case any nursery goods are offered for entry without said certificate, it shall be the duty of the collector immediately to notify the Secretary of Agriculture, who shall arrange for inspection, and said collector shall not allow them to pass within the jurisdiction of the United States until proper certificate of inspection has been received. And after the aforesaid date, July 1, 1900, all nursery stock imported in accordance with the aforesaid regulations shall be free from all further inspection, quarantine, or restrictions in interstate commerce; but the Secretary of Agriculture may at any time relieve such articles from inspection by a specific order."

If it is the intention of the committee to make this Act apply to all imported florists' stock, of whatever description, such as palms, bay trees, araucarias, azaleas, bulbs, etc., it would seem that the section just quoted should be re-written to make that point perfectly clear, and that action should not be taken without first looking at the matter from the view point of the legislative committees of the S. A. F. and the New York Florists' Club.

OBITUARY.

ALFRED CHATFIELD.

Alfred F. Chatfield died at Lynn, Mass., February 6. He was of English birth but imigrated to Albany, N. Y., when a young man. Subsequently he became interested in the florist and nursery business. He was a prominent Mason.

OTTO KOZLOWSKI.

Otto Kozlowski, president and manager of the Farmer Seed Co., Faribault, Minn., died of heart failure February 6, aged 36 years. Mrs. Kozlowski and a little daughter survive. Deceased was formerly with W. Wernich, of Milwaukee, and at one time was assistant editor of Haus und Bauernfreund of the same city. The Farmer Seed Co., will continue business as heretofore, Wm. Kueker, brother-in-law of the deceased, assuming the duties of president and manager.

FRANK BECKER.

Frank Becker, of Cambridge, Mass., died Sunday, February 11. Mr. Becker had been in failing health for the past eight years, and suffered greatly for ten days preceding his demise. He was born in Gonsenheim, Germany, seventy years ago next August. He came to this country when twenty-eight years of age. His first employment was in Mt. Auburn Cemetery, where he had a position as foreman, and when he left there it was to go into a business of his own, since which time he has been identified with the florist business in Cambridge. Four years ago he retired from active connection with the business and it has been conducted by his son, F. C. Becker, since that time. Mr. Becker was a member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, and, until recently, of the Society of American Florists, from which he withdrew on account of his illness. He has made many sincere friends in the profession, and always retained the respect and esteem of his brother florists, to whom the news of his death will bring sadness. The funeral took place on Wednesday, February 14, and was attended by a large number of his former business associates.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres.; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

THE John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., is filling an order for seeds from Naples, Italy.

VISITED CHICAGO: E. M. Parmelee, of the John H. Allan Seed Co., Picton, Ont.; S. Y. Haines, en route to Minneapolis.

SEEDMEN should thoroughly digest the proposed federal inspection bill, the salient paints of which are given on another page.

PROPOSALS are out for supplying the seeds to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, bids to be submitted not later than February 20. The list is approximately the same as last season.

NORTHRUP, KING & Co. announce that the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Soo railroads have just put into effect half tariff rates on grass seeds, clover seeds and dwarf essex rape seeds to points on their lines in Minnesota, North Dakota and Montana. This applies to both car and less than car shipments. The railroads appreciate the importance of renewing with tame grasses the natural grasses which are disappearing so rapidly.

Seed Advertising.

Wasn't our king of advertisers caught napping when he published this:—

There are two Seed Catalogues

Published by

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., Philadelphia.

One is the "BLUE LIST," giving wholesale prices in bulk, which is mailed only to Market Gardeners and Florists. The other is which is mailed to the address of any private planter who desires to get for his own garden the Best Seeds that Grow, at moderate prices.

It describes Unique Novelties, and gives much useful information, which cannot be obtained in any other free publication. If interested, send your address, on a postal card. TO-DAY.

BURPEE, Philadelphia.

This is an age in which the fellow who reads thinks he is as good as anybody, trade or otherwise, and it is an unpleasant shock to him to realize that some other individual can get better figures. Is it wise to acquaint him of that fact? If the ad. had been published in a trade paper there might be some excuse; but in the American Agriculturist — well, taking human nature as it is, we all know what to expect in a case like this—the list of market gardeners and florists would greatly increase or the orders would go to John Wanamaker or some other shrewd chap who swears he sells only at wholesale prices. Don't you think so? Speak up—it is an interesting subject for seedsmen. G. C. WATSON.

NEWPORT, R. I.—Chas. Hurn has leased and taken possession of the Findlay greenhouses.

ROWAYTON, CONN.—E. H. Miller has leased the greenhouses belonging to the estate of the late William Ferris.

SWEET PEA
Burpee's "Earliest of All."

The illustration above was engraved exactly natural size from photograph taken at Fordhook.

Sold only in sealed packages, each bearing our registered trade-mark monogram.

Notwithstanding their dwarf habit and neat, slender foliage, the plants are of vigorous growth and come into bloom always ten days to two weeks in advance of the Extra Early Blanche Ferry, which has been heretofore a week ahead of all other varieties. Growing only two feet in height, the plants do not require the support of brush or trellis. As an illustration of its extremely early-flowering habit, we would state that now (Oct. 15th) we have plants in fine bloom from seed gathered from our spring planting and sown during the latter part of August. A constant succession of bloom may be had from June until November by making sowings about one month apart. Its extremely early flowering habit makes it most satisfactory for the Southern States, as it may be easily had in full bloom before the hot summer weather. The flowers are as large as those of the regular strains of Blanche Ferry, and have long, stout stems, making them entirely satisfactory for cutting; they are borne in close clusters of three, all facing one way. The standards are a bright, rich pink, while the wings are nearly pure white.

BURPEE'S "EARLIEST OF ALL" is not only the earliest to bloom in open ground, but is also the most desirable for forcing under glass for winter cut flowers. The dwarf habit of this variety renders it much more easily grown on the benches, admits of closer planting, and from seed sown during the latter part of August blooms may be cut during the holidays,—while with the taller varieties no blooms could be had before February or March. Per oz., 10 cts.; ¼ lb., 30 cts.; per lb., $1.00.

Burpee's "Blue List." Our Wholesale Price List of Seeds in Larger Quantities is mailed free on application to GARDENERS and FLORISTS.

If You Plant for Profit you should write at once for this Wholesale List. BUT we cannot send it to private planters, even if requested to do so. ☞The prices quoted in THE FARM ANNUAL are as low as we can afford on Retail Orders. Market Gardeners, Canning Establishments and Florists requiring large quantities of seeds are entitled to lower prices wherever possible.

A New Feature in Burpee's "BLUE LIST" that will be of special interest to growers who plant for Profit, is the "plain talks we give, at the head of every department, as to just the best varieties for different purposes.

COMMISSION HOUSE IN THE WEST.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W J PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

THE P. J. Berckmans Co., now has a railway station at their nurseries near Augusta, Ga.

IRVING ROUSE reports that on his recent European trip he found a scarcity of pear seedlings in France.

THE newspapers are circulating a report that San Francisco has voted an expenditure of $4,500,000 for park purposes.

SEVERAL prominent nurserymen agree that the present tendency toward higher prices will be manifest through the next two years.

THE nurserymen of New York are strongly opposed to the proposed state law making fumigation obligatory. They claim it is unnecessary.

THE W. E. Jones Company, of Lincoln, Ill., will shortly open a branch at Fayette, Ia. At first only a warehouse will be maintained, but next year a nursery will be planted.

P. S. PETERSON & SON, Chicago, report the past season's business to have established a new record for them. They make a specialty of established stock and are at present executing several orders for trees of large caliper.

IN the suit brought by the Shady Hill Nursery Co., of Boston, against Helena B. Wainwright, of Hartford, to recover $145 for shrubs alleged to have been sold to Mrs. Wainwright on contract, judgment has been rendered for the defendant. Mrs. Wainwright claimed that she signed her name and address to a paper because the agent represented that he simply wanted her name and address, and being unused to business methods was not aware that she was signing a contract, and the court sustained her plea.

The Elm Leaf Beetle.

This most destructive pest of our most ornamental street tree is rapidly extending the scene of his ravages and each year sees the extent of the devastated territory widely increased. Steam-spraying apparatus and plenty of Paris green industriously applied seems the only resort if an elm is to be left. Tree wardens and superintendents of public and private grounds in hitherto immune districts are making anxious preparations for the appearance of the dreaded scourge and it is the duty of everyone who loves a tree to assist by every means possible, not only in its checking, but by giving timely warning of its approach.

Readers of this paper are requested to report promptly for publication in these columns for general information the appearance of the elm leaf beetle in their neighborhood in order that the direction and rate of its progress may be ascertained and repressive measures put in operation at the time and place most needed.

Prosperity Among Nurserymen.

Nurserymen in all parts of the country report a larger business last fall than for many years, and that the prospects for spring are exceedingly bright. This good time has been a long while coming. For several years past some of the largest concerns in the country have reported a trade barely sufficient to keep their hands together. Many of them reported good business in the way of sales, but prices were very much lower, while labor and other necessary expenses were at the full price. It is a fact that in more than one instance hands were kept on at old rates when lots of help could have been had for less, solely because the $1.50 per day was thought by the employers to be little enough for a man to live on. This is merely mentioned to show that all employers are not the soulless beings they are usually deemed.

The increased demand does not seem confined to any one thing, trees, both ornamental and fruiting shrubs and perennials have been much called for. Small evergreens for florists' use were in particular demand in the fall. There is no question that this is a growing trade. Beds and boxes of summer flowers are replaced with various evergreens. Among the retinisporas and thujas are many of distinct and beautiful foliage, and when arranged tastefully in a bed, make an attractive display. Hotels use these evergreens as well as private houses, both for the filling of window boxes and for use in pots for hallways. Such ones of pyramidal growth as some of the forms of Chinese arbor-vitæ, yews and junipers, are good for this. Nurserymen and florists, too, who will be prepared to meet the demand for such stock are likely to find it profitable.

These evergreens, when used indoors, are not so lasting as if under more natural conditions, and some of our hotels get boxes refilled about New Year's, finding the satisfaction of their guests in viewing the brighter looking boxes to well repay the small cost of the extra plants. As to the size used, it runs from those of one foot to three feet. It takes three to four years to obtain the lesser size from seed or cuttings, but after this the growth is rapid and the greater size is soon attained.

Nurserymen tell us that though undoubtedly the agriculturists are buying more, as evidenced chiefly by increased calls for fruit trees, it is in the sales of ornamental trees and shrubs that the difference is most noticeable. Further than this, the calls are now far more for native trees and shrubs than for foreign sorts. Not only do public parks and gardens use great quantities, but many private estates also.

There is no doubt that increased prosperity is in part due to the intelligent body of landscape gardners. Many of these men combine practical knowledge and scientific attainments in a marked degree.

The Ideal Pink Carnation

GENEVIEVE LORD

Fills the bill. The ladies declare it is just right in color. We claim it has the best stem of any Carnation. That it will rank very near the top in size. That its odor is very sweet. That it is the most profitable Carnation we ever grew. That it has an individuality all its own. Customers recognize it at a glance. There is not a great deal left that is wanting in this variety. If you want to make money, plant it! But don't delay, for stock for delivery prior to March 20 is all sold. It is an easy, rapid grower, however, and the April and May deliveries will make large, fine plants. Some of the finest plants we have are from cuttings from sand planted in the field June 1st. Remember all sold until March 20th. If you wait too long the chances are that we will be sold out of stock. Make yourself safe by ordering at once.

PRICE $2.00 per Dozen, $10.00 per 100, $75.00 per 1000.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 12, 1900.
MESSRS. H. WEBER & SONS, OAKLAND, MD.:
Dear Sirs—We have handled your new Carnation, Genevieve Lord, for the past year, and beg to state that it is one of the finest Carnations we have ever handled. IT HAS BECOME VERY POPULAR HERE IN WASHINGTON, its beautiful color making it a ready seller. Together with color, its most distinct points are its extra long stems and perfect, erect habit. IT HAS A MARKED INDIVIDUALITY, enabling customers to recognize it at a glance. It is one of the few new Carnations that have so many good points, and we feel satisfied that it has a great future before it. It is some little trouble to educate the people up to paying $3 and $4 per dozen for Carnations, but if ANY CARNATION WILL BRING THE PRICE, it is Genevieve Lord.
Yours truly,
(Signed) J. H. SMALL & SONS.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, January 16, 1900.
MESSRS. H. WEBER & SONS, OAKLAND, MD.:
Gentlemen—I want to congratulate you on being the introducer of Genevieve Lord, your new pink Carnation. Although I have not seen it growing, I have seen it exhibited at nearly all seasons of the year, and taking all its good qualities into consideration, I believe it to be THE BEST PINK OF ITS CLASS IN THE MARKET TODAY. It is strictly a commercial flower, and WILL PRODUCE THE DOLLARS AND CENTS. I predict for you a phenomenal sale of this carnation. Yours very truly,
(Signed) E. G. GILLETT.

ST. LOUIS, MO., January 24, 1900.
H. WEBER & SONS, OAKLAND, MD.:
Dear Sirs—In regard to what I think of Genevieve Lord, and what I heard spoken about it at the meeting is this: Color just right and what is wanted, and will sell. Shape and size as good if not better than any Carnation ever sent out, very sweet; stems the best ever seen on any Carnation sent out. In keeping and shipping qualities it beats any Carnation that I have ever seen; as I mentioned last time in my letter to you they looked as fresh as if they had just been cut. Yours very truly,
(Signed) E. SCHRAY,
Secy. St. Louis Florists' Club.

Our catalogue is now ready; in it are listed the above as well as all the new "big ones" at introducers' prices, all the best standard sorts, and a complete list of chrysanthemums, novelties and standard sorts.

Convention Preliminaries.

The committee which the New York Florists' Club has placed in charge of the sports of the convention, wishes to hear, before March 1, from the captain of each team which intends to compete in the convention tournament. The purpose is to arrange the preliminaries. Captains should address Chas. Schenck, 38 West Twenty-eighth street, New York, N. Y.

At St. Louis.

At New York.

A big crowd of bowlers and rooters congregated at the Fifty-seventh street alleys on Monday afternoon, February 13, to participate in the second game in the series between New York, Flatbush and Hudson county. At the game in Hoboken last week the Flatbush team had won out but on this occasion New York showed she was strongest on her own alleys and now has a good margin to her credit in the total of pins, this being the test in this tournament and not the number of games won. As the lists appended show, a few changes were made in the teams, from last week's make up. The next and final games will be rolled at Flatbush:

At Chicago.

There has been little bowling in Chicago since the holidays but on Monday evening several guests, en route to Buffalo, were given exercise on the alleys. It was the first time Wm. Clark, of Colorado Springs, had tried his hand at the game and his score, under such circumstances is very good.

At Flatbush.

Thursday evening, February 8, witnessed a sort of jollification on the bowling alleys over the success of the team at Hoboken, and much hilarity prevailed. Fred Donoghue, of Babylon, was a welcome visitor. The scores were:

Convention Preparations.

At Philadelphia they are already planning to sweep the decks at New York in August and a committee has prepared the following rules to govern the bowling for places on the convention team:

1. The twelve men making the highest average in 100 games shall roll twelve games on outside alleys during July, the eight highest to be the team.
2. Play to commence February 1 and end June 30. No entries received later than April 1.
3. Candidate must declare his intention of competing for this place before commencing each game and there must be three others bowling at same time.
4. No more than four games to be rolled for this contest in any one day.
5. Some of our best bowlers being apt to cross the foul line, and this being a serious defect when the great day comes, the committee recommends a strict enforcement of the foul line rule both on the home and outside alleys during this contest. Each must watch the other closely to enforce this rule.
6. Candidates who are not members of the S. A. F. must become so to qualify, and in the event of refusal the next highest shall take his place.
7. In the outside series, games shall count, each series of three won to count one point; but a record of total pins shall be kept, the highest to count in case of ties.
8. Entries to be made with the chairman of the committee, Robert Kift.

The first shoot of the series between the Frankford and the Florists' Gun Clubs was held at Wissanoming February 10, and was followed by several sweepstake events. The conditions for the match were: Nine men on a side, 25 targets per man, unknown angles, three men from each team making a squad, rapid-fire system. The contest was an interesting one, and though the florists finally won by the narrow margin of seven targets; the results were in doubt until the last few shots were fired. The shooting was in two rounds, the first being at ten targets and the last at fifteen targets. At the end of the first round the Frankford team was three targets ahead, when the first squad finished their second round it was found that Frankford had gained one more target. The florists did not lose their nerve because of this lead, and when the second squad finished they were in the lead by three targets, the last squad adding four more to their credit. For the florists' team Parsons and Cartledge made the high scores, each breaking 23. The summary follows:

F. B. TINKER, PERU, IND:

DEAR SIR—Have now seen your white Carnation Peru growing at three different places, and from appearances it seems to be a good white for commercial purposes.

Yours truly,
F. E. DORNER, JR.

RICHMOND, IND., February 10, 1900.

MR. TINKER, PERU, IND.:

I like the appearance of your new white Carnation Peru as seen growing on the benches. It gives promise of being a useful commercial white variety.

I shall plant a thousand of it for our own use for flowers the coming season.

Wishing you every success, I am

Yours,
E. G. HILL.

Indianapolis Visits Richmond.

The party of Indianapolis florists visiting Richmond on February 10 numbered thirteen, but as evil spirits have no power over the innocent and good, the trip took its course without the slightest accident and, in fact, was one of the most enjoyable excursions we have had for a long time.

On arrival at Richmond we were greeted by J. A. Evans and escorted to the establishment of E. G. Hill & Co., where we found W. W. Coles, of Kokomo, J. A. Newby, of Logansport, F. B. Tinker, of Peru, and J. A. Haugh, of Anderson.

Those who had not visited Mr. Hill's place for some time found the forenoon rather short to inspect the great variety of stock that is handled there. As roses and carnations are at their best just now, they attracted the most attention. The most prominent among carnations are Olympia, Ethel Crocker and California Gold, which Mr. Hill says is about the only yellow carnation which blooms profusely enough to pay. But above all these towers Mary Hill, a pink which is expected to excell even Mrs. Lawson.

In Mr. Hill's rose houses the impression is forced upon the visitor that we are at the beginning of a new era in roseculture and that the much deplored monotony in forcing roses will soon be broken. Mr. Hill has on trial, not only the latest and most promising European novelties, but he also shows some very promising seedlings of his own raising. Grafted roses seem to be growing more in favor and we were interested with the speed of a young man who was doing this work. When it was said that he is the son of John N. May, our interest was redoubled.

In the afternoon the party went to the place of Mrs. E. T. Grave, to inspect her carnation houses. Mr. Hill told us that several eastern carnation experts declared Mrs. Grave's carnations the finest in the country, an opinion that was most heartily endorsed by our party. The varieties most largely grown are Flora Hill, White Cloud, Daybreak, Ethel Crocker, America and a splendid seedling named Dorothy, which is probably best described as Scott brought up to date. Chas. Knopf, who is in charge of the Grave place, certainly deserves great praise for his accomplishments. Encouraged by her success Mrs. Grave intends erecting three more carnation houses 20x200.

The evening was spent at the bowling alleys, the best scores being made by E. G. Hill, W. W. Coles and R. McKeand in the order named.

Our party consisted of W. H. Bertermann, John Grande, John Hartje, John Heidenreich, H. Junge, W. Langstaff, R. McKeand, John Nay, A. E. Nelson, A. Pahud, H. W. Rieman, A. Schreiber and A. Wiegand. H. J.

"MACK RICHMOND"

The Red Carnation. A Sport from Tidal Wave.

We know there have been many red sports from Tidal Wave, but we claim that this one is the peer of its class.

We have grown it for three years, and under the careful selection of our foreman, Mr. Mack Richmond, it has improved each year.

It is not the only red, nor is it the largest, but it will outbloom any carnation ever grown by us, and we have grown a few.

The flowers are borne upon strong, stiff stems, never bursting, entirely free from rust and a splendid grower. Come and see it growing--it may astonish you.

A. D. Rose has now been a year at his new stand and has built up a nice trade. He has made quite a hit on potted myosotis, has shown the people what ericas are when properly grown and points with pride to his bench of fine Mme. His genistas, which have been grown with the ericas, are in fine, compact form for blooming and an entire house is devoted to hydrangeas for Easter.

Was the exclamation of one of the best growers in the west when he discovered this sport, four years ago. By carefully handling it, and not over-propagating it, we are now able to offer to the trade a clean, healthy stock of the best

Red Carnation

On the market, for both grower and retailer. Not quite as large as Crane or Jubilee, but an intense red, on long, stiff stems, averaging Sixty-five Blooms to the plant. Received honorable mention at the Carnation show in Chicago January 19. Rooted Cuttings, $2.50 per 100; 2-in. pots, $3.50 per 100.

Newport, R. I.

The annual ball of the Newport Horticultural Society, held at Masonic Hall, February 7, was a pronounced success, socially and financially. The society has 230 members, some of them skilled decorators, and they never did better work than on this occasion. The guests included numerous social and political lights and the grand march, participated in by 100 couples, was led by Alderman Louis Shanteler and Miss Laurie, daughter of President Robert Laurie. The prize in the cake walk was awarded to Messrs. Casey and Meikle. The committee of arrangements consisted of Messrs. A. E. Burland, Louis Shanteler, W. T. Libby, S. Koschny and Wm. H. Maher, and the reception committee of Messrs. Rob't Laurie, Rob't Johnston, Alex. Ogg, R. Gardner and B. Butterton. Mr. Shanteler was floor director and John T. Allan assistant.

The marriage of Miss Sophia Fadden to Mr. Charles Hurn was a quiet affair, only the immediate friends of the family being present. Miss Fadden has for a number of years conducted a successful florist business on Bellevue avenue. Mr. Hurn until recently was gardener to the Hon. Perry Belmont and left that place to go into business for himself, leasing the estate and greenhouses of William Findley. It is said he intends making rose growing a specialty.

The show windows of Henry Hass and Arendt Brant, on Thames street, are kept well filled with fine stock. They report a good business.

The melons on the estate of Elbridge T. Gerry, of which the AMERICAN FLORIST gave a detailed description about this time last year, have proven a decided success. The gardener, Arthur Griffin, has melons for his employer at all seasons of the year and melons of good flavor at that.

William Findley, who has been seriously ill, is reported as improving. J. J. B.

FORT DODGE, IA.—P. L. Larson reports a good trade this winter.

ETHEL CROCKER

Absolutely the BEST PINK CARNATION ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another). By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety). In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July. With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and the order filled by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished, prepaid, at $1.00 per dozen—amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date, every sample, excepting one, out of several hundred sent, has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES, good little plants, at 75 cts. per 100; $4.00 per 1000. Price list of standard vars. ready now.

ANNUAL BANQUET OF THE CLUB.—SOME VERY GOOD STOCK SHOWN.—TRADE BRISK AND PRICES FAIR.

The annual banquet of the Toronto Gardners' and Florists' Club was an unqualified success. Fifty members were present and the tables, which were spread in the banquet room of Webb's Cafe, were gay with plants and cut flowers. There were some splendid orchids and decorative plants from Exhibition Park and the Horticultural Gardens, and cut flowers from J. H. Dunlop, Manton Bros., H. Dale and Wm. Jay & Son. Dunlop's carnations, Melba, Glacier, Gen. Maceo, Mrs. G. M. Bardt and G. H. Crane were particularly admired. The decorating was the work of E. Collins and J. H. Goodier. The banqueters were in a most jovial mood and the speeches were most enthusiastically received. W. J. Lawrence, P. C. Kennedy, B. J. Score and F. Verrall contributed to the vocal programme.

Trade has been good, with fair prices. Roses have been very scarce, but are now improving in both quality and quantity. Miller & Son's are cutting some very fine carnations, especially Lady Van Horne and Lady Minto, which are good varieties, with long stiff stems, and favorites with many of the large buyers.

J.

GIBSON CITY, ILL.—Swan Peterson is having excellent success with his violets and carnations. He is now shipping a daily average of 3000 violets to the Chicago market.

OWOSSO, MICH.—John S. Schleider has a range of six good greenhouses, each 24x100, and his recently opened down town store, with neat conservatory 22x40, is doing a nice business.

WATERBURY, CONN.—Dalton & Costello have purchased the retail business, with stock and fixtures, of R S. Rasmussen, 199 Bank street. Mr. Rasmussen will devote himself entirely to the business at his greenhouses.

E. I. Rawlings, Wholesale Florist, QUAKERTOWN, PA.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Preceeding the banquet of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society, briefly chronicled in our last issue, the annual meeting of the organization was held and officers elected as follows: President, F. R. Newbold; vice-president, James Blair; secretary, W. G. Gomersall; treasurer, Chas. Mitchell. It was voted to hold quarterly meetings in the coming year, instead of monthly as heretofore. Too much cannot be said in praise of the banquet, which was, in all its features, one of the best a body of horticulturists ever sat down to. The company included many guests of prominence socially and the speeches were gems in their way. The floral decorations were exceedingly rich, including Bougainvillea speciosa, Bignonia venusta, passiflora and lilacs from David Gindra, seedling carnations from C. W. Ward, carnations, roses and violets from Jas. Horrocks, carnations from M. J. Lynch and Liberty roses from Ernst Asmus. Mayor Sherrill promised a prize of $25 value for the best 200 violets at the next show, to be known as the Poughkeepsie prize. Mr. Asmus offers substantial prizes for Liberty rose, Mr. Ward for carnations, President Newbold for table decorations, Wm. Elliott & Sons, Peter Henderson & Co., German Kali Works and others for various other objects and thus a rousing time next fall is assured.

MORRIS, ILL.—G. F. Holmes has purchased the Lee Martin property and will grow plants and flowers for the retail trade.

SALEM, MASS.—Geo. W. Cressy has a new white seedling carnation which has been named for his foreman, Arthur Poppei.

PUEBLO, COL.—Victor Johnson, proprietor of the Lakewood Greenhouses on Claremont avenue, reports his stock in fine shage and trade at his store, just opposite the postoffice, all that could be expected.

MORE ELABORATE DECORATIONS.—MANY FUNERAL FLOWERS.—TRADE GOOD BUT GOOD STOCK SOMEWHAT SCARCE.—A NEW FIRM.—NOTES.

The President and Mrs. McKinley gave the last state dinner of the regular series on February 7, when the members of the Supreme Court were the guests of honor and the East Room was again beautifully decorated, some of the choicest products of the skill of Messrs. Pfister and Brown being employed.

The decorations at the Church of the Covenant, where the remains of Gen. Henry W. Lawton lay in state, were very elaborate. Eight large flags hung from the sides of the dome, the lower ends draped around the four large pillars which were festooned wirh southern smilax. The grand chandelier was tastefully festooned with fine smilax and the pulpit was banked with palms and azaleas. There were many floral designs, some of them superb. The deçorations were under the supervision of G. H. Brown.

The retail trade is very good. First-class stock is much in demand and brings fair prices, but is somewhat scarce. Z. D. Blackstone says he sells more $3 per dozen roses than any other grade.

The Grant Floral Co., Wm. Crawford, manager, have opened a fine store at the corner of Grant Place and Ninth street, N. W. I think it will prove a good stand.

C. F. Hale is confined to the house with a touch of pneumonia and J. Louis Loose has been sick for a week or so with the grip.

L. C. Bobbink passed through Washington the other day. P. G.

TRADE VERY GOOD. — LARGE FUNERAL ORDERS.—THE SHOW AND CLUB MEETING.—LIBERTY AND OTHER GOOD EXHIBITS.—VISITORS AND BOWLING.—OFF FOR BUFFALO.

Business has been very good owing to several large weddings and funerals. The obsequies of the late Governor Goebel, of Kentucky, used up all the available flowers on both sides of the river, and it was estimated that $4,000 worth of flowers were required for this occasion.

The monthly show and club meeting of February 10 was held with the rose a special feature. A vase of the much spoken of Liberty from E. G. Asmus, West Hoboken, N. J., was on exhibition and was the center of attraction. The flowers were superb and the color superior to Meteor. Should this rose prove to be a free bloomer, Liberty will be hailed with delight. George & Allan made a special effort in staging their exhibit; their Brides and Bridesmaids were never better. They also captured first on Meteor and Beauty, on Jubilee carnation and on bulbous stock. Stuart & Haugh, Anderson, Ind., showed a vase of Avondale carnation, a sport of Armazindy. The color is a good pink, flowers medium sized, stem very strong and the variety was awarded 81 points. Corbett & Wilson showed a box of Marie Louise violets in pots, which were grand; this old favorite is still holding its own where well grown. Visitors at the meeting were J. A. Evans and Charles Knopf, Richmond, Ind; W. Bertermann, Indianapolis; Jacob Schultz, C. H. Kunzman and Jos. Coenen, Louisville, Ky.; E. H. Giesy, Lockland, O., and Theo. Bock, Hamilton. The meeting was cut short so as to give the boys a chance to try their hands in bowling. Quite a goodly number escorted the visiting brethren to the Highland bowling alleys, Newport, Ky., where all had a royal good time.

The following left here Wednesday evening for Buffalo: R. Witterstaetter, W. Murphy, W. Sunderbruch, E. H. Giesy, J. A. Evans and E. G. Hill, of Richmond.

A good adv. in a good paper will bring good returns.

There are buyers for all kinds of stock advertised in the American Florist.

Pleasant Hill, Mo.

PROSPERITY ATTENDS MR. KELLOGG.—PLANS FOR NEW GREENHOUSES.—BUSINESS DOUBLES IN FOUR YEARS.—GOOD STOCK IN ALL LINES.—AN OPERA HOUSE.

Business is prospering with George M. Kellogg and plans are on foot for an immediate extension of the range of glass by five houses 30x250 feet. The houses now in operation cover about four and one-half acres, there being something like 140,000 square feet of glass, by far the greatest expanse in this territory, and the contemplated addition will bring the total close to the 200,000-mark.

It was in 1885 that Mr. Kellogg embarked in the florist business, growing a general line of stock; now his efforts are principally directed to the production of cut flowers. For the past few years his trade has been developing rapidly, more than doubling in the past four years and increasing many thousands of dollars with the establishment of his wholesale and retail store at Kansas City. Mr. Kellogg grows pretty nearly everything in his line, from American Beauty roses to violets, sweet peas and mushrooms, the mushroom cellar with its 2700 square feet of beds being one of the most profitable specialties on the place. The stock produced is as good as can be grown, whether it be roses, carnations, chrysanthemums, greens or bulbous flowers, and every attention is given to each item on the list.

The establishment regularly employs from thirty-five to fifty people and most of them have been there many years. His heating apparatus consists of a battery of eight boilers of a combined capacity of 325 horse-power and there are over forty miles of steam piping in the houses.

Mr. Kellogg is a wide awake, progressive man, a participant in many activities outside his own greenhouses, among them the S. A. F. His home is surrounded by 100 acres of as good land as there is in Missouri, and he has recently consummated certain promising investments in Porto Rico. One of Mr. Kellogg's latest works is the erection of an opera house in Pleasant Hill, which will be opened on April 15 with Easter services, and in which he showed his appreciation of the value of advertising by causing the second drop curtain to present a view of his greenhouses. The new structure will cost $15,000, according to the architect's plans.

TITUSVILLE, PA.—John Schearer, landscape gardener, shot his wife and himself on February 2.

MUSCATINE, IA.—August Smith has purchased eight acres of land of the Muscatine Fair Association and proposes to enlarge his range of glass in the spring.

BALDWINSVILLE, MASS.—John H. Putnam, who is an all-around athlete, has decided to give up base ball and other work which interferes with the management of his florist business, and will hereafter give only about six weeks of the fall to coaching some foot ball team. Last fall he coached the eleven of the Technical Institute at Worcester and did it well.

THE CARNATION MEETING.

Complicating the Judging.

It would seem that the extreme of "paternalism" had been reached in the proposition made at the Buffalo carnation meeting that the judging of new varieties be further complicated by putting the flowers through the test of shipping to committees at various remote points for the purpose of ascertaining their keeping qualities and by providing for visiting delegates to note and report on the blooming qualities of new sorts to determine and publish their exact commercial value.

ROBERT HALLIDAY.
President of the American Carnation Society.

Despite a few lucky strikes, we should remember that the hybridizers' art is no gold mine. Were it not for their devotion to the science itself our hybridizers would hardly find sufficient remuneration to induce them to continue in the uncertain business of raising and introducing new varieties. Their work is, to a great extent, a labor of love and their readiness to accept the judgment of their fellows by submitting their productions for exhibition and critical comparison at every reasonable opportunity should be a sufficient guarantee to buyers that the introducers are not lying awake nights planning how to mislead them, but have an equal interest in disseminating only things that will bring to them confidence and honor. The grower whose timidity, distrust or parsimony is such that he shrinks from risking the investment of a few dollars in new introductions which have successfully passed through the ordeal of repeated public exhibition and the search-light of the ever-alert trade press is not likely to dazzle the floricultural world with his enterprise or business success.

So, even if the proposition were practical, which it is not, we cannot see that there is any cause for seeking to burden dealers and encumber a useful society with a scheme to ensure carnation growers against possible loss through buying new things from their brother florists. But we all know that soil, weather and methods of culture have everything to do with the substance of a flower and that its lasting qualities are further very largely dependent upon time and manner of cutting and subsequent handling and exposure. Consequently it is difficult to see how any conclusions could be reached by the proposed plan that would have any direct value.

As one member remarked when the proposition was up for discussion at Buffalo, "If the growers would give less attention to judging and more to growing it would be greatly to their advantage."

Jottings of the Convention.

Hastily written manuscript caused us to say "Eugenie" where "Enquirer" was intended in last week's report of the prizes awarded in the sweepstake competition and in the notice of seedlings certificated and necessitates an humble apology. Enquirer proved to be a great keeper.

Another wonderful keeper, as indicated by the way it showed up at the banquet on Friday evening, was H. A. Molatsch's red seedling. It only fell two points short of taking a certificate. It might have won out had the judges foreseen how wide awake it could keep.

C. W. Ward's Morning Glory was much admired. He also showed a fine collection of novelties and seedlings. Gomez and Maceo were fine. Morning Glory and a lot of dashing seedlings were also staged by F. Dorner & Sons.

Mention of the award of first prize to Weber's vase of fifty Mayor Pingree was unintentionally omitted. The proportion of yellows in the exhibition was exceedingly slim, they being almost as scarce as were the ladies at the sessions of the society.

The Canadians had some good things on view. Miller, of Bracondale, had a gem in Lady Van Horne, a very delicate pink, and Dunlop had some promising seedlings. Harry Dale also contributed.

J. N. May's Olympia showed up grandly and was one of the best keepers. It was also shown by E G. Hill. Witterstaetter's Opal was lovely and Marquisee's Syracuse, a good flower of Scott color, looked promising.

Weber & Sons had a batch of grand seedlings and showed Genevieve Lord in excellent shape. Irene, in Crabb & Hunter's collection, was much admired. John A. Macrae sent, from Providence, a white and pink sport of Eldorado.

Craig & Son's vase of Ethel Crocker caught many orders for them and their America only lost a first prize by being short in count. Mrs. Lawson loomed up grandly and Peter Fisher was eagerly questioned as to his next sensation.

The seedlings from the Chicago Carnation Company were up in the advanced classes, with brilliant prospects. E. G. Hill's Mary Hill was also a good one. W. J. Palmer & Son showed a nice lot of standard sorts.

No flower received greater compliments than The Marquis. The crowd constantly around it showed how it impressed the public.

Violets were shown in good quality by C. Cummings, Wm. Fendley, C. Merkel & Sons and Eli Cross.

Kilt's flower vases and holders and Garland's greenhouse gutters were on exhibition.

Chas. Keitsch is an ideal exhibition manager.

Notes of the Banquet.

Ward was so filled with enthusiasm that he mounted a chair and declared he was having the most cosmopolitan good time he ever had in his life. Between Scott, Aphis Punk, angel food and other ingredients he had all the fun he could take care of. He paid a fervent compliment to Governor Roosevelt and asserted that a man who could stand so well the naming of so good a carnation after him is no ordinary man.

Rudd tackled the problem of comparative standards and ideal standards and tried to tell how it is possible to score 100 points any time without half trying. He declared it to be money in pocket and education for a man to attend such gatherings as this and learn the sentiments of the trade and see what others are doing, and was warmly congratulated by his friend Bassett when he sat down.

May, speaking for the S. A. F., said that the mother society was proud of her good-looking offspring. He praised the exhibition, the Buffalo brethren and the management and promised a great future for the carnation.

Hill told Indiana stories in his inimitable way, was very witty in his local allusions, quoted Byron and managed to get in a sympathetic word for England, which set the Canadians and Fancourt to dancing.

Dailledouze said he was no orator but bashfully admitted he was proud of the gold medal, and the reception accorded him shows that his hearers thought it well won.

Scott's appeal for quiet and courtesy during the speechmaking was approved and applauded.

The ringing harmonies of the "Brave Old Duke of York" were sadly missed on this occasion.

Youthful Miller, of Canada, looked very much at home, draped in the stars and stripes.

The quartette was all right and the Irish countess carried everything before her.

Plenty of talent within the lines with such singers as Dumont and Hartshorne.

Marquisee is a master of earnestness, eloquence, patriotism and wit.

Gammage wants the carnation society to go to Canada in 1902.

Witterstaetter thought it was easier to win medals than to make a speech.

Scott got in an early word for the S. A. F. convention for Buffalo in 1901.

Thompson, it was hinted, has another carnation boom up his sleeve.

WM. WEBER.

Vice-President of the American Carnation Society.

Maryland had a good representative in Wm. Weber.

President Craig's response was dignified and hopeful.

Kasting knows how to make people enjoy themselves.

"Wit and gastronomy" was a howling success.

So was Fancourt's "Absent Minded Beggar."

"Auld Lang Syne" as usual.

Come to Baltimore.

Robert Halliday.

The new president of the American Carnation Society could not well fail of the attainment of a leading place in the floricultural world. His grandfather was the first florist in Baltimore, having established his business in 1837, and his father was a leading figure in the trade during the many years he carried on the business. On his mother's side, John Dick occupied the same position at Philadelphia that the paternal grandparent did at Baltimore, having embarked in the trade in 1838. Robert Halliday was born in 1865 and, after receiving a liberal education, he took a position in the establishment founded thirty-three years before his birth, and in which he remained until 1889, when he and John D. Halliday formed the firm of Halliday Bros. At the very beginning the young men assumed a leading place in the business of the city, John D. Halliday conducting the store and Robert managing the greenhouses. From the outset carnations have been given special attention and few have been able to equal the quality of the Halliday stock. Flora Hill is grown by them to perfection and their new red, Mack Richmond, surpasses everything in its class which they have tried, and all the new sorts are tested by them. Since Mrs. M. J. Thomas, an aunt of the Halliday Bros., retired from business, the management of her store at 329 N. Charles street has devolved upon Mr. Halliday. He is a man of fine physique, genial, energetic and interested. The American Carnation Society will not suffer under his guidance. MACK.

Wm. Weber.

William Weber was born near Mount Savage, Maryland, November 5, 1869. He grew up on the farm and from his earliest days he evinced a love for flowers. Later, when he had his own little garden, he eagerly took all plants given him to raise, as well as all those he could get his hands on when the foreman was not in sight. But he proved an obstinate pupil in the greenhouse, and many were the trials of the foreman who was charged with the difficult task of teaching him the duties of a capable florist. When he was thirteen years of age his parents removed to Oakland, where a couple of years later he was given a greenhouse 12x60 feet, and the real work of developing into a florist was begun. Houses were added from time to time; gradually the carnation became uppermost in his mind and he is now giving more attention to this plant than to any other, although the establishment of about 65,000 square feet is devoted to general stock. Upon attaining his majority he was admitted to partnership in the firm of H. Weber & Sons, and has direct charge of the greenhouse department. He is a member of the American Carnation Society, Society of American Florists, Gardeners' Club of Baltimore, and the newly organized American Rose Society.

Carnation Enquirer.

This pink variety was obtained by Richard Witterstaetter from a seedling of the same parentage as Evelina (Adelaide Kreskin crossed with a white seedling obtained by crossing Silver Spray and Tidal Wave) but different in habit and of Daybreak color. As it bloomed late in the season, this seedling was not disseminated, but it was crossed with the pollen of Emma Wocher, the result being eight seeds and Enquirer. In the sweepstake competition at Buffalo Enquirer was awarded second prize, Dailledouze Bros. taking first with Mrs. Bradt. Enquirer also received a certificate at Buffalo, scoring 88 points At the carnation exhibition of the Chicago Florists' Club, January 18, the judges awarded it 100 points. The judges of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, at the carnation exhibition in that city, December 9, 1899, made the score 92¾ points and awarded it the McLean gold medal.

HOOSICK FALLS, N. Y.—The rose house and graperies of Walter A. Wood were burned February 15 while the water supply was cut off by an overflow of the Hoosick river. The loss was covered by insurance.

More About the Enquirer Controversy.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—If you will permit me to occupy a little of your space, the end of the Enquirer controversy is not yet; I think I am expected to respond to Mr. Rudd and Mr. Benthey. The former gentleman inquires as to my course of action in case a true blue carnation of the style of Scott were to come before me as a judge. Well, that will never be, if Mathews is right in describing his colors. He tells us that when nature was painting her flowers she had no true blue on her palette. But in case Mr. Mathews was wrong in claiming it, I certainly would give the carnation a goodly number of points for color and in all other respects I would turn it down, even in the face of committing a crime, for I should have to go by the letter of our scale; I could not take into consideration the rarity of the color, disregarding all the other points in the make-up of what I call a perfect carnation. Does our score say that judges shall compare a pink with a pink except as to color? It simply says "carnation." Mr. Rudd takes offense at the use of the word perfection. For what purpose did the framers of our scale make the total points equal 100? Was that not intended to represent perfection? If it does not represent perfection, what, please, does it represent? I agree with Mr. Rudd that perfection never did and never will exist in a flower, and I, for one, will never give a candidate the required 100 points to come up to that.

Now to Mr. Benthey's case, I wish to say that there is no ill-feeling on my side of this discussion and I hope that the Chicago gentleman has taken up the matter in the same spirit. Mr. Mathews gave us a color chart on which he placed true pink and if pure pink is not better than any other shade of pink, then Mr. Benthey's point is well taken. Size is given as one of the points for judges to consider, and I take it that the larger the carnation the more points it should score. If Mr. Benthey gives Enquirer twenty points for size, what would he do with No. 666? I know that we are to consider only that which is before us; we may some day get ten-inch flowers but there will be ample time for revising the scale before that. Mr. Benthey asks me what I want in a calyx. Why, I want a calyx which breaks evenly, to permit the petals to expand. If one of the breaks is deeper than the others it is a fault, and the next thing to a split flower. We certainly want a rigid stem to carry the flower erect. The same rule holds good in roses and chrysanthemums. As to form, I consider the best the perfect hemisphere. A flower which is irregular or too flat ought not to be considered first-class in form. It is the unnecessary break in the calyx which causes the irregularity. Petalage ought to be regular, set evenly and as closely as good form will permit. The texture should be heavy and the petals should be without crinkle or curl. The more pronounced the fragrance, the better. Enquirer is only slightly fragrant; we have many which are superior. Is it not rightly claimed that our new sorts are losing ground in respect to fragrance?

W. W. Coles' remarks in your last issue were rather a bouquet for me and I thank him for it. In closing I wish to call attention to the fact that my judgment of Enquirer at Cincinnati varied only one point from the score of the judges at Buffalo, where the judges were three ex-presidents of the S. A. F. This I think is a pretty good showing for the country judge as compared with these supreme court judges of carnations.

THEO. BOCK.

What Has the Twentieth Century in Store for the Queen of Flowers?

[Read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, Tuesday, February 6, 1900, by John N. May.]

Such was the heading of a paper I was notified by your secretary to prepare for this evening. I cannot but think the title an absurdity and none but a canny Scotchman, who doubtless has been sitting on a specimen of his national emblem very shortly before suggesting such an heading, or possibly a broken case of Delaware product used so extensively for Christmas decoration, which made the pain all the more sharp, it not being sold as it should have been; in either case, he must have thought that misery loves company, and so would try to inflict some of the pains he felt on me. The absurdity is all the more potent from the fact that no florist of to-day has any time to study astronomy to find out what the future has in store for himself or his competitors; possibly, it may have been intended as a joke, but I confess I am too dull of comprehension to see where it comes in. But no matter what caused the inception of such a conundrum by the party in question, it would be only fair to ask him to solve it, or at least give some explanation why he presumed to think any one less gifted than himself in looking into the mysteries of the future could answer such a question with any grain of reasonable honesty toward the members of this association.

Last summer, some of the wiseacres in our business predicted that as general business throughout the country was booming, the florist business would feel the general benefit thereof; said would-be prophets close their mouths as tight as a clam when questioned why their prognostications have not been fulfilled, and if I attempted to foretell anything for the floral queen, I undoubtedly would be posted throughout this broad country as an impostor; gentlemen, I am not ambitious to get any such complimentary title either now or in the future.

Had the question been reversed, and I had been asked to review what the nineteenth century had stored up for the florist in floral gems which have been sadly neglected, I might have taxed my memory for a few really good things which have never been given the attention by the florist that their merits deserve, and which if treated as they deserve would command the admiration of every lover of the beautiful creations of nature; but I am supposed to talk on the subject of the queen of flowers. As I understand this, and I think everyone present understands it in the same meaning, namely, the queen of flowers refers to the rose. S. Reynolds Hole, that inimitable writer, describes the queen of flowers as no other has ever done; he says we have nothing in the whole range of floriculture so completely charming, as a rosary in the time of roses. "A grower of most flowers and a lover of all, I know of none which can compare with the rose for color, form and fragrance, jointly, whether en masse or in single blooms;" again, he says: "Enter the rose garden when the first sunshine sparkles in the dew, and enjoy with thankful happiness one of the loveliest scenes of the earth. What a diversity, and yet what harmony of color; there are white roses, striped roses, blush roses, pink roses, rose roses, carmine roses, crimson roses, scarlet roses, vermillion roses, maroon roses, purple roses, roses almost black and roses of glowing gold. What diversity—and yet what harmony in outline; roses in size no bigger than an agate stone on the forefinger of an alderman, and roses four inches across."

And so it must be roses I am to talk about to-night; not of the past or present, but of the future, so designed by our worthy knight of the thistle. Well, we have three or four varieties now being rather extensively cultivated by the growers of cut flowers for commercial purposes throughout the country, to the exclusion of nearly every other variety, no matter how good and beautiful it be. In the future we may have to boil these down and grow still fewer varieties, yet, mind, I do not assert that we shall, and possibly as a better knowledge of the merits of others becomes more general among the flower buyers, we may have to increase the number by one or two varieties. Personally, I think it would be a step toward advancement if we could multiply the present varieties by at least ten; then flower buyers and flower lovers would have a chance to choose something more diversified in color, form and artistic beauty than they have ever seen up to the present time. Unfortunately, size seems to be the main object sought for now; this is very unfortunate, as it excludes so many of the real gems of the rose family. No one would like to be confined to beef for breakfast, mutton for dinner and pork for supper, without any change, for three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, and the same diet for the next year; no matter how good the beef, mutton and pork may be, they will soon begin to think a change would be more agreeable—something more in variety will be greatly appreciated. So it will be in flowers; the same everlasting red, white and pink may be and are undoubtedly very handsome, but there are those who will appreciate some other tints, variety in size, form, fragrance, etc. Why should their wishes not be gratified? It certainly will be greatly to the florist's benefit whether he be grower, dealer or retailer, to cater to the public taste at large, yes, and to elevate that taste by the introduction of a much greater variety. Very many of the most charmingly beautiful roses are comparatively small buds, such as Ma Capucine, Mme. Falcot, Safrano, La Sylphide, Isabella Sprunt, Bon Silene and dozens of others, perfect gems in form, color and fragrance. All these and hosts of others are at command, ready for the twentieth century, and there will undoubtedly be many new ones not yet introduced, which will be placed before the public for popular endorsement.

Our home productions in this line in the past have been somewhat limited, though we have some sterling varieties of American origin which have not met with the endorsement their merits deserve. From present indications, we should soon see some extra choice seedlings, distinct and beautiful things, which are now being produced by careful and expert hybridizers. All hail to these children—may they become illustrious citizens, winning fame and glory in every civilized country.

But we are not yet quite out of the nineteenth century, and ere we bid goodbye to it, the queen of flowers will have made its first debut in this country on its own responsibility as an independent factor for public patronage and support under the title of the American Rose Society. It will give its first exhibition on March 27, 28 and 29 at the Eden Musee, New York, when her majesty will hold a goodly court where a very large number of her courtiers will attend this, her first levee, arrayed as befitting the occasion in all their most gorgeous uniforms.

Her majesty will give a second reception in June next, which is the month of roses. At this levee all her subjects, from those dwelling in glass houses to the humble occupants of a few feet of common garden soil and exposed to all the changes and vicissitudes of the elements without even the friendly shelter of a thistle, will be received with all due courtesies. Those from the humble cottage garden will be on equal footing with those coming from the richest homes. Her majesty is no respector of persons but welcomes all with queenly dignity and all are invited to come.

Thus the long delayed inauguration of crowning Queen Rosa is to be a fitting closing of the nineteenth century. We, who have long paid court at her feet, trust the beginning of the twentieth century will see the American Rose Society placed on such a firm foundation that it will be second to none in the world. With our thousands of florists, whom the rose has done more for in their business than any other flower ever can, the society certainly ought not to lack patronage; from our tens of thousands of amateurs, who will grow and love the rose for the rose's sake, we shall certainly get an army of supporters.

This I consider the grandest thing the twentieth century has in store for the queen of flowers. The liberal support of it will do more to advance the florists' interests than we can possibly imagine at this time, and this is not prophesying anything either. If it can be done in England, and it has been, it certainly can be accomplished in America, with all its wealth and daily growing taste for the beautiful creations of nature. Only show the people how to grow roses in their gardens, and tens of thousands of them are ready to plant them, who are only deterred now because they do not know how to treat them. Look at the villa homes, the cottage homes—yes, and the grounds of the wealthy throughout this entire continent, and how few of them cultivate the rose (or hardly any other flowers for that matter), except the very commonest; compare this with the homes in any European country and the difference will be all the more apparent.

I think you will all agree with me that the American Carnation Society has done more for the advancement of the carnation during its existence than a whole century had done for it previously. Why should not the queen of flowers be equally advanced if well supported? Yes, and to a much greater degree as the field for the rose is of very much wider scope than that of the carnation. The last three decades of the present century have seen immense improvement in the varieties of roses; that the improvement will continue, there is, I think, not a shadow of doubt. Hence we may hope in the near future to see Queen Rosa in greater glory than ever before.

So let us say "Welcome to the Twentieth Century for the "Queen of Flowers."

BRISTOL, R. I.—R. H. Dunbar has purchased of William Hodgkins the entire property of the Bristol Rose Houses and will conduct the business hereafter.

Who's to Blame?

The American Rose Society has its work cut out for it. According to the experts, the society is their only hope if the rose is to be pulled out of the slough of despond into which it has sunk in this last year of the nineteenth century. They all admit that the list of roses may now be counted on the digits of one hand. American Beauty, Bride, Bridesmaid and Meteor! And who's to blame? Jno. N. May says the dealer is to blame; the fewer varieties he has to keep on hand the better he likes it; and when a customer asks for something different from the eternal, everlasting four he swears the grower cannot or will not produce anything different. Wherein he (the dealer) departs from the eternal truth, says Mr. May, and commits a crime of damnable dimensions, stopping the natural tendency of the public toward newer and better things and nullifying all disinterested efforts of the poor grower to give the public someting better.

Mr. Cartledge, one of the mildest and most diffident of the retailers, is so stung with this aspersion that he does an unheard of thing—gets up on his hind legs in open meeting and hurls the slander back with scorn. It takes a good deal to bring Mr. Cartledge to his feet. The world do move, that's certain. He says it's all the growers' fault. If they could get good Perles they could sell them. They got Watteville last fall, fine stuff at first, and they sold all they could get. Then these came down to little nubbins, and who could use such stock? Then there were other varieties, but how long did they last? And one could not take an order for them as there was no certainty of being able to procure. It's easy for the grower to lay all the blame for our miserable list of four roses on the retailer—let them bring in other good varieties in quantity and give some assurance of a regular supply and there would be no trouble in extending the list.

These two gentlemen are a fair sample of the attitude of the two branches of the trade, the grower and the retailer, towards each other when the question is asked, Who's to blame? They each know how the other ought to conduct his business and, by gum, if there's no amendment pretty soon they are going to start in and show each other how to do it. Ha! Ha! Will they? Not much! A man is a grower or a retailer because he can do one of them best. It's the survival of the fittest and as certain as the law of gravitation. This attitude reminds me very much of our way of conducting the war. Every fireside has a general these days who knows better than anybody else just how to conduct the campaign, how many guns are needed and how and where to place them, where to put the cavalry, and the proper place to make entrenchments, when to give battle and when to lie still. It makes no difference that the generals who do conduct the campaign on the field have the advantage of being on the spot and having made a life study of their profession—that counts for nothing in the minds of the fireside generals who conduct things from the safe vantage ground of their own ingle nooks.

However, there's one advantage gained by this discussion. It has helped to clear the atmosphere of some chaotic ideas and clearly indicates that there's nothing to be gained by blaming one another for sins of omission or commission. It's a case of pulling together and being broad minded enough to look into the future a bit. A new thing may not pay you quite as well at first but the chances are it will amply make up for that by and by. And that policy is bound in the long run to raise the standard of the business in every way and co-incidently accomplish the education of the public, which, Jno. Burton says, we are not doing now and are big frauds for accepting compliments from mayors and governors when they praise us at conventions for our noble efforts in spreading a love of the beautiful among the people.

One of the first steps is to keep ourselves abreast of the times on the best new and old roses of the present day, else how are we to be able to know what to grow or how to tell our customers about them? We have just inaugurated a society for the very purpose of enabling us to keep in touch. How many of you have joined it? Can it be as useful to you with fifty as with 500 or 5000 members? It seems to me, dear reader, that "it's up to you" and you're the fellow I've been after in this little sermon. It's the fellow who don't care that's the great clog on the wheels of advancement. Send your name to-day to Leonard Barrou, 136 Liberty street, New York city. The day will come when you will rise up and call me blessed for having asked you to do it. G. C. WATSON.

TOBACCO STEMS IN BENCHES.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I have a bench of roses on a number of which the leaves are turning yellow. In filling the bench with soil I placed some tobacco stems at the bottom. Would these affect the plants? C. A. J.

The correspondent should examine the roots of his roses; if they have turned black in the immediate vicinity of the tobacco stems it will prove clearly that the trouble comes from that source; tobacco stems have never proved very congenial food for roses, either above or below the roots. But there may be another cause for the yellow foliage, namely, eel worm; if on examination he finds a number of small lumps on the roots, he can be certain that these pests are largely to blame. In either case a good soaking of clear lime water will help to correct the trouble. Take about one peck of fresh lime, slake it in a barrel, then add about fifty gallons of water, stir it well and allow it to stand till clear; let the soil in the benches be a little on the dry side, then give a good soaking all over; repeat in fourteen days; if there is no improvement in the foliage in thirty days, repeat the dose; it usually takes three doses to benefit them materially.

MAID OF HONOR ROSE.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—We notice that "Ohioan" complains that Maid of Honor rose behaves badly with him, something like Waban. It behaves the same with us, although we grow it as the Hoflmeister Co. directs. Bridesmaid and Golden Gate produce good flowers in the same house. We saw it in Cincinnati and it was all right there. We do not think it was over propagated. What has been the experience of other growers?

ROSE SOCIETY DUES.

ED. AM. FLORIST:— Having received many inquiries from your subscribers as to dues, etc, of the American Rose Society, brought forth by my appeal to growers, it would confer a favor upon me and I think do the cause much good if you would publish the following information in your next issue. The dues are: Life membership, $50, in one payment; active membership, $3 per year; associate membership, $1 per year.

All that is necessary to become a member is to remit dues to Jno. N. May, treasurer, Summit, Union Co., N. J., or to Leonard Barron, secretary, 136 Liberty street, New York. The latter will be only too glad to send the constitution and by-laws to any one asking for same. Who will help us to keep the ball rolling?

BENJAMIN DORRANCE.

Cyclamen Culture.

The accompanying illustrations show some cyclamens grown by Richard Rothe, gardener to Clay Kemble, Glenside, Pa., as they appeared last Christmas. The seed was sown in September 1898, and after the seedlings had been pricked off into shallow pans, where they remained until March, 1899, they were planted in two and a half inch pots. Kept at a night temperature of 50° and in day time well exposed to light and air, they were sturdy plants when placed in a low frame outside in May. The sashes were shaded and raised about one foot above the tops of the plants, allowing air free access on all sides. During the summer months the plants received frequent spraying with a fine nozzled syringe on bright days to keep off red spider and thrips and help along the development of the foliage. All buds appearing before the first of September were pinched out and shifting was necessary three times until, about the first of October, most of the plants stood in eight-inch pots. Cyclamens when housed in good condition about the middle of October need little or no forcing in order to have them at their best during the Christmas holidays.

According to the last reports of the Christmas trade from all sections of the country there is abundant evidence of a steady increase in the demand for flowering plants. It may therefore be of interest to some readers of the AMERICAN FLORIST to know about the comparatively easy culture of this popular plant, as practiced by Mr. Rothe. To the private gardener as well as the commercial florist well grown cyclamens constitute a most useful factor in brightening up the greenhouses during the winter months and they are practically indispensable for indoor decoration.

LIGHT PINK CYCLAMEN GROWN BY R. ROTHE, GLENSIDE, PA.

WITH THE GROWERS.

AT LANCASTER, PA.

H. D. Rohrer takes prizes for his carnations at shows in Philadelphia and other big cities and grows the kind of stock he exhibits. Mrs. Bradt appears to respond especially to his generous treatment. The inclination of this variety to sport is very marked. He is propagating from the second generation of the sport and finds only a few inclined to revert. The sport is, as with other growers, a large red flower and no doubt it has come to stay.

As is generally known, Mr. Rohrer is a wholesale grower of long and profitable experience which would enable him to retire upon his laurels and fat purse. But he is far too interested and enthusiastic to quit just now. He grows carnations indoors entirely, but not necessarily entirely under glass. As soon as the weather permits in the spring, the glass is removed. Each course of butted glass is put by itself on a sort of pocket-like shelf below the eaves and is ready to be put back in the fall, each pane to be placed in regular order, just where it was in the spring. Mr. Rohrer says that one would be surprised to see how quickly a couple of careful men will take off and put on the glass, as no fitting or turning is needed. Then there is no danger of loss of glass from summer hail storms. Mr. Rohrer does not believe that renewal of the soil is necessary. The exposure to the elements, sun, wind and showers, together with a liberal supply of fertilizers if judiciously supplied, will, he thinks, keep up the soil indefinitely. The large pile of stable manure close to a large tank or concrete vat at an elevation sufficient to supply all his houses by gravity is one of the prominent evidences that he practices what he preaches. A man at a force pump assists gravity in the flow of the rich fluid and reduces the time of the man with the hose by more than one-half.

George W. Shroyer and his son, Harry A. Shroyer, have the oldest establishment in or near Lancaster. George W. Shroyer was a florist of note before many of those now prominent in the business were born. The writer believes Mr. Shroyer to be the oldest florist in Pennsylvania. The son keeps a flower store on N. Queen street, and it would be pretty hard to ask for anything of importance that they could not supply from their own houses. An immense variety of exceptionally well grown plants fill their houses. They are therefore well prepared to decorate and Mr. Shroyer not only decorates with good taste on nearly every important occasion in Lancaster but he sometimes goes as far as Harrisburg. His latest call was for the funeral of the late Lancaster postmaster and editor, Major Ellwood Griest. Governor Stone and other prominent dignitaries were there and of course the decorations for a Quaker funeral, while not elaborate, were expected to be "just so."

Daniel K. Herr grows plants, mostly for bedding purposes, and grows them well and in quantity. He loves the beautiful and his plants are a sight. Coleus, geraniums and begonias are his main specialties, produced mostly for the wholesale trade.

Albert M. Herr needs no introduction as Daniel K. Herr's son. As secretary of the American Carnation Society he is at all times expected to show something unusual in that special line and he never disappoints. Not much but carnations are grown in his large range of houses. Several of his houses are not quite No. 1 but the others make up what these lack. A house of Ethel Crocker is a marvel and proves that the claims for this variety have not been overdrawn. His extensive propagatiug houses are models and the long benches of carnation cuttings set one to wondering what he will do with them; but then he seldom has enough to supply the demand. He ships nearly all he produces.

Lancaster, with its wealth and about 40,000 population, is a poor market for fine flowers. The large growers, and even the small ones, ship the greater part of their crops. The "Cabbage Hill" element somewhat pervades the town and prefers the aroma of sauerkraut to that of violets or American Beauties. Here as in other cities some of the wealthiest have greenhouses on their own grounds and are in the main satisfied with what they produce. M.

The Matter of Credits.

The question of credits is a very important one to every wholesale florist and it assumes particular prominence in the establishment where cut flowers are wholesaled on commission.

The wholesale florists have for years been discussing this problem of giving credit and several plans have been broached for making the evil less acute, but conditions do not yet seem to be ripe for such an organization as is required. Eventually the wholesale florists should have a co-operative credit agency of their own, which should publish for its members a list of credits, it being one of the rules of the organization that the moment a buyer is reported as a bad risk, he must pay cash to all. A number of features might be added to broaden the work and secure all the wholesalers as members, but the general advantage of such a mutual benefit experience list should be sufficient to bring in every dealer of consequence.

And the advantages would not be all on one side. The responsible retailers would secure even greater benefit. How often you hear a retailer complain that a certain competitor is selling at less than the complainant can buy for. That is easy of explanation. One dealer pays cash; the other owes the wholesaler and will owe him as long as he will "stand for it"; then something will happen to make an item for the press and probably a case for the bankruptcy lawyers. Retailers have repeatedly found it difficult to compete with those who do not intend to pay.

To-day, when no two firms agree on the credit of anyone, each wholesaler has to rely on his individual judgment and a great many people secure credit who are not entitled to it and who abuse it. Then, too, if you ask a new buyer for references it hurts him, even if he promptly produces references enough to fill a book; and if he happens to be a man without credit, a "dead one," he puts up a most awful "roar" and promptly does his cash buying elsewhere.

The cut flower business ought to be spot cash. For the commission man of to-day to keep up with the times he must have a bank account large enough to carry any buyers that are good, an occasional one that isn't, and still pay the producer on demand.

PROSPERITY ATTENDS THE CLOSE OF THE SOCIAL SEASON.—PRICES STIFFEN.—SOME GOOD ROSES.—BULBOUS STOCK IS POPULAR.—VARIOUS JOTTING AND PERSONAL NOTES.

The flower trade seems to have gathered itself together for the final winding up of the season, before Lent takes possession. The past week has been generally satisfactory and there remains but a week more. While lacking in sensational features and unusually quiet on the surface, yet the season is believed to have been a fairly good one and as profitable, all together, to growers, dealers and retailers, as any in recent years.

All prices have stiffened up considerably within the past few days. Roses have done well and the returns, for those growers who grade correctly, have been pleasant reading. The dissatisfaction, where any exists, is confined to those who grade according to their own ideas rather than to the generally adopted market scale and then howl because their receipts do not agree with published price quotations. And their race will never become extinct.

No better roses have ever been seen in this market than those being sent to Welch Bros. by S. J. Reuter. The highest grades of his cut are bringing $25 per hundred and his carnations are of an equally high order. Fred King's scarlet carnation, named after himself, is very popular and a great keeper.

Warren Ewell reports the trade in flowering bulbs in pans as excellent. The quality of his stock this year is superior to anything in the past and it seems to be generally in demand—as popular, almost, as Warren himself; and this is saying much.

The annual scrimmage over the gypsy moth appropriation is on at the State House. All kinds of charges and counter charges are being made, some going so far as to accuse the moth hunters of planting colonies of the pest to perpetuate their occupation.

E. M. Wood has just got back from the salubrious Florida coast, full of entertaining stories of that favored land and looking greatly refreshed after his much needed vacation. S. A. F. matters and co-operative purchase will now begin to hum.

Lothrop & Higgins, of Bridgewater, are making arrangements to put up a mammoth display of dahlias at the Paris exposition.

Herman, Mr. Edgar's driver, was badly injured while unloading some plants from his wagon on Tremont street Tuesday morning, by being struck by a runaway team.

Long & Marshall have taken possession of the Thorndike flower store and an appearance of progressive prosperity is unmistakable.

A. T. Boddington, of New York, is in town; also R. H. Dunbar, of Bristol, R. I.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—THE FAVORITES BRING GOOD PRICES.—THE VIOLET SITUATION.—MARKET DEPENDS UPON THE WEATHER.—STORY OF THE SPECIALTIES.—NOTES.

The leaders for the past week in the cut flower market have been Beauties, top grade Bridesmaids, good carnations and lilacs. Beauties are in larger supply than one year ago but are averaging more money and have held up well in price, bringing 60 cents for the best. Extra quality Bridesmaids are just about equal to the demand, the best running up to 15 cents. Brides are not so easily sold and bring lower values on the average. Brunners have arrived but the number coming in is small as yet, the price ranging from 20 cents to 50 cents.

The daily supply of violets is enormous. Thus far they have been cleaned up at fair figures except when rainy weather or a snow storm like that of last Saturday interferes, in which case it taxes the cellars of the wholesalers to store them. With no other flower is the sale so dependent upon the weather. On account of their short-lived perfume it is an invariable rule in some of the best retail stores never to sell them on the second day as violets but to use them up, if opportunity presents, in wreaths or other design work where they can be mixed with material in sufficient proportion to give the required fragrance. In consequence of this general prejudice against violets that have been kept over night, the returns on such a day as last Saturday, when transient trade was at a stand still, are very unpleasant writing for the commission man and very glum reading for the grower.

Smilax is going better and good, long strings in flower bring nice prices. There is plenty of mignonette, hyacinths, tulips, asparagus, daffodils and lily of the valley in market, the latter selling somewhat better than lately. The increase in supply of Harrisii lilies has lowered the price, with a prospective further decrease. Handsome lilac plants and branches of acacia adorn the florists' windows.

E. R. Sherwood, of Norwalk, is sending flowers of a fine seedling carnation to John Young which it will pay those interested to look at.

TRADE GOOD AND STOCK SCARCE.—THE PRICES IN DETAIL.—DECORATED PLANTS.—BLOOMING SUBJECTS NOW IN GOOD SUPPLY.—VISITORS TO BUFFALO REPORT ON THEIR TRIP.

Good flowers are scarce and choice stock of all kinds is snapped up immediately when offered for sale, with little if any quibbling about the price. All kinds of plants seem off crop. This is particularly true of Beauties, which are very scarce in all sizes. Talk about increasing the assortment of roses! The growers cannot now supply the demand for the "big four" when the crops are off and we presume the situation would be worse with the other kinds that do not flower so freely. Prices on account of the scarcity have stiflened a bit, $2 per hundred on most of the roses except Beauties, where the stock is simply graded closer. Prices are about as follows: Beauties, 12-inch stem, $1 to $1.50 per dozen; 18-inch, $2; 24-inch, $3; 30-inch, $4; 36-inch, $5; 48-inch, $6 per dozen. Brides and Bridesmaids, $6 to $15 per hundred; Meteors $8 to $12. Carnations are also scarce. Good Scotts brings $2 to $2 50, which figure will also hold good for most other sorts, such as were selling for $1.50 a week ago. Tulips are scarce just at present, $3 to $4 per hundred being the price. Greens of all kinds save smilax are scarce and sell well. Lily of the valley brings $3 to $4, Romans and narcissi, $2 to $3. Double and single daffodils are plentiful at from $3 to $5. Violets double, 75 cents to $1; single, 35 cents to 75 cents per hundred. Business the past week has been brisk, there being several good balls at which the decorations were quite elaborate. There have also been a number of fine dinners.

Pennock Bros. have made a display the past week of decorated blooming plants, using ribbons, crepe paper, etc., to produce quite elaborate effects. Their window is always an attraction. Blooming plants are now to be had in variety. Azaleas, rhododendrons, cinerarias, Harrisii lilies, Primula obconica and genistas brighten up the stores and help in decorations.

The meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society last Tuesday evening was fairly well attended. The attraction was the paper by John Hobson on "Forcing Vegetables Under Glass," which showed careful preparation and was well received.

The Philadelphia delegation to the carnation convention at Buffalo express themselves as being very much pleased with their visit. The exhibition was fine, no such a collection of fine flowers ever having been seen before. The reception by the Buffalo brethren and their care of the visitors was hospitable in the extreme. The banquet was immense and the various songs and witticisms are echoing in our ears yet. The great and only Wm. Scott and his side partner, "Billy" Kasting, are a whole team, and Palmer, Cowell, Long and the other gentlemen who so ably seconded them were always turning up at the right moment. The Buffalo florists are quite up-to date, their stores being arranged with very good taste and with well decorated windows. The refrigerators or flower cases were nearly all arranged after the same plan, a sort of bow window pattern, which stands out well into the store and shows the flowers off to good advantage. Wm. F. Kasting has a large and roomy place, which presented a hustling and busy appearance at all times when visited. D. B. Long was also visited and found up to his elbows at his desk busy with examples of fine circular work for the Easter trade. A few of the boys tried their hand at bowling but the luster is off the formerly brilliant silver dollar alleys and nothing in the way of record breaking took place.

THE MARKET SUFFERS A CONSIDERABLE CHANGE.—MORE ROSES AND NOT ENOUGH CARNATIONS.—VIOLETS AND BULBOUS STOCK HARDEST HIT.—GOOD STOCK FROM A HOOSIER LADY.—A VIOLET PACKAGE.—AT WASHINGTON PARK.—JOHNSON GOES TO SEATTLE.—JOTTINGS OF VARIED INTEREST.

The market conditions have undergone a very decided change during the past week. Roses are no longer difficult to secure in reasonable grades and quantities and prices have weakened somewhat. There are good cuts of Beauty close at hand in the establishments of all the big growers. For the past few days carnations have been under the demand and prices have held firm. Violets are in heavy supply and only moderate demand, so that averages have been low. Bulbous stock, which has been faring well of late, has taken a slide and is in the dumps, and not the least of the sufferers are calla lilies.

Among the finest carnations coming to Chicago are those from Mrs. E. T. Graves, of Richmond. Her White Cloud and Jubilee could hardly be excelled and, in fact, a number of carnation experts have pronounced her product the equal of the best in the country. Various causes are assigned for this, among them a peculiarity of the soil and the fact that Mrs. Graves takes no cuttings from her plants, not even for her own use. She has a pink seedling, Dorothy, which has met with such favor that at least two large growers have offered to buy the stock, but Mrs. Graves has declined and will build new houses for it this spring. Mr. Amling is her Chicago agent.

Van Aken Bros., of Coldwater, Mich., are shipping in good violets packed in cases which are the most convenient of anything thus far designed for the purpose. The boxes have from one to three trays, each tray being about five inches deep and bottomless. Midway in each tray is a sheet of wire netting, through the meshes of which the stems of the bunches are placed, each wrapped in wet paper. The bunches cannot fall out of the wire mesh if the box happens to be turned up side-down and each box is padlocked, both shipper and consignee having a key.

The Harrisii at Washington Park excel the lilies which have thus far been in the market, most of the stock bearing from five to seven blooms. The azaleas there, too, are magnificent specimens and the daffodils, of which there are several hundred pots, are a credit to Mr. Kanst's skill as a bulb forcer.

C. W. Johnson passed through the city Thursday enroute to Seattle, Wash., where he has been engaged as manager of the establishment of the Washington Floral Co. Mr. Johnson carries with him to his new sphere the best wishes of numerous trade friends.

J. A. Budlong is having splendid success with his rose cuttings this season and has just started upon the propagation of 200,000 American Beauty for the market.

Kennicotts have been receiving some excellent Papa Gontier roses which have been very welcome to the retailers who wish to vary their assortment.

Brant & Noe, at Forest Glen, have placed an order for 500 boxes of glass for their spring addition, the material for which will be furnished by Lord & Burnham.

Cornelia De Mare has brought suit against Albert Fuchs for $15,000 damages for alleged breach of promise. She was at one time employed in his store.

W. N. Rudd and other Cornellians of this city entertained President Schurman, of Cornell University, at dinner at the Wellington hotel February 23.

John G. O'Keefe, representing Hudson & Co , of St. Louis, has been in town for several days in the interest of the new commission house.

Some of the growers report that they will have a task to hold their Harrisii lilies for Easter, which comes April 15.

Klehm's home grown lily of the valley is probably the finest which ever came into this market.

The Chicago party to the carnation meeting report a very jolly trip.

Washington.

ANOTHER ROUND OF RECEPTIONS AND DINNERS.—SOME MORE GOOD DECORATIONS.—A TIMELY WINDOW.—ANOTHER COMING PRESIDENT.

President and Mrs. McKinley's last reception of the winter series, February 14, was an army and navy fete pure and simple and one of the largest gatherings seen at the White House for a long time filled every part of the first floor and quite crowded the conservatories. The floral decorations were equal to those of previous occasions chronicled in these columns.

Mrs. General Bates gave a luncheon February 14, at which the decorations were somewhat out of the usual. Two large tables were spread in the dining room. Each had a heart-shaped center piece of low growing ferns, principally adiantum, and dotted here and there with bunches of yellow and white marguerites. Several large arches of asparagus and ferns were crossed over the center pieces. Beneath the arches and in the middle of the heart-shaped pieces were little gilded cupids holding strands of yellow satin ribbon which led to a corsage bouquet at each plate.

Mr. and Mrs. Westinghouse gave a dinner party of twenty-two covers February 19. The decorations were very rich, about 700 cattleyas in six varieties being used. Both these decorations were done by J. H. Small & Sons.

Z. D. Blackstone has his window decorated with a long frame of galax leaves in the center of which is a spinning wheel of immortelles with thirteen spokes and surrounded by thirteen stars, the felly bearing the words, "The Daughters of the American Revolution." This society is now in session here and livening up business.

Minder Bros.' Campbell violets are very fine and their Lilium Harrisii are quite free from the blight.

Wm. F. Gude, of A. Gude & Bro., received an unusual valentine, a little son. P. G.

BUSINESS IS SLOW.—SCOTT BECOMES CHIEF OF THE HORTICULTURAL DEPARTMENT AT THE EXPOSITION.—COWELL GOES TO FLORIDA.—JOTTINGS OF THE CARNATION MEETING.

After the show trade is still quiet. All have departed and we trust in good spirits for I think all had a good time. At the banquet or gathering it was observed by the writer that C. W. Ward can speak on New York state and Roosevelt. L. E. Marquisee certainly looks sanctimonious but he is a witty speaker.

Wm. Craig was a good presiding officer. That day has passed when only the older heads shall rule in any society. If you do not give the young blood a chance there is no reason why they should belong unless it is to pay dues.

Mrs. A. M. Herr, of Lancaster, was certainly the right one as assistant to Secretary Herr. She was the only lady at the convention and not lonesome at that.

There are some very sanctimonious men in Michigan who do not like banquets and then there are others, and the majority were others.

George Fancourt now wears a No. 10 hat, for Ladysmith has been relieved and the "Absent Minded Beggar" will soon be home again.

President Craig and Horace Dumont were out in full dress. Phil. Scott loaned his and did not get it back in time.

No. 666 was all the talk at the flower show and XXXX brand in demand elsewhere.

Scott is a good presiding officer but E. G. Hill, Rudd and Ward kept him busy.

Kasting says, call me a "Heinie" if you wish but the boys had a good time.

The local club was thankful to D. B. Long for his neat menu card.

Too bad J. N. May had to go so early. Prof. Cowell was lonely.

"Buck" Scott takes after "Papa" and is out for fine.

Superintendent Keitsch worked hard.

The latest news in town is that William Scott has been appointed chief of the Bureau of Horticulture for the Pan American Exposition.

Mr. Smith, of Smith & Fetters, Cleveland, has been in Buffalo and has secured the services of Chas. Porter, now with Wm. Scott.

Prof. Cowell left on Wednesday for Florida on business for South Park.

Adams' store is now newly decorated and it looks fine. W. A.

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y.—Miss Mary E. Holmes is about to remove to a new store on Second street.

Pittsburg.

STOCK IS SHORT ON A BRISK MARKET.—THE PRICES —A WEDDING.—FLORIST TURNS LAUNDRYMAN.

Business continues about the same as the last two weeks, with an occasional extra stir. Violets have been used in great quantities. The weather of late has been unfavorable and has caused a shortening up in most lines, especially roses. Good roses sell from $3 to $12 per hundred; carnations $1 to $3, lilies $12 to $15, and violets from 40 cents to $1. Beauties are unusually scarce and prices away up. Bulbous stock is still increasing and is fairly cheap.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Wm. B. McCrea, Jr., head florist for the Pennsylvania Railway Co., stationed at Altoona, Pa., to Miss Bertha Miesse Barclay, on February 16. They will be at home to their friends after March 1.

Geo. Oesterle has resigned his position at Randolph & McClements owing to ill health and has assumed the lighter duties of the financial department of the Crown laundry, of which he is part owner.

Notes of a Western Traveler.

Trade is good at Denver and the supply has not in a long time equalled the demand. Such a thing as the market being over loaded is scarcely ever known here. It is true that prices do not range as high as they do in the big eastern cities but there is a more steady market, which is a great compensation.

The Park Floral Company's greenhouses are well stocked with a great variety of material. They have an exceedingly fine lot of mignonette and cut it with very long stems. It is a strain of their own, which they have improved from year to year. They are cutting some fine roses from grafted plants and are having such good results with this class of stock that they will try grafting Beauty next year.

The Colfax Avenue Floral Company combines the wholesale and retail business and handles a general line, including cut flowers, decorative and bedding plants. They have a lot of pelargoniums in 8 and 10-inch pots which are particularly fine.

Among the many things worthy of note at Thomas Chapman's is a bench of double petunias. He is to build two new houses 20x120 in the spring and will fill them with G. H. Crane, Ethel Crocker and The Marquis carnations in the fall.

D. S. Grimes & Son are pioneers at the business and there are many interesting things on their place, not the least of which are some fine plants of Araucaria Bidwillii, something very seldom found on a commercial place.

Glauber & Webb devote every foot of their glass to roses, carnations and violets. They are doing splendidly with Wootton, although it is seldom seen in the east, and their Marie Louise violets are wonderfully large flowered and prolific.

Newlander & Rollin devote their place mostly to pot plants but they have a bench of snapdragon for cutting and find that it pays well. They also have a great many chrysanthemums in pots for cut flowers.

Theo. Loken's horse and buggy were stolen recently and the detectives have found no trace of them. Mr. Loken grows carnations for the commission house.

C. J. Hurt has not a large place but it is well ordered and he is cutting some swainsonia which is good enough to be very profitable.

At the Mauff establishment, which is also devoted to cut flowers, there is a house of G. H. Crane carnations which would give pleasure to the originator.

The Curtis Park Floral Company has a good stock, a fine trade and its officers receive guests with unbounded hospitality.

Geo. M. Geraghty, manager for Daniels & Fisher, is breaking ground for those new houses. WESTERNER.

Orange, N. J.

The Essex county park commissioners have just completed a large greenhouse upon a portion of the Branch Brook Park, in Newark. Theo. Holicke formerly with Pitcher & Manda, is in charge.

At the last meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, Messrs. Williams, Kitchen, Hayes and Davis were appointed a committee to devise a means of developing a love for floriculture among the school children, by a free distribution of plants.

John McGowan has made a souvenir book of views of the Oranges, which he has distributed among his customers. Among the views are two of the Lowell Mason estate where Wm. MacMillan served his apprenticeship, and showing a row of fine elms planted by him.

J. B. Davis has started a chronology of floral events and contemplates a floral directory of the Oranges, of all those who give special attention to the cultivation of flowers.

Peter Duff sustained an accident by letting a stone fall on his foot and was unable to attend the last society meeting. Raising stones and raising flowers are two distinct industries, he now maintains.

DELAWARE, OHIO.—Jos. H. Cunningham reports business in all lines as extra good.

CROMWELL, CONN.—The greenhouses of A. N. Pierson are being wired for electric lighting.

EAST BRIDGEWATER, MASS.—Lothrop & Higgins will make a large display of dahlias at the Paris exposition.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—Krumm & Sons report an excellent season's business. The stock at their greenhouses is in very good shape.

DENVER, COL.—Michael Bloy, formerly with Wm. Scott, of Buffalo, N. Y., has taken the position of foremen with the Park Floral Co.

OAKLAND, CAL.—E. Lacazette & Co., the new firm at 414 Fourteenth street, are starting out with a good trade, largely funeral work.

SKOWHEGAN, ME.—Chas. A. Leighton, who has made a success of the florist business, is branching out and has begun the manufacture of bristle dusters.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—The market gardeners of this vicinity held a very well attended meeting, February 17, for the purpose of organizing a gardeners' club.

SEATTLE, WASH.—The Washington Floral Co. report an increased demand for all kinds of stock, with short supply. This firm is contemplating an extensive increase of glass especially for carnation growing.

THE date of Easter this year is April 15.

A. ROTH.—The name of the plant is Senecio Petasites.

THE first number of the semi-monthly Canadian journal for gardeners and florists has made its appearance. We wish it a prosperous career.

IT is worthy of comment that the strongest demand for carnation cuttings is at present for two of Dorner's introductions, G. H. Crane and Mrs. Bradt.

E. ASMUS is authority for the statement that since Christmas cut blooms of the Liberty rose have sold at fifty cents each wholesale, adding that the demand could not be supplied even at this high figure.

THE representatives of K. J. Kuyk, of Ghent and Hillegom, H. J. Goemans and H. P. Hugenholtz, arrived in New York February 15. They intend to remain in this country until May 15, their address in the interval being care of J. Ter Kuile, 33 Broadway, New York.

M. VIGER has been appointed president of the International Congress of Horticulture to be held in Paris this year in connection with the exposition. His appointment fills the vacancy caused by the death of M. Henry de Vilmorin. M. Viger is president of the French national horticultural society.

THE retail florists should not wait for the wholesalers to increase the price of stock. The people have plenty of money now and they are spending it freely. This therefore is the time for all to secure some profits on the goods handled, more especially as any kind of a profit has been altogether out of the question for a number of years past.

A FRENCH grower has adopted a very novel method of fertilizing his chrysanthemums. He collects all of the remains of his old plants, dries them and then makes a tea or extract by boiling them in water. The tea is made use of as a liquid fertilizer. All of this, we suppose, on the principal that the hair of a dog is good for his bite.

A Chance for the Young Man.

The liberality of our eastern contemporary is sometimes excessive! The offer made under the above heading is a case in point. The prize offered, three dollars, would be a low rate for regular contributions of a thousand words, but the true meat in the cocoanut comes further down, in the innocent little requirement that all manuscript submitted shall become the property of the publishers.

Oh, fie! brother. Pay the boys for their work.

Carnation Disputes.

We have been in the habit of calling them "discussions," but "disputes" is a much better term, unless we say "scraps." The Boston people, however, will be sure to declare "scraps" vulgar, and we must deny ourselves the use of that most expressive and forcible word. Take, for instance, the Enquirer case. Three worthy gentlemen innocently say they think it worth 100 points. Up jump several fellows and proceed to get out their little hammers. Then the gentleman who thinks "any old calyx is good enough for him" shies his cap into the ring and dares the world to come on. Next the editor of our eastern contemporary does business with a club and the other gentleman goes back home for an axe and uses it. The air is full of all sorts of missles, including rabbits hides with the hair on, while the "wise guys" stand around and make books on the results. Here you have all the elements which go to make a beautiful discussion—dispute—scrap.

These disputes are not a bad thing; in fact they generally result in much good. All the different ways in which the subject may be looked at are brought to light and every one's attention is attracted. A large amount of quiet thinking is done by many who take no part in the fracas and many "sleepers" have their eyes opened. One word, however, to the contestants: Don't expect to dodge in and hit the other fellow without some one's taking a "poke" at you. In a scrimmage of this kind several eyes are apt to be discolored and various bruises received. If the adversary, in the heat of battle, strikes a little harder than the rules of the game warrant, and lands below the belt, take your medicine and try and look pleasant.

The Landscape Architects.

The New York Commercial Advertiser chronicles—and the Boston Transcript copies—what it is pleased to call the birth of a new profession. This event, which is described as of more immediate interest than the birth of a new nation, is the incorporation of the American Society of Landscape Architects. Lest we should fail of becoming deference, the writer of the article hastens to impress upon us that the high calling of the landscape architect is "neither a diversion nor a handicraft nor a trade, but a profession, like law or medicine," and seems particularly solicitous lest the public should make the awful mistake of associating the members of the new society in any way with the lowly plebian known as a gardener, assuring us that "landscape architecture no more tolerates gardeners and nurserymen in its professional circle than the familiar house architect tolerates carpenters, stone masons, lumber dealers and quarrymen."

That there is a grand future for the art of laying out and embellishing public and private grounds and abundant room in this country for many more Olmsteds and Vauxes no one can question and we cannot look with other than heartiest commendation on any movement which brings the support of the universities or the advantages of organization to this, one of the noblest of the professions that man can follow. But, are not our friends, the promoters of the young society, in their lofty aims and boundless ambition, overstepping the limits of good judgment in launching their new enterprise with what looks much like a sneer at a profession which gave their own its beginning and which bears upon its roll the names of such men as Sir Joseph Paxton, Frederick L. Harris and others whose fame is world wide? It is true that the house architect has made for his calling a place of the highest honor and independence and this largely within a period of fifty years, but we do not believe that he laid the groundwork for his future eminence by dictatorial assumption or contemptuous airs toward his staunch allies, the masons and builders, who during the ages, had been faithfully laying the foundations on which he was to erect his professional structure.

Unquestionably, much more than a knowledge of gardening or an artistic perception of what makes a beautiful landscape will be required and much scientific learning must be mastered before the landscape architect of the future can rightly claim his title but, nevertheless, our somewhat exclusive friends should ever remember that so long as "Go out under the open sky and list to Nature's teachings," remains a precept the practice of which is as free to the most unassuming gardener as to the most pompous architect we shall have our Harrises and Paxtons, and that, after all, Nature herself is the truest exponent of her art, that her greatest glories can never be communicated to the unappreciative student by word or book, and that the successful landscape architect must always be one whose heart is close to Nature's heart, otherwise neither mastery of abstruse engineering problems, nor winning of college degrees nor admission to membership in the most exclusive society in the world can win for him any lasting honor or position.

May we be permitted to suggest to this new organization of high standard and narrow limitations, which we are told has had to ransack the country to find enough members to furnish its officers, that most of the great movements in the world's history have, like our own individual selves, learned to creep before attempting to walk and that the untimely expression of intolerant sentiments such as we have above quoted may lose for the votaries of the new profession much of that public respect and esteem which their future prosperity demands and which we sincerely hope may always attend them.

The End of the Century.

Dear sir, I houp ye winna cut aff a twalmonth frae the lag end o' the cent'ry, as a lot o' itherwise able men are tryin' to dae. Shurely the warld began wi' the year 1, and the end o' the first cent'ry was jist 100 years, nae mair an' nae less. Hoo then is that 1900 sidna hae the full compliment o' nineteen hunder years? To cut aff the cent'ry at the end o' 1899 wud mean that the warld commenced in the year 0, that is a year afore it began. Noo, ye ken that a hunder times naething is simply naething, and a saxpence is worth a hunder times that, or as muckle mair as ye like. This is nae gairdenin', but I'm only writin' tae warn ye, because the loss o' a haill twalmonth's produce oot o' the gairden, and a twalmonth's waages tae ilka gairdener wud mean a michty lot. By the bye, that was a bonnie splatter at Edinbro' the ither week wi' the bubblyjock and the haggis. A'body at the feast will noo be strong eneuch to turn ower to dew leaf we're aye hearin aboot.—Tam in Gardening World.

The Same Old Story.

AM. FLORIST CO.—Kindly discontinue our adv., "Bred in Old Kentucky." The AMERICAN FLORIST is certainly a splendid medium for advertising. The first insertion brought us orders enough to clean us out of cuttings. We enclose four dollars to pay for the insertions. When we have more stock will try it again. We were not only highly pleased with the results, but with the manner in which you displayed our adv.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres; ALBERT McCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

THE New York seedsmen find trade active, two weeks ahead of last year.

SUGAR BEET seed is in active demand. The supply of some kinds is already exhausted.

MR. WEEBER, of Weeber & Don, New York, has been taking a week's pleasuring in Washington.

VISITED CHICAGO: Charles P. Braslan, of San Francisco, Cal.; E. M. Haven, of the Haven Seed Co., So. Haven, Mich.

JAMAICA, L. I.—Frank Knight is in charge of Landreth's seed depot here. There are three salesmen on the island working the gardeners' trade.

THE price of Bromus inermis seed rules fifty per cent higher than last fall, and it will probably go higher on account of the greatly increased demand.

THE Western Seed & Irrigation Co., of Waterloo, Neb., has purchased 400 acres of land at Monroe, in the same state, for growing seed crops under irrigation.

L. W. WHEELER, southern representative of Vaughan's Seed Store, is now looking after the bulb department of the New York establishment, both export and import.

INSURANCE matters are progressing satisfactorily with the Schisler-Corneli Seed Co. and the Plant Seed Co., of St. Louis. Their losses will be heavier than at first reported.

LEADING New York importers of seeds, bulbs and plants petitioned the customs collector of that port, January 13, 1900, for improvements in the custom house service on these classes of merchandise. G. W. Bidwell, the collector, replied January 30, stating that the suggestions of the petitioners could not be carried out as the law now stands.

Government Seed Distribution.

The distribution of seeds by the Agricultural Department is proving unusually popular with the members of congress this year. Many of them say that they have not had enough seeds to distribute, and it is quite probable that an effort will be made to have the appropriation for the purchase and distribution of seeds increased in the next agricultural appropriation bill. The quality of seeds sent out is every year being improved. Many farmers throughout the country write the department commending the distribution and praising the quality of the seeds. Only a few days ago a gardener in Colorado wrote to learn whether he could not purchase seeds from the government, stating that they were better than he could procure from seedsmen in his vicinity. The distribution this year is farther advanced and in better shape than it has ever been. Seeds will be distributed much earlier than they have been in the past.

CONCORD, N. H.—W. S. Wilson has sold his establishment here and will devote his entire attention to his place at Wellesley, Mass. Frank O. Main and Chas. Barrett have formed a copartnership under the name of Frank O. Main & Co., and will open a flower store at 1 South Main street.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W. J PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

THE legislative committee of the Eastern Nurserymen's Association has just addressed a circular to every nurseryman in New York urging concerted pressure on the state legislature to kill the proposed law requiring fumigation of all stock.

ELLWANGER & BARRY are sending with their new catalogue an application blank for postoffice money order, the name and address of the firm being already filled in. This will perhaps save customers' messengers an errand to the postoffice. It is necessary in many cases to make one trip for the blank and another for the order. Perhaps the letter carrier when he calls can be induced to take the filled-in application, delivering the money order on his return journey.

San Jose Scale.

The following extract from Bulletin No. 177 of the Cornell Experiment Station, entitled "Spraying Notes," by Prof. Bailey, is so pertinent that we reproduce it:

"The San Jose scale is still with us. It will stay. There is no hope of eradicating it. Then every man should be prepared to meet it. He should not rely on state control alone.

"For three seasons now, we have experimented with the kerosene and water emulsion—as others have done—and have found that it is a specific for the scale. In the proportion of 1 part of oil to 5 of water in summer, and 1 to 4 in winter, it will kill the scale.

"Can a man hope to annihilate the scale, then, by spraying? No. On plants which he can spray thoroughly and frequently, he can hope to eradicate it; but I should not expect him to eradicate it from a large and badly infested plantation, any more than he can eradicate the apple-scab or the bark-louse. But I should expect him to keep it in check. Spraying for San Jose scale must come to be an accepted practice, as spraying for potato-blight is.

"All this means that the farmer should not be frightened, but should be self-reliant and determined. But the state should help him. The law should not help him less, but more. Nursery stock should be fumigated with hydrocyanic acid gas under strict control. It would be folly to attempt to burn every infested tree or bush wherever found; but the law should be so amended as to allow a properly qualified officer to destroy plants which, in the judgment of experts, are a menace to the general weal."

At Flatbush.

Thursday evening of last week was one of great jubilation at the bowling alleys, a telegram having been received from Eugene Dailledouze conveying the news of his success in the exhibition, and the brothers opening up in royal style to celebrate. John Raynor brought a new ball, which he had won in a progressive euchre contest. It proved to be a mascot, whether in the hands of Louis Schmutz, Alf. Zeller or its owner, and made scores all the way from 170 to 190 every time.

With Philadelphia Gunners.

The last shoot of the series of four between members of the Florists' Gun Club for a club trophy was held on their grounds at Wissinoming February 13. A more disagreeable day for the shoot could not be imagined. Rain fell in torrents and the wind blew a gale almost the entire time the shooting was in progress. In spite of the disagreeable weather, however, there were some really good scores made. W. K. Park broke 22 out of 25 at known angles and at unknown angles, where the wind was blowing the strongest, he broke 24 out of 25, winning the trophy for the series with nine points; Parsons second, with eight points, and Bell third, with seven points. The conditions of the shoot were fifty targets per man, twenty-five known and twenty-five unknown angles, handicap added to the score. The summary follows:

	Known angles.	Unknown angles.	Hdp.	Total.
Coleman	20	23	8	51
McKaraher	20	16	14	50
Park	22	24	4	50
Dorp	19	16	12	47
Parsons	19	21	7	47
Bell	21	19	6	46
Barrett	16	18	11	45
Hayward	20	21	0	41
Westcott	20	7	10	37

Points won in the four shoots: Park, 9; Parsons, 8; Bell, 7; McKaraher, 6; Dorp, 6; Coleman, 6; Barrett, 6; Westcott, 5; Anderson, 3; Colflesh, 3; Cartledge, 2; Harris, 2; Webster, 1.

At Chicago.

The bowlers have been inactive of late but propose to resume regular practice in the near future. The florists have dropped out of the America league, in which they made no creditable showing, because the alleys are so far out from the business district that it was impossible to get a representative team together there.

On next Wednesday evening, February 28, the Florists' Club will entertain the ladies at Kinsley's at 8 p. m. Four alleys have been engaged for the evening, two for the use of the guests and two for a match game between teams representing the wholesalers and retailers. Prizes will be awarded. Tickets of admission will be supplied to all club members.

At Philadelphia.

Bowling still goes on merrily n the contest for places on the team for next August. W. K. Harris has an average of 155 for thirty-five games, with John Westcott something over 160 for seventeen games. When such old war horses set such a pace as this it is hard for the youngsters to keep up with them.

A match game was played February 16, by the first team, with the team of the Century Wheelmen, the strongest in the city. It was a return match, they having been defeated on our alleys about two weeks ago The score of last Friday's game, which follows, will give some idea of how they can bowl and what our boys were up against. An average of 157½ will win most games but 172 is considerably better and this is what the Century boys had to their credit when the game was finished. The rubber will be rolled on neutral alleys in the near future and should our boys win, they can claim the championship of Philadelphia. The score:

WOLLASTON, MASS.—Fire did $500 damage to the greenhouse of Samuel Brown on the morning of February 14.

RAYMOND, N. H.—The greenhouses of J. A. Littlefield were submerged during the recent freshet. The fires were extinguished aud the plants frozen, causing a damage of several hundred dollars.

ATHOL, MASS.—The greenhouses of James Sutherland were completely under water during the recent freshet and the contents, including many thousands of lettuce plants, were totally destroyed. This is Mr. Sutherland's third severe misfortune within a short time. The hail storm of last June smashed most of his glass and a previous freshet did great damage.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—ROSES MORE ABUNDANT.—A LARGE WEDDING DECORATION —NOTES.

The warm weather of the past few days, coupled with slow demand, has had a tendency to increase the supply of Bridesmaids, Brides and Meteors and to lower prices. Roses are bringing from $4 to $8 per hundred, carnations from $1.50 to $2 50. Lily of the valley, Romans and jonquils remain about the same as last week. Violets have a lower tendency. American Beauties remain scarce; what few there are command a high price.

C. Young & Sons Co. have about the largest order of the season in the Smith-Platt wedding. They expect to use over 2000 Bridemaid roses in the table and house decorations.

Visitors: A. L. Vaughan, Chicago; George A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill. J. M. H.

Cincinnati.

Flowers of all kinds are coming in a little more plentifully; at least some roses are now to be had at the wholesale houses. This article has been very scarce here of late. Bulbous stock is increasing in quantity and prices are decreasing accordingly. It seems as though calla lilies have become more popular this season for they have been selling readily at fair prices. Violets are in great supply and sell at 50 cents per hundred for choice.

Our representatives came back from Buffalo well pleased with the carnation meeting and the treatment they received there. H. SCHWARZ.

DAYTON, O.—The Dayton Paper Novelty Company recently suffered a serious fire, which is handicapping them in the delivery of orders. Of the stock destroyed there were 150,000 boxes ready for shipment to the Good & Reese Co., of Springfield.

AURORA, ILL.—F. F. Smith, formerly of the Sixty-seventh street greenhouses at Englewood, is now with his son, W. L. Smith, here. Mr. Smith was formerly in the plow business and is the inventor of the first plow made that would scour in prairie soil. He has just made a lot of models for Deere & Co., Moline, Ill., and is at present engaged on a new sulky plow he has invented and which he believes to be a world beater.

"MACK RICHMOND"
The Red Carnation. A Sport from Tidal Wave.

We know there have been many red sports from Tidal Wave, but we claim that this one is the premier of its class.

We have grown it for three years, and under the careful selection of our foreman, Mr. Mack Richmond, it has improved each year.

It is not the only red, nor is it the largest, but it will outbloom any carnation ever grown by us, and we have grown a few.

The flowers are borne upon strong, stiff stems, never bursting, entirely free from rust and a splendid grower. Come and see it growing--it may astonish you.

NOW READY; $6 per 100, $50 per 1000.

HALLIDAY BROS., 11 East Baltimore Street, BALTIMORE, MD.

THE IDEAL PINK CARNATION Genevieve Lord

Fills the bill. The ladies declare it is just right in color. We claim it has the best stem of any Carnation. That it will rank very near the top in size. That its odor is very sweet. That it is the most profitable Carnation we ever grew. That it has an individuality all its own. Customers recognize it at a glance. There is not a great deal left that is wanting in this variety. If you want to make money, plant it. But don't delay, for stock for delivery prior to March 20 is all sold. It is an easy, rapid grower, however, and the April and May deliveries will make large, fine plants. Some of the finest plants we have are from cuttings from sand planted in the field June 1st. Remember all sold until March 20th. If you wait too long the chances are that we will be sold out of stock. Make yourself safe by ordering at once.

NO SPRING FLOWER SHOW IN THE CRESCENT CITY.—STATE FAIR ASSOCIATION TO AWARD FLOWER PREMIUMS.—FLOWERS COME FROM THE NORTH.

At the last meeting of the horticultural society the committee of arrangement for the spring show was discharged, it being decided that our only exhibition of plants will be in connection with the Industrial State Fair, which is going to open at the fair grounds on April 14. Prizes will be given by the association, the same as to any other exhibitors. The horticultural society will only award two gold medals, to the best displays of plants.

So far our winter has been very mild. Business has not opened yet. Most trees are now replanted to replace the loss of last season. People are realizing that nursery-grown trees are the only ones to be depended on. So far they have been using swamp trees, which gave poor satisfaction. Our soil is low and many species of trees don't stand when old. On some of our principal avenues most of the oaks and elms have died. Old age is the cause and not electric wires or digging around the roots, as some people believe.

Our gardens are without flowers and any kind of decoration or funeral design has to be made with northern material. The Mardi Gras is coming and with all the festivities around that time we will have to get a good supply of roses and carnations from the north. M. M. L.

MATTITUCK, N. Y.—T. E. Reeve & Son have made a considerable success of cauliflower, lettuce and radishes for the New York market. They now have 4,000 cauliflower under glass which they expect to bring from $3.50 to $4 50 per dozen.

HOLTON & HUNKEL CO., MILWAUKEE, WIS.

ETHEL CROCKER

Absolutely the BEST PINK CARNATION ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another). By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety). In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July. With 18 000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and the order filled by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished, prepaid, at $1.00 per dozen—amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date, every sample, excepting one, out of several hundred sent, has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES, good little plants, at 75 cts. per 100; $4.00 per 1000. Price list of standard vars. ready now.

Madison, N. J.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society held its monthly meeting on February 14, all the officers and nineteen members being present. The members all expressed satisfaction at the elegant manner in which the "smoker" went off at the previous meeting and the committee was discharged with thanks. A debate took place on the past and future of the rose and carnation and it was generally thought that more rapid strides had been made with the carnation than with the rose but it was hoped that the new American Rose Society would be able to strike the keynote of development, as the carnation society had done and is doing at the present. It was voted that $25 be appropriated for a prize for eighteen blooms of Bride and eighteen blooms of Bridesmaid (open class) to be competed for at the exhibition of the rose society in March. An offer of $15 was also received from F. R. Pierson Co., of Tarrytown, for a prize for twelve blooms of Col. D. Appleton chrysanthemum, to be competed for at our annual flower show in November. C. H. A.

Toronto.

The weather has been very dull and changeable the last week and consequently the quality of flowers is not fully up to the mark. Business continues good. Manton Bros. have erected a large house for violets, which is nearly completed.

The Toronto Horticultural Society's February meeting was well attended. Some excellent azaleas, primulas, hyacinths, freesias and flowering begonias were shown by Ernest Collins, of the Horticultural Gardens, who described the best methods of growing them. Wm. Jay showed and talked of cyclamens and George Mills lily of the valley. Some difference of opinion as to methods of growth among the professionals present led to considerable discussion of a very instructive nature. S. P.

Pteris Deweyana.
A most desirable new fern, now offered for the first time by the raiser, J. H. Ley. It is a most distinct cross between P. Cretica Albo-lineata and P. Serrulata. Habit dense and very dwarf; fertile fronds, erect, smooth and narrow, barren fronds very bright and beautifully undulated; produced in quantity, never rusts; hard, and grows very freely from spores.

TRADE GOOD BUT STOCK SCARCE.—THE BOWLERS REGALE THEMSELVES.—A NEW STORE.

Business has been unusually good for the past two weeks, with not enough stock to go around. Roses, especially, are off crop. The Gallup Floral Co., recently received a shipment of two dozen Beauties, which were the finest Denver has seen for years, perfect flowers with stems ten feet long.

The bowling club gave a luncheon and smoker February 9 to dispose of the surplus in the treasury. Some twenty of the boys sat down to a most substantial repast. The Park Floral Co. donated the decorations and A. M. Lewis acted as toastmaster.

Chas. Theiss has moved into his new store at 628 Sixteenth street. With the new fixtures the place is right up to date and one of the best locations in the city.

HALLIDAY BROS. HAVE A CARNATION SHOW.—MANY FINE FLOWERS STAGED.—ALL THE NOVELTIES ARE ON VIEW.—ADMIRED BY THE ELITE.

Halliday Bros. attracted the elite of the city to their store on February 14, by the most remarkable showing of carnations ever seen in Baltimore. Their own stock was very fine and included Mack Richmond, their splendid seedling; Mrs. Bradt, White Cloud and several other varieties. There was a vase of Olympia from John N. May in which every bloom was at least three and one-half inches across, supported on two-foot stems as thick as a lead pencil.

Robert Craig & Son were represented by a vase of Ethel Crocker and H. F. Michell sent the new pink, Mrs. Lippincott, which is a shade darker than Daybreak. H. Weber & Sons showed Genevieve Lord, as charming as the debutant for whom it was named.

The Marquis was also on exhibition, as high bread and excellent as the name would indicate. And Dailledouze Bros.' seedling, No. 666, was there in full glory, and looking at the enormous flowers it was easier to believe that it had sold for $1 each in New York at Christmas.

The whole show was a credit to the exhibitors and to the firm that got it up.

Insects Infesting Carnations.

[Read at the ninth annual convention of the American Carnation Society, Buffalo, N. Y., February 15-16, 1900, by Prof. F. A. Sirrine, Jamaica, N. Y.]

Florists in general are not only familiar with all the insects infesting the carnation, but also with the whole category of remedies; hence, it appears like a waste of time to devote a few minutes to the above subject. Yet, when one can cull from florists' periodicals such statements as: "Lack of ventilation favors the development of the red spider;" or, "It resents light almost as much as fresh air;" also "Give as much fresh air as possible—that is what red spider does not like;" a few facts regarding the habits and life history of this and other carnation pests will bear consideration.

Before taking up the subject of habits and life history a portion of another statement requires notice. It is: "Water is the remedy for thrips or red spider. Select some bright morning and syringe heavily and later see that the roots of the plants never get dry, for drought at some time or other, or too much fire heat, is the source whence both pests originate." Note that the latter portion of this statement conveys the idea of spontaneous generation. The days of spontaneous generation, if they ever existed among insects, passed away long before Adam was a gardener. We often hear the expression "a new insect" used. A new creation is not intended by such a statement. This term is used either when a long established insect adapts itself to new conditions, or it has succeeded up to the present time in keeping out of the way of a "bugologist" with his long label and his still longer name with which he burdens it.

The insects infesting carnations may be separated for convenience into two groups: First, those which are nearly always to be found on the carnation, and, second, those which occur on the plants only occasionally, and then usually by accident. That is to say, we have resident and transient insect pests of the carnation. A subdivision of each of the above groups into "forcing-house" and "field" pests could easily be made, but all divisions are empirical and of value simply to avoid a discussion of each species alone. At this time only the "forcing-house" pests of the carnation will be considered.

In the first group may be classed the greenfly, red spider and thrips, while in the second group we have the cutworms, cabbage looper, an undetermined web-worm; the rose-leaf tyer, the chrysanthemum-leaf skeletouizer, Fuller's rose beetle, white grub, white ants and a few others.

The greenfly (Rhopalosiphum dianthi).—As the specific name indicates this aphid was first found and described as infesting dianthus. At present it might be called polyphagous as it is known to feed on nearly one hundred different varieties of plants.

This pest is so well known that a description is not needed, but a few words on habits will not be out of place. Plate I shows where they prefer to work on the carnation. Under natural conditions this species of aphid, like most other aphids which feed upon deciduous plants, deposits eggs late in the fall, in which form it passes the winter, but, under forcing-house conditions this habit is entirely lost. Instead of the young hatching from eggs, they are produced year after year by a process of internal budding which we call "agamic reproduction." That is, certain cells separate from the abdominal walls of the mother and develop the same as plant buds develop. These buds grow into small aphids and are deposited alive by the parent. No fathers are needed in this process and they are rarely produced. With one exception; viz., as far as known the greenfly never degenerates by being reproduced from buds, like strains of plants degenerate. We have the same kind of propagation in an insect as a florist practices with the variety or strain of a carnation. As most of you are aware, in the case of the greenfly this is not a slow process of reproduction. One mathematician has estimated that the offspring of an individual aphis can in one year amount to 210 raised to the fifteenth power, a number which is almost impossible to express in figures. If there were no checks to this method of reproduction "there would be room in the world for nothing else but aphids."

I have said that as far as known there is no loss of vitality on the part of the greenfly by the above method of reproduction. At times the older specimens, which usually live only about three weeks, become inert and reproduce very slowly. Whether this is due to exhaustion or is a provision to carry them through unfavorable conditions is not known. Possibly it is a form of hibernation. This much is certain—tobacco smoke will not kill these individuals and they will stand hydrocyanic acid gas better than will the plants. Conditions which bring about this inert state are exhaustion of the plant on which they are feeding and frequent fumigation of the plants with tobacco smoke.

Not all the individuals of each brood develop wings, but under forcing house conditions, winged females are produced in nearly every brood. This is necessary to prevent overstocking the plant. It also allows them to spread to all parts of the house more rapidly.

Red spider (Tetranychus telarius).—Here we have another pest which needs no description as it is already well known by all. The red spider differs slightly from the greenfly in its method of reproduction. Each brood hatches from eggs which are deposited on nearly all kinds of plants during every season of the year except winter, but, as with the greenfly, males are not always needed. The red spider belongs with the true mites, such as sugar and cheese mites, itch mites, etc. At the same time the mites form one branch of the spider family. The red spider spins webs, the same as all spiders, which are of special use in fastening the eggs to the leaf.

Judging from the clipping previously quoted which claimed that the red spider originated from too much fire heat, or drought, the life history of this pest is not well known. Under natural conditions, at this season of the year, they are to be found on plants in the egg stage only. Their eggs can be discovered at the present time on many plants, both annual and perennial, living and dead, looking like mere red dots. The parent spider deposits these eggs in the fall, around the buds, under rough bits of bark, and even on the leaves which drop. During the latter part of April I have seen newly hatched young swarming over the grass under chestnut trees and traveling up the body of the tree in such countless numbers that the bark appeared to be in motion.

Ten days to two weeks are required before the first brood is developed enough to commence to lay eggs. After this period there is a new brood about once in every three weeks throughout the whole season. They thrive and increase rapidly while there is plenty of wind and bright sunlight. Excessive rains in May and June do not injure the eggs but they have a bad effect on the young or newly hatched red spiders. They appear to get tangled in the wet webs and are not able to survive the chill which they receive. During extreme heat of mid-summer, the egg laying is sometimes checked, but usually they can stand plenty of heat combined with sunlight and air. Hence you see that naturally this insect thrives under conditions which are supposed by some to be adverse to them, especially in forcing houses. I have yet to see it proven that syringing plants with water has any effect on the adult insect. A few of them may be knocked from the plants by the force of the water, but they soon crawl back. I have observed that the best time to have apparent success with syringing of plants with water is to wait until a good many eggs are deposited; then apply the water with force. The old, exhausted red spiders are knocked from the plants and the result is that the plants will appear clean for a week or ten days, that is, until time for the new brood to hatch from the eggs. The immature red spider can be distinguished from the adult by the fact that they only have three pairs of legs, while the adult has four pairs. Plate II.

It is not known how many distinct broods of the red spider occur out of doors each year. In October, when the leaves commence to fall, males occur in the brood and the winter eggs are deposited. It is not known how often males occur under forcing house conditions. Their rate of increase is equal to that of the greenfly.

Thrips.—Several species of this pest occur in greenhouses and attack nearly all kinds of plants. The species which causes the injury shown on Plate III. and is usually found on "twittered" carnations, has been described as an "onion thrips," "cabbage thrips" and a "tobacco thrips." In the vicinity of New York city, carnations are usually infested with this species. Before it was noticed injuring onions and cabbage in this country it was called Thrips tobaci by an European entomologist.

As this pest and its work is not well known, a full description will be admissible. Furthermore, from recommendations given in the Florists' Exchange for 1898, p. 1124a, quoted from Peter Henderson's "Practical Floriculture," this pest has apparently been confused with the so-called "rose-thrips," which is not a thrip at all, but a leaf-hopper, one of the Jassidæ.

The tobacco thrips, the species which infest carnations, is shown on Plate IV, Fig. 1, with wings expanded. A related species (Heliothrips hæmorrhoidalis) which occurs on ferns and other conservatory plants, is shown in natural position on the same plate, Fig. 2. As shown by the illustrations, the adult insects are winged and have six legs. Their wings, of which there are two pairs, are very thin, delicate membranes fringed with long hairs. They are not able to hop, but they make short flights which gives them the appearance of hopping like the rose leaf hopper. The larvæ or immature thrips, both males and females, are wingless. They are of a light yellow color, while the adults closely resemble the soil around the plants.

The adult females deposit their eggs within the tissues of the plants upon which they feed. The time required for the eggs to hatch and the number of broods occurring each year is not known. This insect probably hibernates as adults and not in the egg state. They hide away under rubbish and under the rough bark of the plants on which they feed.

They usually attack carnations in the fall while the latter are in the field. Feeding as they do on the tender, unfolding leaves of the plant, they may, in some cases, cause the twisting that is called "carnation twitter." The chances are, that "carnation twitter" can be produced by any cause which checks the growth of the plant and is rarely the work of thrips.

When the plants are transferred from the field to the forcing house the thrips are taken along. As soon as the plants commence to throw flower buds the thrip works its way into the latter, where he will be safe from all human attacks. Here it feeds upon the partially developed petals, not only distorting them but robbing them of their coloring pigment so that the flowers not only have irregular white blotches on the petals, but often they do not open properly. In some cases the petals bleed to such an extent that the flowers rot before they open. Not satisfied with making the flowers appear as if affected with leprosy they deposit their eggs in the tissue of the inner or upper surface of the calyx.

Before taking up the subject of controlling the three pests discussed thus far, we should know how they feed and breathe, also how they get into the forcing-house.

The greenfly is provided with a proboscis or beak-like mouth parts similar to that of the bed-bug. With this it punctures the plants and sucks the clear sap or liquid from all the surrounding tissue. Usually the tissues of the plant are only slightly broken by the feeding process of the greenfly. The red spider and the thrips are both provided with biting mouth parts. They first bite open the cells of the leaf tissue and then proceed to lap or suck up not only the juices but also the coloring matter from the broken cells. These broken, empty cells give the whitish appearance to the plants on which the latter pests feed. Hence the small size of these pests combined with their method of feeding makes the use of poisons impossible.

All insects breathe by means of small openings called spiricals which are arranged in rows on each side of the body. The spiricals connect with small tubes or arteries which divide and penetrate to all parts of the insect. Therefore, insects have air instead of blood circulating to all parts of their bodies. The closing of the spiricals with powders, washes, or with fumes of any kind, suffocates the insect, and this is the only way we have of combating the above pests. With such small insects this is easier said than done. It is almost impossible to make the treatment thorough on such small objects.

All three pests can be carried into the forcing house at the time the plants are taken in. The greenfly and thrips both produce winged individuals which can find their way into the houses by way of the ventilators. Red spider can be carried into the houses on cannas, dahlias or any other plants or bulbs which have some tops on them when stored under the benches.

The oft recommended remedy for greenfly and thrips is fumigation with tobacco or steam from tobacco extracts. Water is the standard remedy for red spider and is often assumed to be good for thrips. I have yet to find the forcing house which has once become infested with greenfly and afterward fumigated weekly with tobacco in some form until it shows signs of nicotine poisoning, in which I cannot still find the greenfly hidden away in out of the way corners. I doubt if ever an adult thrip was killed by fumigation of any sort. Unless the latter are very thick and crowded for feeding ground, they are hidden away in the folds of the leaves, too well protected to be reached even by tobacco smoke. Up to the present time we have no safer method of controlling the greenfly on carnations than fumigation with tobacco smoke at time the plants are flowering.

Fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas has been recommended for violets and in a few cases for carnations. I have tested the latter in various ways, making upwards of fifty distinct tests on carnations. Plate V shows how plants that are flowering will be liable to be injured from the banking of the gas in the upper portions of the house. This gas is so much lighter than air and compresses itself into the upper spaces of the house to such an extent that, even though only one half-ounce of ninety-eight per cent cyanide of potash was used for every 1000 cubic feet, it banked enough to cause the injury shown on the above plate. The injury was not noticeable until about two weeks after treatment and consisted of a whitened ring around the buds and a few white spots on the upper leaves. The former did not appear to interfere with the perfect development of the flowers. In the above case, where only one-half ounce of the cyanide of potash was used, the gas was allowed to act all night. Although the plants were slightly injured, further work by the greenfly was stopped. Three days after treatment a few specimens were found still living. These apparently were old females that were through budding and in time died a natural death, as two weeks later not a living specimen could be found in the house.

As previously stated, syringing with water is usually recommended for red spider and thrips on carnations. Sometimes such substances as salt and water, also soap suds, are recommended. In addition, all patented insecticides, such as Thrip Juice, Nikoteen, Rose Leaf Extract, Antipest, etc., are warranted to kill both red spider and thrips. Nothing is ever said about the effect on the plants of the latter substance.

I think you will all agree with me that heavy syringing of carnations which stand eighteen inches high, with water, is anything but beneficial to the plants. If each grower would take the time to test water and some other substances side by side on the same bench of carnations on which the red spider has become established, he would prove to his satisfaction that such quantities of water injure the plants nearly as much as does the red spider.

I can see no difference in results between salt and water, and pure water. Both substances act as previously described, on the young at the time they issue from the egg; at the same time both substances favor the development of the rust and spot diseases on the plants.

Notice it is not claimed that water, salt and the proprietary substances are of no use on any plants. Some may answer fairly well on plants other than carnations. I have used Nikoteen at the rate of one teaspoonful to a gallon of water, as a wash for thrips on ferns, with excellent results. But Nikoteen is vile stuff to put on any plant and should never be used on plants which, like carnations, have the foliage covered with a bloom. Besides no substances can be made to reach the thrips after they have got into the carnation buds.

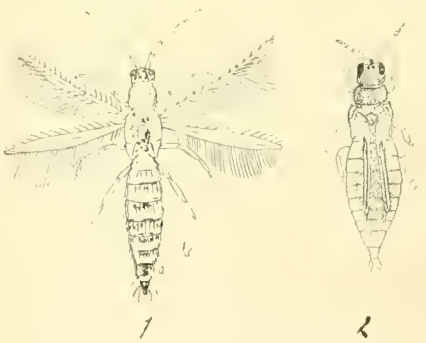

PLATE IV.—1. Tobacco thrips, a showing natural size. 2. Heliothrips from fern.

I have used hydrocyanic acid on this pest, when on ferns, as strong as three ounces to 1,000 cubic feet of space, allowing it to act all night without injuring the thrips in the least. We will say nothing about the condition of the plants.

As far as tested, the best results from treatment of red spider have been obtained from the use of a soap solution made by dissolving one ounce of Ivory soap in one gallon of water, or in that proportion. All individuals struck with this solution were killed, and if the plants were not too heavily drenched, the bloom on the foliage was discolored but little. Open flowers should be gathered before attempting to use the soap solution. A home-made soap made of clean lard and the best potash lye would answer just as well as Ivory soap. Fish oil soaps will kill the red spider but they have the disadvantage of discoloring the foliage and in addition give the plants a bad odor.

The Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station has shown that good potash soaps are fungicides, preventing leaf curl of the peach. (Bulletin 103, p. 136; also Bulletin 104, p. 202.)

Another measure which is absolutely safe to use on the carnation when flowering, and just as destructive to the red spider as water, or salt and water, is the ammoniacal solution of copper carbonate, called cupram. This is a valuable fungicide, which does not soil the foliage in the least. By syringing the plants twice a week with this solution the required amount of moisture to check the development of the red spider can be furnished without supplying a forcing bed for rust and the spot diseases. It is made as follows: To one volume of 26 degrees ammonia add seven volumes of water. If one quart of ammonia is used, suspend five ounces of copper carbonate in the mixture of water and ammonia; cover, and allow to stand over night. For use take one quart of the clear solution and add four gallons of water.

Where the thrips has once gotten a foothold in the buds of the carnation, the only method of controlling him is to carefully gather all the buds which show his work, before they open and destroy them. No old, soiled flowers should be left in the benches.

In conclusion, I would recommend the following measures to prevent and control the three worst pests that trouble carnation growers: If possible select land that has grown corn or potatoes one year after being in sod. Avoid having old hedges and rubbish patches on the margins of the carnation field. These harbor red spider and greenfly. Never plant carnations under or around trees. The latter harbor red spider. Do not grow cabbage or related plants by the side of the carnation. These furnish abundant crops of thrips. At time of transplanting use heroic measures. First dip the plants in a soap solution, being careful not to get the solution on the roots. This solution can be made as already recommended from Ivory soap, or from Good's potash soap, Owen's U. S. Standard Caustic Potash soap, or even from a home-made fish-oil soap. Of the latter use one gallon of soap to thirty-two gallons of water. The home-made fish-oil soap is made as follows: Caustic potash, one pound; fish-oil, three pints; soft water, two gallons. Dissolve lye in the water, then add oil and stir. Boil from twenty minutes to one hour.

As soon as plants are established in benches, syringe thoroughly with the Ivory soap solution, giving a second treatment ten days later.

The above treatment should free the plants of all three pests, but a later treatment may be needed for greenfly which have found their way into the house through the ventilators. If these are discovered while the plants are short and not flowering to any extent, fumigate with hydrocyanic acid gas, using one-half ounce of ninety-eight per cent of cyanide of potash, one ounce of sulphuric acid and three ounces of water to every 1,200 cubic feet of space in the house. Allow gas to act all night. A week or ten days later repeat the fumigation. Remember that this gas is one of the most deadly poisons known; be sure the workmen realize this fact. After all the above precautions have been taken, do not store any plants under the benches.

The florist who becomes convinced that he must fight these three pests each fall from the start, will be the one who will have the best success.

The worst of the transient pests are the variegated cutworm (Peridroma saucia) and the cabbage looper (Plusia Brassicæ). The former, while small, is a climbing cutworm which feeds at night and hides in the loose soil during the day. This is one of the most common of the cutworms. It is found in nearly all countries, and usually occurs in forcing houses more frequently than other cutworms. In color it is a sooty brown with a yellow stripe mottled with red on each side of its body. The head is reddish yellow. The adult insect, or moth, is very indistinctly marked. Many writers have assumed that this cutworm is carried into the house in the soil. The fact that they occur in forcing houses more frequently than other species of cutworms, combined with the fact that they are often found in considerable numbers in spots throughout a house, indicates that the eggs are deposited on the carnations by the parent moth, or "miller," after transplanting. The latter can easily fly into houses on cloudy days and early in the evening during the months of September and October. The young worms climb to the buds, eat holes through the calyx and then devour all the floral parts.

The cabbage looper is shown in the adult and caterpillar stage on Plate VI. The caterpillar is a light green worm about one and one-half inches long, when full grown, which can always be recognized by its habit of looping the body when traveling. The moth or "miller" has mottled, dark brown head and wings. Two white spots on each fore wing sometimes resemble the figure 8. The hind wings are slate color, varying to tawny, while the body is covered with gray and tawny red hairs. This pest, like the variegated cut worm, feeds usually at night, on the buds and in the same manner. During the day they attach themselves to a stem of the plant by means of their caudal legs and stand at the same angle as do the leaves. This habit requires sharp eyes to find them. They can be carried into the house on the plants, but usually the female moth finds her way into the house through open ventilators. They are on the wing all the fall, especially on cloudy days and late in the afternoon. Like the cut worm moth they are able to lay two or three hundred eggs, hence one fertile moth can very thoroughly distribute eggs to all parts of the house.

The best means of combating either or both of the above pests is to hunt for the caterpillars at night with a lantern and hand-pick them. Although some have recommended the use of Paris green, it is impossible to get enough poison on the buds of the carnation to kill the worms. After the cut worms get too large to climb, a poisoned bait made by mixing one part green arsenite with fifteen parts of middlings or dry bran, can be used to advantage. This should be distributed in small heaps around the plants where the cut worms are at work.

As far as known the white grubs never occur in the forcing house except as they are carried in with the soil. The only way to get rid of them is to dig them out.

The rose leaf tyer (Cacoecia rosaceana) and the chrysanthemum leaf skeletonizer (Phlyctaenia ferrugalis) sometimes occur on carnations where roses and chrysanthemums have been grown in the same house. These pests will attack the carnations after the other plants have been removed. When they are found working in a house hand picking must be resorted to.

A small green worm, probably a tertricid, which ties a number of leaves together with a web, is sometimes carried from the field into the house with plants. The adult of this worm has not been bred, hence its scientific name is not known, nor do we know what other plants it feeds upon in the field. Thus far it has been gotten rid of easily by hand picking.

A fly about one-half as large as the house fly, is frequently seen in carnation houses during the winter. This has been reported as feeding in the maggot stage on the roots of the carnation. I have seen flies very numerous in houses but have been unable thus far to prove that they feed in the larval or maggot stage on the living roots of the plants. It seems more probable that they feed on the decaying roots only.

White ants or termites (Termes flavipes).—This pest is apt to occur in old style houses in which the wood work has been allowed to become partially rotten, especially if worm-eaten locust posts are used to support the benches. White ants have the peculiar habit of keeping away from daylight. They always make covered runways and usually find their way to the bench through a rotten or worm-eaten post. Houses that have brick or stone foundations and iron posts for the benches are not troubled with white ants, unless the latter are accidentally carried into the house in the soil, a thing that rarely happens. When once established in a house the only method of getting rid of them is to throw out the soil and remove all rotten woodwork. Creosotes and other wood preservers can be used on the posts and bottoms of the benches, but such substances should be used with care on the outsides of benches. I have seen houses of chrysanthemums severely injured by fumes given off by wood preservers. Probably this would only occur where such treated wood is subjected to considerable heat from too close contact to pipes.

Fuller's rose beetle.—I think this insect has never been reported as feeding upon carnations. In October of 1899 I received specimens of this beetle from Little Falls, N. Y., accompanied with the statement that they were feeding on carnations. At first it appeared a difficult matter to account for their presence in the carnation house and at that season of the year. Inquiry developed the fact that in 1897-98 the house had contained roses in solid beds. During fall of 1898 the roses were taken out, six inches of the old dirt removed and replaced with new soil, after which carnations were planted in the beds. In 1899 benches were built over the old beds without removal of soil from latter. When first noticed the beetles were always found feeding on the plants along the margin of the benches. Probably the beetles fed during the grub stage on the roots of the roses, this being their proper food plant. In 1899 when they issued as adult beetles they found nothing but carnations to feed upon. From all reports they were satisfied with the change. It was found that the beetles feed principally at night and hide away under the foliage of the plants during the day. They were gotten rid of by hand picking at night.

ADVENT OF LENT MARKS THE DECLINE OF VALUES.—STOCKS WILL HEREAFTER EXCEED DEMAND.—SIX WEEKS OF HARD SLEDDING IN SIGHT.—NEW WHOLESALERS OPEN.—A RETAILER TAKES HODGSON'S STAND.—ALLEN PLEASED WITH HIS MOVE.—NOTES.

Ash Wednesday finds the flower trade of New York already in a very wobbly condition for, during the past week, although it was the closing week of the busy season, prices have been on the downward track and the accumulation of stock in wholesalers' hands indicating that a still greater decline is imminent. The weather has been very cold, but the advantage of decreased cut in consequence is more than over-balanced by the inability of the "street merchants" to do any business when the thermometer is below the freezing point. "Street merchants" they are and will be, now, for sometime and much deference will be accorded them. During the busy season they were only "street fakers" and were in the way, but from now on their services are indispensable and nobody knows that any better than the "merchants" themselves.

The wholesalers are not saying much but are thoughtfully gathering themselves together for the six week's hard campaigning which they realize lies between them and Easter. The spring weather, when it does come, will give them enough to take care of, for all indications point to a heavy production in all lines. Violets have been beating the record as to numbers, right along, and are even now producing as heavily as they have done at a month later date, heretofore.

Changes are still going on in the wholesale district. The new firm of Ghormley & Perkins opens this week at 57 West Twenty-eight street, but will continue to occupy as a branch, until May 1, the old location on West Twenty-ninth street, where Mr. Perkins has been located for some time. The new store is being fitted up in first-class shape.

Aldrich & Co. is the name of a new retail establishment just opened at the corner of Forty-sixth street and Fifth avenue, the place so long occupied by J. M. Hodgson. The company in the new firm is E. W. Weimar, of Mount Vernon.

J. K. Allen expresses much gratification over the business that has come to his new wholesale establishment. The move to the block west of Sixth avenue was made with some diffidence, but he is satisfied now that it was a wise step.

There is nothing new in the market worth special mention. Brunners are still so light in receipts that they make no impression. Lilacs are coming in very heavily from some growers whose judgment seems to have been faulty, for it is not possible to unload such a quantity to advantage.

H. A. Bunyard recently received, in good order, 60,000 English and Irish stocks of Manetti.

Gus. Bergmann, who has been with John Young for the past six years, has been ordered south by his physician.

There are quantities of very poor Harrisii lily flowers coming to this market at present.

Wm. Ford is confined to his home with grippe this week.

BUSINESS FAIRLY GOOD AND STOCK IN SHORT SUPPLY.—PRICES REMAIN FIRM.—CARNATIONS IN SUPERLATIVE DEMAND.—IDEAS ADVANCED AT THE FARMERS' INSTITUTE.—SPRING SHOW AN ASSURED SUCCESS.—LIBERAL CASH PRIZES.—THE QUAKER CITY WELL ENDOWED WITH HORTICULTURAL SOCIETIES.—KENNEDY GOES TO CLEVELAND.—EASTER LILIES PROMISE WELL.

We have just experienced a severe cold spell, the last dying gasp of winter, for spring is here. The thermometer touched the zero point and compelled extra visits to the coal bins. Business has been fairly good. Although the supply of flowers has been short lately, there seems to have been enough to go around, the fakirs being affected the most, they being creatures of the surplus. Prices are about as last week, Beauty roses in the middle sizes being very scarce. If some grower should be fortunate enough to find an American Beauty "sport" that would develop good flowers on stems of about twenty-four inches in length, he would have a little Klondike all to himself. A house of Brunners or Laings in from February 15 would surely have paid handsomely and jostled at least one of the "big four" not a little. Almost any kind of a carnation finds ready sale at present, the crops being so short. A box known to contain carnations coming into the wholesale houses is immediately surrounded and the contents vanishes in a moment; $2 per hundred is asked for any fair flowers and $2.50 is readily obtained for good stock, while the higher grades bring from $3 to $4. Violets are plentiful at 75 cents for the doubles and 35 cents to 50 cents for the singles. Bulbous stock is always in the van at from $3 to $4, lily of the valley being plentiful at $3 for good stock.

The meeting of the Farmers' Institute held under the auspicies of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and the Florists' Club was very interesting but, we are sorry to say, poorly attended. An interesting statement was made by Prof. Heiges in reference to grafted or budded stock. He said that the scion or graft was not affected in the slightest degree by the stock other than to give it increased strength. A great many varieties of cherries, for instance, may be grafted on a cherry tree, yet each will remain true to name and have every characteristic of its kind. The sap flows from the roots of the tree to all the branches alike and passing into the leaves is then transformed and becomes individualized. The sap, the speaker said, passed to the extreme length of the branch or stem before it began to disseminate and on its return passed into the leaves. This is the reason the extreme buds on a plant are always the first to start. Prof. Macfarlane, of the University of Pennsylvania, by means of lantern slides, took his hearers through the various botanic gardens of the world. His lecture was very instructive.

The March meeting and spring exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society promises well. Secretary Rust says that the show will be a fine one, as many private gardeners as well as commercial growers will take part. A pleasant feature, and one to be commended, is that all the premiums are cash, and spot cash at that, the secretary having now in hand over $400, all donated by friends interested in this revival of the spring show. The premiums for cut roses will be especially liberal and perhaps something worthy to be added to the "big four" may be brought out.

Washington's birthday was celebrated at Chestnut Hill, this city, by the birth of a new horticultural society and an exhibition of flowers and blooming plants. It is called the Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society, and has the same general objects as all similar bodies. Exhibitions will be a feature of its meetings the second Tuesday of each month, in Joslyn Hall, Germantown avenue below Highland avenue, Chestnut Hill. The officers are: President, John T. Morris; secretary, Robert C. Carey; treasurer, Wm. H. Housten. This is the third horticultural society organized in this city and, with the Wayne society a few miles out of town, places this city in the van in the number of its horticultural organizations, all of which are holding meetings and exhibitions at stated intervals.

Isaac Kennedy, who has held the position of foreman with John Burton for the past five years, has resigned and is going west to take charge of J. M. Gasser's place at Cleveland, O. We are sorry to lose Mr. Kennedy, whose magnificent stature was the pride of our club. He is a genial fellow, well liked by all who know him. He was formerly foreman for several years for Robert Scott & Son and has been very successful as a grower and will no doubt add to his laurels in his new field.

Referring to Easter lilies, one of the large growers of this city said recently that in all the crops he had seen there was less disease than for several years and that this season the growers, if they guess the weather right, are likely to get enough money out of their efforts to at least pay for the bulbs. SATISFACTION EVERYWHERE MANIFEST.—BUSINESS HEAVY AND STEADY FOR MANY WEEKS.—LENT BRINGS NO DECREASE.—BLIZZARD MAKES MISCHIEF.—GUARDIAN ANGEL CARNATION.—LYNCH IS MOVING—CUTTINGS TRADE LIVELY.—FIRE IN AN OVERTURNED WAGON.—FLORISTS AS JURYMEN.—VARIOUS NOTES OF INTERESTS.

There is not a word of complaint heard in the Chicago market. The winter season has been one of the liveliest on record and the advent of Lent has brought no appreciable falling off. All through January and February business has been active and steady and the growers have received returns which, considering the quantity of stock produced, have seldom been excelled. The only drawback has been the scarcity of material, weeks at a time finding the market short, and at this time there has not been sufficient increase in supply to weaken prices, except on one or two items. American Beauties are more plentiful and some fine stock is coming in but there is still a scarcity except of short stemmed buds, which constitute a large part of the cut. Brides and Bridesmaids have become plentiful enough to meet ordinary demands and some very good stock is now obtainable. Carnations were hardly ever better and sales are assured, so that prices are firm. Bulbous stock is doing fairly well but violets have suffered. In Wednesday's blizzard and in the following days, before trade opened, they piled up badly. Shipping trade was good last week, considerable quantities of stock going south for the Mardi Gras.

There is now an extensive range of glass at the Guardian Angel Orphan Asylum, out at High Ridge. The greenhouses have been built and fitted by the boys of the institution, who also grow the ordinary market sorts of plants and flowers in highly creditable style. Bedding plants are grown very extensively for cemetery purposes. A very fine sport of Carnation Armazindy, which has been named Guardian Angel, is now being propagated very freely. The flowers are of a good shade of pink, much like Wm. Scott, borne on the usual fine Armazindy stems. The sport was exhibited before the Chicago Florists' Club, January 19, and was awarded a certificate, scoring 90 points.

W. E. Lynch is moving into his new location at 64 Wabash, corner of Randolph street. He will have plenty of room, good light and every convenience and will, moreover, be on a corner passed every day by every one of the city buyers.

George Reinberg expresses himself as well satisfied with the early business in rooted cuttings. He is not going to build this season but will spend some money in improving his glass to improve its output.

August Jurgens' wagon was blown over while down town on February 24, one of the worst days of the winter, and caught fire from the stove used to keep the stock from freezing. The loss, however, was not great.

George Piepgras, who has been on the floor with Lynch at 19 and 21 Randolph street, has secured space at E. C. Amling's and will remove as soon as things can be put in shape for him.

G. E. Pieser, secretary of the Kennicott Bros. Co., and George Piepgras are serving on the jury in Judge Clifford's court.

Several of the big growers had carnation cuttings just ready to ship when the below-zero spell came on and were obliged to pot them up.

Charles Schafer will put up a fine range of glass at Kankakee and will devote it exclusively to carnations for this market.

Alex Newett, now with Kidwell, will leave the city next week to enter the employ of L. J. Stuppy, of St Joseph, Mo.

H. O. Hinckley, of Rockford, was in town one day this week showing some very fine violets.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was in town this week.

J. B. Deamud is receiving some fine Harrisii lilies from Stollery Bros.

C. L. Washburn is not enjoying his usual good health.

TRADE SLACKENS OFF.—CARNATIONS VIGOROUS BUT ROSES WEAK.—BULBOUS STOCK HOLDS ITS OWN.—DAFFODILS LOW.—GOOD THINGS EXHIBITED.

Trade is a little weak at present writing. Carnations do not feel it and are fully as vigorous and self-assertive as at any time during the past month, but roses are decidedly on the downward course and the end of mid-winter values is undoubtedly here. This is due principally to the rapidly increasing cut, which is only saved from precipitating a slump by the genuine winter weather and zero temperature with which we have had to associate during the week. Bulbous stock holds its own, especially Paper White narcissi, which sell better on the average than any other stock of like character. Yellow daffodils are selling too low, considering the cost of bulbs and growing them. Violets are overplenty but, with the exception of the single sorts, are not up to the standard of quality now demanded generally.

On Saturday, February 24, there was a very interesting little exhibition at Horticultural Hall. Rea Bros. showed several of Lemoine's hybrid deutzias. From J. E. Rothwell came hybrid Cypripedium Leander, which received a silver medal, and from W. P. Winsor a Dendrobium nobile with the two lower sepals marked with a dark purple blotch, for which a certificate of merit was given. A seedling carnation from David Monteith was admired as a promising commercial variety.

Welch Bros. are receiving daily a bunch of nice Bon Silenes. This would have been, ten years ago, a matter of no consequence but is, nowadays, quite a notable event, even in Boston, where the prestige of the Bon Silene first began.

John Galvin had a severe fall two weeks ago and is just out once more but obliged to use a crutch.

THE WEEK'S ROUND OF DINNERS AND RECEPTIONS.—SEVERAL EXCELLENT DECORATIONS.—JOTTINGS AND PRICES.

The third Bachelors' cotillion, which closed the series for the season, was given at the National Rifles' Armory, February 20. The decorations by J. H. Small & Sons were very fine and in keeping with the two former cotillions. The draperies and flowers were pink.

The last public reception of the season at the White House was held February 21. The decorations were as fine as ever and somewhat similar to the former ones, with the exception that palm leaves were used in place of southern smilax. Rhapis flabelliformis made a fine effect on the ceiling in the shape of rosettes.

The Assembly Ball, February 26, at the Arlington Hotel, brought together a large and brilliant company. The floral decorations were by Small & Sons and were the cause of many flattering comments. The ball room was a perfect bower, the ceiling and walls being covered with southern smilax, flowers and ribbon. Fully a thousand tiny electric lights glowed like so many fireflies and the large electric lights were softened by great rosette effects of scarlet and white ribbon. The band gallery was festooned with garlands of green and orchids and below, on the spreading branches of a cork tree, hundreds of orchids seemed to be quite at home. In the reception parlors the same floral magnificence prevailed. Supper was served at small tables, each of which had a center piece of flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Westinghouse gave another of their fine dinners Saturday evening, February 24. Each room was decorated with different colored flowers, and orchids and American Beauty roses were used with a free hand.

A. Gude & Bro. are cutting some very fine Golden Gate roses with long, stiff stems.

Clark Bros.' new house of American Beauty is promising a good cut from now on and their Lilium Harrisii are looking fine, as is their Asparagus plumosus nanus.

J. Louis Loose is quite well again and busy as ever. Charles F. Hale is also well again.

Business is very good. There is plenty of bulbous stock and it is in good demand. Prices on roses are as follows: La France, $1 to $5; Chatenay, $1 to $4; American Beauty, $5 to $20; Golden Gate, $2 to $5; Bridesmaid, $1.50 to $5. Carnations go at from 50 cents to $2 per hundred.

CARNATION SHOW OF THE GARDENERS' CLUB.—MANY VERY FINE EXHIBITS.—THE PREMIUMS AND OTHER AWARDS.—LARGE CROWDS ATTEND.—MEETING OF THE SOCIETY.—A BANQUET NEXT MONTH.

The event of the week was the carnation show of the Gardeners' Club, on February 26. On entering, the first thing to strike the eye was a bank of beautifully grown cinerarias sent by E. Holden, gardener to Mrs. Robert Garrett, who also sent some very fine cyclamens. The bank of palms at the further end of the hall as well as the specimens scattered here and there were all from Halliday Bros. There were more roses shown than at any previous exhibitions, Jno. Cook's Baltimore, a strong-stemmed hybrid tea, with massive buds, white externally, shading to a shell pink inside, being conspicuous. Another vase which attracted much attention was the American Rose Co.'s exhibit of Ivory, an aptly named white sport from Golden Gate, like that variety in everything but color, though of stronger growth. This promises to be a valuable acquisition, being the largest white rose yet produced. R. H. Vincent exhibited a pink seedling carnation, No. 696, grown by Mr. Ward. C. M. Wagner showed five of his seedlings, Chaplain Goodwin, a very large soft pink; No. 2396, similar to Mrs. Bradt, with paler pink markings; No. 3496, very dark, on the order of Gomez; No. 5696, about one-half as much red in it as Bradt, otherwise the same; No. 4396, pleasing shade of deep pink, large. A division of opinion was caused by the exhibits of white seedlings by Jno. Cook and H. Weber & Sons. Weber & Sons' No. 110, is a very fine white on long, strong stems. Mr. Cook's seedling, self fertilized from Bradt, is as large and possibly a little fuller, both being really excellent flowers. Lehr Bros. showed White Cloud, Scott and Jubilee, finely grown, and F. C. Bauer had the only pot carnations and they were fine. He also showed Farquhar violets, and mignonette. H. F. Michell exhibited a jar of Mrs. Bertram Lippincott. Halliday Bros.' exhibit was good, and included Mack Richmond, Scott, Flora Hill, Mrs. Bradt, Jubilee, Gold Nugget, America, Gomez and White Cloud. Woodfall Bros. sent a number of fine seedlings, Red Cloud, like Jubilee, built up higher; a very pretty shell pink and others.

Following is a list of the awards: To Halliday Bros. for twenty-five white, with White Cloud; scarlet, with America. crimson, with Gomez; dark pink, with Scott; yellow, with Gold Nugget, and for best general display. To F. C. Bauer, for light pink, with Daybreak. To S. H. Moss, for variegated, with Mrs. Bradt.

Certificates of merit were given as follows: To John Cook for rose Baltimore, to Weber & Sons for Genevieve Lord and collection of seedlings, to Halliday Bros. for collection of palms, to E. Holden for cinerarias and cyclamens, to F. G. Burger for basket of American Beauties and freesias, the only design shown.

Honorable mention was given violets from F. C. Bauer and Lehr Bros., roses from I. H. Moss and P. C. Erdman, and seedling carnations from C. M. Wagner. Mr. Michell's vase of Mrs. Lippincott was highly commended and so were his plant stands.

Altogether the show was a great success, and the hall was hardly large enough to accommodate the number of ladies who viewed the display.

Much quiet work has already been done toward the coming of the carnation society next year, which we all regard as a high honor. At the evening session of the club little was done except to arrange for the annual banquet, which takes place at the next meeting. Wm. B. Sands and Jas. Pentland resigned their membership owing to the election of a gentleman of whom they do not approve.

BAD WEATHER INTERFERES WITH BUSINESS.—QUIET WILL PREVAIL UNTIL EASTER.—A VISIT AT PALMER'S.—MUCH GOOD STOCK.—VARIOUS NOTES.

The weather since last Saturday has been what might be called variably fierce. Saturday we had rain, snow, cold and high wind, ending on Monday evening with the thermometer at zero or thereabout. Constant firing was necessary in every greenhouse, but nothing serious has resulted so far. Trains were late and storemen suffered. The death of two prominent men last week gave all a great many orders. The last day before Lent had only a few receptions of no large size, and from now until Easter we will have nothing to do but make good window displays of flowers that should have been in earlier.

Jerry Brookins, of Orchard Park, R. C. Avery, of West Seneca, and W. Adams made a trip to Lancaster Tuesday to call on W. J. Palmer, but unfortunately Mr. Palmer had just gone to Buffalo. However, his always obliging superintendent, B. S. Meyers, took us through the place. His lilies, while good, show some disease, which all are suffering from around here. The daffodils and La Reine tulips are grand; the color on the latter was all that one could wish for. The two sports of Daybreak look well, and one house of No. 1 was certainly a sight. Pingree, Bradt and Jubilee are also good. Mr. Meyers seems very favorable to Flora Hill and White Daybreak, but did not say what would be their principal flower next season. Roses were looking fine, and their cut averages from 700 to 1,000 a day. It makes a retailer feel sad when he sees an unlimited supply like that to cut from, while he has to go to the wholesale house and divide with someone else if the stock is scarce.

Rebstock had the decorations last week at the Iroquois, for a Masonic banquet to the Grand Master of the state. Palms, tulips and daffodils were used, and looked very fine.

Miss Rowan, who has charge of Mr. Kasting's office, has suffered the loss of her father, whose death occurred on Monday. She has the sympathy of all the florists in Buffalo.

Cold weather Sunday and defective gas arrangements caused a loss to Reichert Bros. at their store on the market; $100 worth of palms, etc., were frozen.

Guenther, of Hamburg, and Fancourt, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., are sending fine Bridesmaids to Kasting.

BLIZZARD INTERFERES WITH TRADE.—CONSIGNMENTS LATE.—WHITE STOCK IN DEMAND.—FLORISTS PLAY EUCHRE.

The cut flower market has been very uncertain this week owing to the weather, a heavy storm, with rain, sleet and snow, having raged for two days and nights, and all incoming trains are from two to ten hours late. Consequently the wholesalers are not getting their supply regularly, and the retailers are "kicking." There has been quite a demand for funeral work, and anything white is eagerly sought after. White roses, white carnations, Harrisii lilies and callas are the most in demand. Prices hold their own on everything except violets, of which there is an over supply.

The Florists' Club euchre party came off on Friday night, February 23, and was well attended considering the bad weather, about 200 being present. Over 100 floral prizes were distributed and everybody enjoyed the entertainment.

AMERICAN FLORIST CO., CHICAGO.

IT is said that good young plants of Caroline Testout rose are difficult to secure.

PROSPECTIVE builders are beginning to feel anxious about the delivery of glass for use this season.

THE European bulb men are now here in force, and most of them report business as generally good.

REPORTS at hand indicate that the cold weather of last month has seriously injured the crops of southern truckers.

ONE tulip grower says that his blooms this year are excellent, but that at present prices they will hardly fetch sufficient to pay for the bulbs.

JOS. GELVEN & SON, of Sedalia, Mo., have sent us a carnation bloom of an odd shade of purple which we do not remember to have seen before in this flower. We have seen East Lothian stocks very similar in color.

WE learn that one section of the English carnation society will offer the coming season nearly $2,000 in money prizes besides four silver cups. We presume that this is partly or wholly made from admission fees. Is not this a pointer for the American Carnation Society? Witness the crowds present at the recent Buffalo exhibition.

Crimson Ramblers for Easter.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—What should now be the condition of plants of Crimson Rambler to bloom for Easter, also the most suitable temperature? T. W. H.

In answer to "T. W. H," so far as experience has cultivated my judgment in the growing of the Crimson Rambler rose especially for Easter blooming, I would say that the best condition of the plants at this time, about six weeks before Easter, would be to have them just showing their buds. One can then bring them into bloom in a night temperature of about 55°, with a rise of 10° during the day if there is sunshine, 5° in the absence of sunshine. This temperature will give large blooms of the best color. If the plants are not so far advanced at this time, one can get them into bloom by raising the temperature according to their tardiness, but it will be at the expense of size and color in the flowers and quality in the foliage. I am a firm believer in fine foliage. A flowering plant well furnished with good clean leaves is much the more beautiful and always makes a good market when placed at the disposal of intelligence.

Make Prices Profitable.

One of the most common and disastrous mistakes in the beginning of a floral business is in placing prices too low. Every florist should remember that the active selling season for plants lasts only two months in the spring and a little while in the fall. For the balance of the year it is but a thin, straggling line. True, the cut flower business is steadier, but that is not great in a small town. Therefore to pay twelve months' expenses, incurred for regular greenhouse repairs, coal, insurance, hail, damage by fire, frosted plants, accidents and delays to perishable stock in transit, experiments with novelties, etc., a percentage of profit must be added to the first cost of goods purchased, and to the actual cost of home raised stock, three times larger than the percentage of profit required by a dealer who is handling goods which continue in daily demand and which do not lose value while kept in stock awaiting the opportunity to make a sale. One should not be led into competition in prices below what is known to be safe; rather should he keep stock of a better grade and call the attention of buyers to its greater value, offering when necessary a few inferior plants at lowest possible value. Meet competition in prices every time by pushing forward high quality stock. When there is a surplus of stock, the fact should be thoroughly advertised; one city or neighborhood may be fully supplied with a given commodity when there is pressing need for it fifty or one hundred miles away. When something specially good has been produced, the fact should be made known to the trade of the entire country by advertising; there is always a market for good material.

Helpful Reminders.

Palms and other natives of warm countries, which do not naturally take the season of rest that our short winter days almost compel, have suffered more or less from the attacks of insects, mealy bug, scale, etc. If you will give them a careful cleaning now, the increased sunpower, with copious waterings, will enable your plants to regain vitality. A healthy plant is not troubled with these pests, so now is your most advantageous time for cleaning.

All plants which send their leaves up from the soil and do not branch above ground should have a top dressing now. If shifted, shake out the roots, cutting off the dead portion, of which there always is considerable. Put them back in the same pots with fresh soil and set a trifle deeper. The various varieties of cyperus, including the Egyptian papyrus, bamboos, asparagus and all ferns except the tree ferns are in this class.

One of the most valuable stand-bys for a florist doing a general business is a small bench of Clothilde Soupert roses. Started now they bloom freely all summer and early fall. The long stems, when fresh, are beautiful clusters for cut flowers and those that become full blown take the place of white carnations for designs.

Cannas should be started now, for, although they will be successful if started in flats and potted later on, it is less labor to make one job of it and pot them now; unlike dahlias, you can readily tell the good eyes from the bad.

Maurandya vine, one of the best for vases, boxes or trellises should be started from seed now. This vine out-shone the cobœa in some places last summer. It is so old fashioned that but few doing business to-day appreciate it.

Lobelias, Marguerite carnations for early summer show, tuberous rooted begonias, gloxinias, fancy caladiums and tuberoses should now be started. If you haven't a warm, moist house for them, a hotbed is preferable.

If you bring Spiræa Van Houtteii into bloom for Easter, it should be started now. C. B. W.

On With the Dance.

Saturday evening, February 24, the florists of St. Paul and Minneapolis gave an entertainment at the Grand Central hall, St. Paul. Dancing was the main attraction of the evening. Pete Hohn and Chas. Vogt sold carnations and violets which entitled the holder to refreshments in the rear room where Christ. Bussjager was entertaining with song and dance. About 250 were present. C. W. S.

Dancing in Oceanic.

The third annual ball of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society, at Oceanic, N. J., was one of the most successful social events of the season. There were over 100 couples in the grand march and some of the most prominent people of Oceanic and the neighboring towns were present. At twelve o'clock supper was served and before the regular order of dancing was resumed an Irish breakdown and also a cake walk were indulged in. The Gardeners' Ball, as it is called, is always a feature of the local season, but this year it surpassed previous successes. The credit is due to the committee of arrangements, which consisted of George Kuhn, Robert Murphy, Thomas McIntosh, Hugh Birch and Albert Brighton.

Philadelphia Farmers' Meeting.

The farmers' meeting held under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and the Florists' Club of Philadelphia last Saturday, February 24, while not attracting quite so large a crowd as last year, was, nevertheless, attended by a select and very attentive audience which listened with rapt attention to the various speakers and took a lively interest in the discussions which followed.

Edwin Lonsdale occupied the chair, and the address of welcome was delivered by W. Atlee Burpee. Mr. Burpee's remarks were very much to the point and full of good sense. Colonel Woodward's reply to Mr. Burpee was also particularly happy, and it is to be regretted that there was not a much larger audience to hear his rapid review of the vast improvements which have taken place in the farm and garden methods of Pennsylvania in the last ten years, which gratifying state of things is almost entirely traceable to the grand work being done by the institutes.

A. Blanc sent an interesting paper on "Some good plants for the home." Jason Sexton spoke on the subject of teaching agriculture in our public schools, and Professor Heiges on the formation of flowers and the influence of pollination and cross fertilization in the development of our improved varieties of fruits, flowers, grains and vegetables. This was one of the very best features of the meeting, and was interesting in many points even to some of the old stagers and especially so to those who had never given the matter much thought.

The evening session was made particularly interesting from the fact that botanic gardens were illustrated by splendid stereopticon views accompanied by an able and instructive lecture by Professor Macfarlane, of the University of Pennsylvania. He took the audience around the world with him from Kew Gardens to Glasgow, Edinburgh, Dublin, France, Germany, Italy, India, Ceylon, Australia, Brazil, the West Indies, St. Louis, New York, and wound up with our own botanic garden in Philadelphia. The Philadelphia garden is the development of only a few years but is already a very complete and useful institution, considering the short time it has been in existence.

J. Franklin Meehan's paper on "How to improve present methods of landscape gardening" was a very able exposition of that subject. W. H. Taplin read an excellent paper on the most desirable ferns for the home. G. C. WATSON.

OBITUARY.

E. S. CARMAN.

E. S. Carman, for many years editor of the Rural New Yorker, died of pneumonia at his home in New York February 28, aged 61 years. Mr. Carman was a thoroughly practical horticulturist and widely known as a careful and successful experimenter and hybridizer.

MRS. F. L. HARRIS.

Many of our readers will be pained to learn of the death, on Saturday, February 24, of Mrs. F. L. Harris, wife of the honored superintendent of the H. H. Hunnewell estate at Wellesley, Mass. Mrs. Harris has been in failing health for several years but has been apparently brighter for some time past and her death was not anticipated. The funeral took place at South Natick, on Tuesday, and the church was filled with sorrowing friends, including many of the gardeners and florists who had learned in the experience of many years to love the noble, devoted woman whose cheery hand was always extended in kindly welcome to the boys, and came with sad hearts to look for the last time on the sweet face and show, as best they could, the sympathy they felt with their honored fellow-gardener, in his loss and loneliness. One daughter and two sons are left to mourn the loss of a good mother.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

ALFRED UNGER, of Louis Boehmer & Co., Yokohama, left New York for Japan, February 24. He sails from San Francisco, March 7.

H. F. DARROW, formerly with L. L. May & Co., of St. Paul, is now advertising manager of the Family Circle, a Minneapolis publication.

VISITED CHICAGO: Frank Emerson, of Waterloo, Neb.; H. Cheesman, representing the Cox Seed Co., New York; W. C. Langbridge, representing Jerome B. Rice & Co., Cambridge, N. Y.

CHICAGO.—Jacobus Keur, of C. Keur & Sons, bulb growers of Hillegom, Holland, was a recent visitor and reports business very satisfactory. Mr. Keur is accompanied this year by J. Th. Scheepers, who is covering the southern states.

AN association of American advertisers has just been formed, to labor for the interests of the big advertisers, and on its rolls are W. Atlee Burpee & Co. and Wm. H. Maule, of Philadelphia, and Peter Henderson & Co., of New York. Mr. Burpee is a member of the committee on foreign trade and general advertising, Mr. Maule of the board of control and the committee on express and freight rates, and Charles Henderson of the committee on postal facilities.

Drougth in Southern California.

Southern California has had a very peculiar winter season. The rains came early and until early in January the weather was all that could be wished for by the growers. Now we are suffering for rain, none of any consequence having fallen since the first week in January. It is only mid winter with us, yet everyone who can get water is irrigating as though it were midsummer, and as water is "sold ahead" some must wait from two to three weeks before a supply can be obtained. Unless a good rain comes within two weeks all bulb and seed crops will be seriously affected, as many growers depend entirely upon the rains and have no facilities for irrigating.

D. R. W.

Will Carry Seeds Free.

Supt. Myers of the Southern Express Company issued a circular to its agents yesterday, the purpose of which is in effect at once, and continues until March 10. In it he says:

"With a desire to assist the growers of vegetables who have so recently lost their crops by the disastrous freeze, the president of this company, in concurrence with the railroads, very kindly instructs that we may carry vegetable seeds or plants (except potato) without charge for transportation. This does not include charges on similar matter originating in the territory of other express companies; except that this company will refund its proportion of earnings on such shipments."—Savannah News, February 24, 1900.

TORONTO, ONT.—The Gardeners' and Florists' Association and the Toronto Horticultural Society will hold a joint carnation and violet show March 8 at which displays of all the latest sorts are promised.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W. J PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

KANSAS CITY is planting 10,000 street trees this season.

ANDREW O'NEILL will plant 1400 trees on Broad street, Philadelphia, for $9,240.

IT is estimated that 300,000 grape roots will be set in the vineyards at Lawton, Mich., this spring.

HENRY KOHANKIE, for twenty-five years with Storrs & Harrison, and C. W. Metcalf, of Cleveland, O., have formed a partnership as the Euclid Avenue Nursery Co.

LUTHER BURBANK has just received a consignment of stock from South America, including a great many varieties of oranges from which he hopes to develop some valuable sorts.

IN opening the bids for nursery stock required by the different parks of Pittsburg, it was found that Thomas Meehan & Sons, of Philadelphia, were the lowest bidders. This firm was awarded the contracts for every section, amounting in all to nearly 10,000 hardy trees, shrubs, vines and evergreens.

HOLYOKE, MASS.—E. H. Howland has purchased the business of M. W. Griffith and will combine it with his own.

INDEPENDENCE, MO.—Alfred Broman built two houses 20x100 last year and will this spring make an equal addition for carnations. Last summer he erected a fifty-foot smoke stack and put in a new forty horse-power boiler.

We are now booking Import Orders for in all popular varieties, at $50.00 per 1000, f. o. b. Boskoop, Holland.

ROSE BUSHES.

FIELD-GROWN. OWN ROOTS. FIRST-CLASS PLANTS.

Many sorts being extra fine. Our Brides and Henriettes we might term "fancy" stock. Bride will run close to two feet, which is prime for that sort; Henriettes are heavy, running two to three feet Most Teas and H. T's will run close to two feet—some sorts larger, even, while a very few of the poorer growing sorts are not much over one foot. The Hybrids will of course average up heavier than tender varieties—all very fine. Leading varieties we can do in quantity, being especially heavy on such as Bride, Henriette, La France, Bon Silene, Brabrant, Soupert, Devoniensis, Safrano, Wootton, Carnot, White Rambler, etc. La France in grades from 7 to 9 cents; the 7 cent grade being about 12 to 15 inches high and woody. An average assortment of these plants will weigh in the neighborhood of 300 pounds to 1000 plants, packed light, not including weight of packing cases; while a selection of all heavy sorts will weigh more. This stock is freshly dug, grown in our virgin soil of Southern California, free from disease or insects and will give you and your trade satisfaction. We have sold thirty thousand Roses during the past sixty days, but have twenty-five thousand more which must be sold—hence extremely low prices appended. Prices will apply to not less than ten of a variety, properly packed, f. o. b. Los Angeles.

Bon Silene, Dinsmore, Duchess de Brabant, Duchess of Albany (rather light), Fr. Kruger, La France Lady Penzance, Lord Penzance, Marie Ducher, Mignonette, Mme. G. Bruant, Marie Lambert, Mme. Bravy, Parquerette, Rainbow, Souv. de Wootton, Waban, White Bath, White Rambler, Devoniensis. $7.00 per hundred.

Alfred Colomb, Clothilde Soupert, Coquette de Lyon, Earl of Dufferin, Empress of China, Dr. Grill, Fisher Holmes, Homer, La France, Baroness de Rothschild, Belle Siebrecht, Bride, Beauty of Glazenwood, Captain Christy, Crimson Rambler, Gen. Climbing Kaiserin, Maman Cochet, X X X. $25 00 per hundred.

Japanese Iris, $7 00 per 100. These are grown from plants of our own importation, and comprise the best varieties grown at Yokohama; they are field grown and handsomely rooted.

OWN ROOT PLANTS LEAD.

The only place in the United States where you can get good stock of own root, field-grown Roses in variety, including tender sorts. Shipments by freight must be prepaid here, and we require at least 25 per cent cash with orders; balance payable on arrival of stock. Less than 500 plants, cash with order. A few hundred plants can be shipped by express, packed light, so that, considering our low prices, plants will not come very high laid down at most any point.

NEW YORK won out on the series of games with Flatbush and Hudson county bowlers on the Flatbush alleys March 1.

At St. Louis.

The bowling club rolled five games on February 26; the following is the score:

Player	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	Av
Beneke	137	209	156	139	165	161

J. M. H.

At New York.

Practice goes on steadily at the bowling alleys. Last Monday Messrs. Burns and O'Mara were both absent, but such experts can make big scores anytime without practice. Monday's figures are appended:

Player	1st	2d	3d	4th
Hafner	158	126	100	140
Marshall	115	160	141	132

At Chicago.

The most enjoyable entertainment ever given by the Chicago Florists' Club was that of February 28, held at Kinsley's bowling alleys. Despite the worst snow storm experienced here for many years, the alleys were crowded with ladies and gentlemen. The presence of the ladies, it may be said, created such a favorable impression that it will be difficult in future to have a game without them. We are confident that with a little practice the ladies can beat the men to a standstill and it is sincerely hoped they will come again soon and many a time in the future. The principal events were games between the married and single ladies and the retail and wholesale florists. The married ladies and the wholesale florists were victorious. While the wholesale florists secured two of the three games, it is worthy of note that in the aggregate score they triumphed over the retailers only by twenty-one points. Several scratch games were rolled, but it is only in the leading features that the scores are here recorded, as follows:

MARRIED VERSUS SINGLE LADIES.

Mesdames	1st	2d	3d	Misses	1st	2d	3d

With Philadelphia Gunners.

The gun club had a good afternoon's sport last Tuesday. Quite a number of crack shots other than florists have recently joined the club and it keeps the boys hustling to hold their end up. Geo. Anderson, however, is always ready for a brush with the best of them and came out on top with the best score of the day. The score follows:

	Reversed angles.	Unknown angles.	Dbls.	Hdp.	Total.
Anderson	22	14	8	9	53

K.

At Philadelphia.

A match game with the second team of the Century wheelmen was played by the second team of the Florists' Bowling Club on the home alleys last Monday night. While the florists did not cover themselves with glory they won out by 259 pins, a comfortable margin, as the visitors did not at any time seem to feel at home. Our short run hinders visitors who are used to the regulation length. This could be remedied very easily but the little compartment that interferes has to remain and get in its interference ad libitum. The score follows:

Player	1st	2d	3d	Total
Kift	134	151	135	420
Westcott	105	130	158	403
Harris	135	142	143	420

WINTER WEATHER HAS SLIGHT EFFECT ON TRADE.—A GOOD SEASON ALL THE WAY THROUGH.—DAMAGE AT PHIPPS CONSERVATORIES.

A week of real winter weather has not stopped a good business all along the line. It has been a little tough for handling plants for decorations but trade goes right on without any very serious interference. If the grower's cut is not what he thinks he has a right to expect he has no kick as to the price for the stock he does bring in, at least on the staples, roses and carnations. The whole season through has been good, from Thanksgiving to Lent.

Phipps Conservatories, at Schenley Park, suffered quite a little in last week's storm. In the large show house the wind drove in large panes of glass, destroying as they fell several valuable palms and banana plants.

THE IDEAL PINK CARNATION Genevieve Lord

Fills the bill. The ladies declare it is just right in color. We claim it has the best stem of any Carnation. That it will rank very near the top in size. That its odor is very sweet. That it is the most profitable Carnation we ever grew. That it has an individuality all its own. Customers recognize it at a glance. There is not a great deal left that is wanting in this variety. If you want to make money, plant it. But don't delay, for stock for delivery prior to March 20 is all sold. It is an easy, rapid grower, however, and the April and May deliveries will make large, fine plants. Some of the finest plants we have are from cuttings from sand planted in the field June 1st. Remember all sold until March 20th. If you wait too long the chances are that we will be sold out of stock. Make yourself safe by ordering at once.

H. WEBER & SONS,
OAKLAND, MD.

Our catalogue is now ready; in it are listed the above as well as all the new "big ones" at introducers' prices, all the best standard sorts, and a complete list of chrysanthemums, novelties and standard sorts.

ETHEL CROCKER

Absolutely the BEST PINK CARNATION ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another). By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety). In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July. With 18 000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and the order filled by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished, prepaid, at $1.00 per dozen—amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date, every sample, excepting one, out of several hundred sent, has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES, good little plants, at 75 cts. per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

Notes of a Western Traveler.

Salt Lake City has many things of floricultural interest. Stock which is planted out of doors here grows very luxuriantly. But it takes irrigation. Where there is no water Utah is the picture of desolation; nothing grows but cacti, grease weed, prairie dogs and jack rabbits. Then the hand of man touches the water button and nature does the rest. Carnations, violets and bulbous stock do remarkably well here but there is something about the water which is prejudicial to roses. Stock of all kinds is scarce this winter and everything brings a good price. Big orders mean that the dealer must send to Denver or San Francisco for his material.

While the east has glass enough to supply any demand which is likely to arise in ten years, Salt Lake City needs more greenhouses and is going to have them. R. E. Evans is planning to rebuild and extend his glass. C. Cramer will put up a carnation house or two. Schwarz & Heinecke will build two houses 20x120 and Mrs. E. Laker will enlarge her place.

The latest new comer from the east is J. M. Lonsdale, brother of Edwin Lonsdale, of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, who has a very neat store at 121 South Main street and reports a good trade.

Business continues good in all lines, flowers of all sorts being rather scarce. There has been little change in prices and probably there will be none for some time unless business should change for the worse, which no one seems to anticipate. Almost every one who grows Harrisii lilies joins in complaints concerning the behavior of the Bermuda stock. In spite of big talk about selected stock and exterminating disease, the bulbs seem to be worse this year than ever before. There is not only much disease, but there is a large per centage of the stock that seems to be without vitality. Only a comparative few show anything like the vigor that the Harrisii ought to have. With the price of Bermuda bulbs where it is and the load of diseased and worthless stock to carry, into the bargain, there is no money in forcing Harrisii nowadays. There has been some complaint also regarding azaleas, which seem to be rather lightly budded with many growers this year. Good plants, however, have sold pretty fairly.

COLD WEATHER AND SHORT CROPS IN TENNESSEE.—GOOD GOLDEN GATE ROSES.—VARIOUS NOTES.

Continued cold weather has had its effect and flowers are not abundant; especially does this apply to the rose. American Beauty, which has been decidedly off, is just beginning to come in again. One grower is showing an especially fine cut of Brides and has had great success with Golden Gate. It has fine size and has met with much favor. Carnations have been holding their own. The very reasonable price at which they are sold insures a demand. The stock grown here is of the best and all the latest sorts are shown. Violets are abundant and in great demand.

Currey & Co. have had an unusually fine lot of azaleas, which have met with ready sale. Cinerarias, cyclamens and hyacinths also make the windows beautiful.

Lent does not make a great deal of difference in the trade as the season is not largely observed in this city.

T. C. Joy has just returned from a northern and eastern trip. He took in the carnation convention at Buffalo.

Desirable Ferns for the Home.

[Read by W. H. Taplin, Holmesburg, Pa., before the Farmers' Institute, Philadelphia, February 24, 1900.]

There is a certain expression that has frequently been used in the agricultural press of late years and also in addresses that have been made by institute speakers and others, a term that expresses much in few words. I refer to the term "intensive farming." Now, while I cannot lay claim to being an intensive farmer, yet I am a believer in that doctrine, and am inclined to think that window gardening, or the household culture of plants, might be referred to as intensive gardening, not only from the fact that a number of operations and a variety of subjects are handled in a very limited space, but also that the plants themselves are compelled to exert all their vitality and recuperative powers in order to produce a satisfactory growth under such adverse conditions. But the true plant lover usually finds a way of coaxing his or her favorites into growth, and, after all, there is a great deal more satisfaction felt by the cultivator when his efforts are finally crowned with success in the case of some refractory subject than is found in caring for a houseleek or a pot of German ivy.

And even in the culture of ferns as house plants we learn of some singular methods at times, among these being that peculiar treatment that has recently been reported, in which a maidenhair fern in the window garden of a certain lady was said to be dosed with castor oil at intervals, or whenever its general health was impaired. This seems to us to be a rather drastic treatment for so tender a subject, and we do not recommend it, and we feel safer in advising the use of such a method only as a last resort, and having much more confidence in pure water as a promoter of growth than any oily substance whatever. There are, however, a few cultural points that may be briefly noted in the consideration of our subject, most of which are doubtless familiar to those present, but are also often forgotten by the would-be cultivator of ferns in the dwelling.

In the first place an erroneous idea often prevails that ferns are essentially hot-house plants, and therefore should be kept in a very warm room, forgetting the fact that a vast multitude of ferns grow naturally in sheltered valleys up among the mountains, and that some of the handsomest tree ferns of Tasmania sometimes have their lovely fronds weighted down with a covering of snow. And, as a matter of fact, the various species of ferns that we florists suggest for house culture are usually those that thrive in a night temperature of 55° to 60°, or in what would seem to many to be a rather chilly temperature for a living room. Therefore a position near a window where the ferns will have plenty of light, though not necessarily full sunshine and where they may enjoy a certain amount of fresh air is much more rational treatment than to place them in line with an open register or in any position where they may be exposed to strong draughts.

I have already referred to pure water as a promoter of growth among the ferns and its proper use is one of the tests of the cultivator, whether he be an amateur or a professional, for in common with all the blessings we enjoy this one may be abused. A well rooted fern carrying a number of strong fronds, such for example as the Boston fern, may require a good watering every day if kept in a warm room, but do not allow any surplus water to remain in the saucer or jardiniere in which it may stand, while a less vigorous specimen may only require water twice in a week, but it may be taken as a safe rule that no fern in the window garden should ever be allowed to become very dry, for the fronds will soon show the effect of such neglect.

And this reminds us of the value of the jardiniere in the window garden, a plant in one of these convenient receptacles being protected to some extent from the very rapid evaporation that takes place through the porous earthenware pot when the latter is fully exposed to the air, and in the case of ferns in particular, this excessive evaporation is liable to injure the roots. These particulars of treatment in reference to watering are doubtless quite familiar to many of those present, and may seem like needless reiteration, but the fact remains that there is no other operation in plant-growing that requires the exercise of more judgment and care than that of watering, a fact that is generally recognized among florists. It may also be remarked that there is usually no necessity for the repotting of ferns that are doing duty in the window garden during the winter, and it is wiser to defer this matter until spring or early summer, when the plants should be rooting more freely and in a more active condition generally.

Now a word or two as to some of the kinds of ferns that are adapted for our purpose, and first on the list comes the well-known Boston fern, decidedly the most popular and most useful of the sword fern family, its graceful fronds forming a mass of greenery that is not only charming in color and outline but also very enduring under the trying conditions found in the average dwelling. As is well known, there is more or less dust continually floating about in the atmosphere of our houses, and this dust is detrimental to plants, closing up the pores of the leaves; we therefore find it a good practice to give our Boston fern a bath occasionally by rinsing the foliage in a tub of water.

But the true Boston fern is not the only valuable member of its family, and for those whose space is more limited we recommend another sword fern, which may be called the compact sword fern, or dwarf Boston fern if you will. This fern has shorter and more upright fronds of a darker green than its prominent relative, and forms a very attractive specimen in quite a small pot.

Still another sword fern that is well adapted for the decoration of the dwelling is the handsome crested variety, a strong growing and admirable plant for this purpose, but a plant with a most unwieldy name for the amateur fern grower, that is, Nephrolepis davallioides plumosa.

All of these sword ferns are propagated by division, their habit being to throw out runners or stolons, as the botanist terms them, that are very much like the runners of the strawberry. But I fear some may be wearied by too much sword fern, and as the brief time alloted to this subject will only allow of a mere glance at the species to which your attention is invited we must hurry on to note one or two species from a much larger group, namely, the pteris. One of the hardiest of this family is a fern of moderate growth that is much used for table ferneries. For a simple name we may call this the maidenhair pteris or P. adiantoides, its dark green fronds having a very pleasing effect, and when the plant is well supplied with water these leaves endure the dry atmosphere of the house very well indeed. The silvery pteris, P. argyræa, is one of the comparatively few variegated ferns that are suitable for household culture, and is quite a strong growing variety, the leaves of which are ornamented by a broad band of silvery gray down the center. The leaves of this fern are rather brittle and are liable to suffer from the dust but, as recommended for the Boston fern, a bath in clear water occasionally will be of much benefit.

Another variegated fern for the window garden is found in P. cretica albo-lineata, this being one of the easiest ferns to grow, and where suitable conditions may be had is readily raised from spores. The different forms of the ribbon fern, P. serrulata, are also readily grown in the house, and are very pretty indeed, there being many variations of this fern in cultivation, several of which have beautifully crested leaves. Cyrtomium falcatum, sometimes called the holly fern, is a very satisfactory house plant, and especially so when grown in a room that is not kept very warm, a night temperature of 55° being quite high enough for its welfare. The leaves of this fern are very bright and glossy and it is in such strong contrast to the plants already noted in habit and general appearance as to be a most welcome addition to the window garden.

I have not especially referred to the true maidenhair ferns, or adiantums, for household decoration, favorites though these are with every plant lover, from the fact that they are not generally satisfactory for this purpose, the leaves of the maidenhairs being of such delicate texture as to be unable to stand the heat and dry air of the house. The shield ferns, botanically known as aspidiums, include several species and varieties suited to house culture, and one of these species, A. angulare, I have known as a house plant for fully ten years, or rather I have noted the same specimen of this fern flourishing in a window garden for that period of time, this appearing to be ample proof of its enduring character.

One comparative novelty is found in the Japanese fern balls that are now imported in considerable numbers by the large dealers, these being formed of a small mass of vegetable fiber or even of a section of tree fern stem, around which are coiled the creeping stems of some of the hare's-foot ferns or davallias. These are imported in a dormant condition, then started into growth in a warm greenhouse and in a short time are more or less covered with bright green, feathery leaves. If carefully attended to these fern balls become quite attractive ornaments for the window, but it must be remembered that they will dry out rapidly under such conditions and will therefore need frequent waterings.

But the subject of ferns is such a large one and the study of them so fascinating that one is liable to forget the passage of time, and with this in view I must now thank you for your kind attention and bring these rambling notes to a close.

President of the American Rose Society.

Benjamin Dorrance.

The president of the American Rose Society, Benjamin Dorrance, of Dorranceton, Pa., is well known to the trade as a highly successful grower of roses. Mr. Dorrance was born on a farm, August 14, 1846. He is a graduate of Princeton, at which institution the degrees A.B. and A.M. were conferred upon him. Like many others now prominent in the trade, his first venture in the way of a greenhouse was built for amusement, in 1882. At this time his glass area was about 1,000 feet Gradually, however, he drifted toward the commercial side of floriculture, erecting his first rose house in 1884. That he has made rapid strides in the business may be judged from the fact that he now has 184,000 feet of glass devoted to it. But it has not been all sunshine with him. Many difficulties have had to be overcome. His work has been confined chiefly to rose growing, with an occasional attempt to do carnations in the best style. Mr. Dorrance asserts that the longer he is at the business the less he seems to know about it. He has almost made up his mind that the main secret of success is constant watchfulness, while he believes that a good memory for failures is a great help.

CARNATIONS.

CARNATION THE MARQUIS.

This carnation is generally regarded as one of the very best of the new varieties now on the market. It attracted a large share of attention at the Buffalo meeting of the American Carnation Society last month and was there awarded the leading prize for light pink sorts. The Marquis originated with L. E. Marquisee, of Syracuse, N. Y., four years ago, being a cross of Daybreak and Albertini. From the first the plant showed remarkable strength and vigor, although perhaps its most meritorious characteristic is the soft, pure pink color of the flowers. It has been awarded eight certificates, besides a silver cup and medal. Mr. Marquisee reports that 150,000 rooted cuttings have already been sold—ample proof of its good qualities.

SEEDLING CARNATIONS.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—After crossing carnations this season, please state when the seeds should be sown. How should the seedlings be taken care of until they bloom? Should they be flowered in the field or in the greenhouse?

SUBSCRIBER.

The seeds should be sown just as soon as they are ripe and placed in a temperature of 75° or 80° night and day until they come up, which will only take a few days. Then they must be removed to a cooler and as light a place as possible. As soon as the little plants are large enough to handle, transplant them into flats or small pots, the same as you would rooted cuttings, and only pinch the top back once. Plant in the field as early as possible and keep them well worked, as the idea is to bloom them as early as you can, thereby enabling you to discard any that may prove worthless before housing. JAMES HARTSHORNE.

CARNATIONS AS ANNUALS.

The remarkable progress being made in the business of hybridizing and raising seedling carnations, whereby strains of seed of fixed excellence are being gradually evolved, and the recognized superiority of many varieties during their first year, suggest the possibility that the time may be not far off when carnation growers may find it advisable to depend mainly upon seedling plants for their cut flower product.

Under the present system of propagating, and after several years' test, disseminating special varieties, many a regal beauty has gone into oblivion and its expectant grower been doomed to keen disappointment because of fatal defects of which no trace had developed until the variety was in its second, third or even fourth year. Just as soon as specialists can secure for themselves or place on the market for sale a sufficient quantity of seed of a strain that can be depended upon to give a large proportion of high grade flowers we shall begin to realize the possibilities in the line of seedling growing for regular cut flower supply and many of the problems that disturb the carnation grower of to-day will then disturb no more.

Carnations of varied colors associate well together, better in fact than most flowers covering an equally wide range of color, and enough has already been learned by those who have tried it in a small way to indicate that the public will take kindly to carnations placed before them in assorted tints. There ought to be as good money in high-grade seed as there is in rooted cuttings.

THE CARE OF YOUNG PLANTS.

The treatment of young plants comes next in importance to the selection of cuttings and here, too, there is a difference of opinion, some growers planting them into flats while others pot them up. Each method has its disadvantages but I prefer to pot my stock. Pot culture facilitates planting out, as the roots are not disturbed in any way and the planting can be done in almost any sort of weather. Then the roots, having conformed somewhat to the ball in the pot, are apt to make a compact mass of fibrous, active feeders for the plant during its outdoor life and most of them come with the plant when it is dug for planting into the house. The loss of the room taken up by the pots is to some extent overcome by the fact that young plants in pots have an abundance of air aud light and there is little danger of the soil becoming sour, as is sometimes the case when planted into flats.

Here, as in every other case, my advice to those growers who are having success with the methods they employ is "to let well enough alone." Because I pot up my stock is no reason why anyone who is growing his plants in flats and having fair success should change to pots. Experiments are always in order and, if properly conducted and accurate comparisons made, are often worth a hundred times their cost, but they more often result in loss. Still it is by experiment that we progress.

Many growers pot their young plants in very rich soil. If such growers will try potting a portion of their young plants into soil not any richer than the soil in the field, and carefully note the difference when the plants are lifted in the fall, they may learn a few things to their advantage. The theory of this is that a plant grown in poor soil will more readily adapt itself to the soil in the field and move right along without check.

Cuttings when first planted should be shaded for a few days, and if they are from another grower and have been on their journey several days shading will be necessary for a week. I have received well rooted, fine looking cuttings that would not stand full exposure to the sun without wilting until ten days after they were potted up. They were evidently grown in a north side propagating house and left in the cutting bench longer than should be. In these days of a general interchange of cuttings they should always be carefully watched and never allowed to wilt, as this is a decided check to their growth just when it will be most felt.

THE MARQUIS CARNATION.

Carnations are water-loving plants and the young plants should be given plenty of water, at the same time being careful not to sour the soil. As planting out time draws near you can gradually inure them to a drier soil so that they can stand a short drought outdoors without too serious a check. This must be done very carefully or it had better be let alone. Light and air are quite as essential to the young as to older stock and do not for any reason allow them to be put on a side bench, where they get half a day's sunshine or often less. It takes two of my houses to hold my young stock for next season and I always select the two houses giving the least returns and, as fast as room is needed, out go the old plants and the young ones have all the advantages of light and ventilation that the blooming stock enjoyed. This is, of course, a decided loss on cut blooms but I find it a good investment. When first potted the night temperature should be about 50° and a little higher during the day, but as the plants become established they will stand an abundance of ventilation and by the time they are ready to plant out they should be accustomed to a night temperature about as low as they will meet with in the field.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

VARIETIES FOR SPECIMEN PLANTS.

Looking over exhibition reports, one cannot help noticing how limited is the number of chrysanthemums suitable for specimen plants, and how frequently the same varieties are shown. Again, we are surprised to find how well some varieties we have failed with do with others, and occasionally old-timers turn up which we had almost forgotten; Puritan is one of these. Selection has been all for specimen blooms. The grower of plants must experiment with these, but seldom finds any suitable for his purpose. There is a limitation of color among varieties suitable for plants. Choosing colors from the exhibition table generally means failure. We are quite well satisfied if we can get a fair representation of pink, yellow, white and red. Pale yellow and light pink varieties produce a monotonous effect, when prevailing in a number of exhibits. The grower who succeeds in showing an extra proportion of brighter and unusual colors, is always sure of the decision for effect.

A variety hard to grow and of unusual color, a bronze-pink, I might say, is Lady Hanham, a sport from Viviand-Morel. A neighbor of mine had an excellent plant of this at the Boston show which helped his exhibit exceedingly. How effective is Iora, a glistening shell pink with gracefully whorled florets, when seen under good light, and especially when sunlight plays among the florets, but dead and ineffective as seen at exhibitions. Arethusa, a local variety raised by myself and never recorded because of no value for cut flowers, was one of the most striking among deep pink varieties last fall. Deep yellows, almost bronzy, like President Nonin, have a far better effect on exhibition than light yellows like Georgienne Bramhall. Col. Smith was remarkable in this respect, though of late years it has done indifferently. Harry May was another effective variety in its day.

Dark shades of maroon tones may be too dark, and Shilowa and Black Hawk both proved this last autumn. Whites cannot be too pure, and this is why Jos. H. White, Ivory and Mutual Friend have always stood well. Uncertain whites like Gladys Vanderbilt and Onyx, beautiful though they be individually, spoil rather than help. Mrs. F. A. Constable showed up grandly at Boston last autumn, attracting much attention in Mrs. B. P. Cheney's group. Red Warrior is another indispensable variety. It is one of those odd colors so badly needed. Grown as a specimen bloom it is a fair chestnut red, and opens as such on a specimen plant. Soon, however, its color changes to deep yellow at the center, showing the two contrasting colors as "Pitcher & Manda" did in white and yellow. Garza, a white anemone, makes a grand specimen but it should stand alone. It is out of place in a group of Japanese sorts.

Among novelties and recent introductions I have little to offer for trial, and I would advise what I find difficult to do myself, and that is, to stick to what we know is good. I think Mdlle. Lucie Faure ought to make a good specimen white. Autumn Glory made a good plant last year and Kate Broomhead is promising. T. D. HATFIELD.

CHRYSANTHEMUM EULALIE.

Our illustration shows a new anemone-flowered chrysanthemum named Eulalie, which has attracted much attention. Good new sorts of this type are quite rare nowadays, although as a class they are very beautiful and highly esteemed by many growers, and it is therefore pleasing to know that they are not yet wholly neglected by our hybridizers. Eulalie is described as a bold, handsome flower with clear white ray florets, the disk or crown florets being tinged with a pleasing shade of yellow until fully developed, when they become pure white. This variety has excellent stem and foliage and is a good shipper. Awarded certificates by the New York and Philadelphia committees of the American Chrysanthemum Society.

STOCKS AND SIONS FOR GRAFTING.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Kindly inform me of the names of the best chrysanthemums to use as stocks for grafting, also the best to employ for sions. E. E.

Answering the inquiry of "E. E.", I would state that I have found Henry Hurrell and The Bard the best varieties to use as stocks. I have used a great many sorts for sions, but in selecting these care should be taken to favor the varieties that bloom at the same time, that is, the sorts selected for any one particular stock. The following are good as sions and bloom about the same time—November 1 to 15: Beauty of Truro, Enfant des Deux Mondes, Geo. W. Childs, Henry Hurrell, Ivory, John K. Shaw, Leocadie Gentils, Louis Boehmer, Mrs. Trainor L. Park, Mrs. Wm. H. Rand, Mrs. O. P. Bassett, Mrs. H. Robinson, Mrs. C. B. Freeman, Miss Agnes L. Dalskov, May Forster, Oakland, Pennsylvania, Robert G. Carey, The Bard and Viviand-Morel. J. S. W.

ANENT MR. HILL'S COMPLAINTS.

E. G. Hill, president of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, in a recent issue complains of the lack of interest taken in the society. It seems to me that these conditions attest the good sense and sound judgment of the florists at large. No one can say that the chrysanthemum is being neglected. The novelty has worn off but there is genuine appreciation of well grown flowers and growers are still trying to improve. The society has done work that should be done by the commercial interests and it shows good judgment of outside influences in having that interest do the work. If the commercial men do not prevent inferior varieties being sold for good ones, their own interests will suffer. The S. A. F. can do it for the protection of its constituents but we do not care to join a separate society for the purpose of carrying a few specialists on our shoulders. A large flower show is a good idea, but admitting that all flowers are necessary to make it a success, why should chrysanthemum growers make use of the flower to build up an organization when the organization is not needed to build up the flower? A one flower society is not democratic for successful floriculture. Mr. Hill's statement of facts shows that conclusively.

C. B. WHITNALL.

CINCINNATI, OHIO.—W. A. McFadden, of Rosebank, is now offering for sale a large surplus stock of orchids, also Acalypha Sanderii and Dracæna terminalis. The orchids include cattleyas, dendrobiums, oncidiums and cypripediums.

As They Build in Tennessee.

The accompanying illustration shows the range of greenhouses of Joy & Son, of Nashville, Tenn., one of the most progressive firms of that section. The houses in the foreground are the new structures added last season, when the glass area was increased 16,000 square feet, from 44,000 to 60,000 feet. One of the new structures is used for asparagus and smilax. It is 45x100 and is twenty feet high at the ridge. Another is a carnation house 50x100. Both are giving excellent satisfaction but Mr. Joy states that he would not recommend such a wide house for carnations except where there is a good natural slope, the slope in his case being eight feet. Joy & Son heat one section of their establishment with hot water and two sections with steam, and find that the two methods give equal satisfaction.

ROSES.

PAINTING ROSE HOUSES.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Will it injure roses to paint the inside of the house at this time if we use only a little benzine?

SUBSCRIBER.

Painting the inside of the house now would not materially hurt the plants if a circulation of air could be kept up day and night, which with the prospect of snow-storms, hard winds, etc., at night is rather a difficult matter to ensure at this season of the year. Unless a circulation can be maintained throughout the time the house is being painted and for four or five days after, or until the strong smell of paint has disappeared, one will run a great risk of having the plants badly damaged. If there is no special reason for painting at this particular time it would be much safer and the paint would stand much better if deferred till spring or early summer.

JOHN N. MAY.

PROPAGATION AND OTHER ROSE QUERIES.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Your discussion of the following subjects would be highly appreciated by one who looks upon your journal as a guide:

1. My American Beauties are bearing only a few small, ill-formed flowers and the plants have too few canes. They have been exceedingly healthy until now, when the lower leaves are turning yellow; the tops are still all right. They were planted in June in a rather heavy compost one-fifth cow manure. Since then they have had three light mulchings of manure, with applications of liquid manure at irregular intervals and a dressing of bone meal in November. The house has been run at a temperature of 58° to 60° at night and 65° to 70° during the day. The plants have been kept rather wet except at times when we have let them get well to the dry side and they have been very free from black spot until now. We syringe once a week. Can you tell me the cause of their not having more and better flowers?

2. For the past two years we have been badly troubled by eel worms. How can I proceed to be free from this pest next year? The soil we expect to use was composted in November and heaped up. It consists of two parts of soil, one part of clay, one part of cow manure and one-sixtieth bone meal. Would air slaked lime help if added when the house is filled? If so, how much should I use?

3. Is it advisable to run Kaiserins two years? My stock was planted a year ago and the plants are now in fine condition. Would you advise me to keep them or replace them with young stock? I am thinking of running them until July and then using the house for Meteors for winter blooming. In following this plan should the Kaiserins be rested and re-started in time to get full benefit of the June market? If so, how long previous to June should they be re-started?

4. I am having poor success with my young plants and should welcome some advice upon the propagation of rose cuttings and their after management. H.

1. I should think from the description of the treatment that the Beauties are suffering from two causes, over feeding and eel worm at the roots. With the original compost made so rich it would have been ample to carry the plants till January 1 with only one light mulching. Liquid manure given early in the season, before the roots have thoroughly filled all the soil, is an evil; added to this the extra heavy mulching of manure and a dressing of bone meal, and the plants certainly have had a very liberal diet. With all this fertilizer and kept on the wet side in a heavy soil, there is little wonder they rebel. As there are eel worms at the other roses, there are undoubtedly plenty of them in the Beauties also, playing their part in producing the present condition.

2. The best method of destroying eel worms in compost is to sterilize it with steam. This is a rather expensive operation for the first time, as special arrangements must be made for it, and the whole of the compost must be raised to a temperature of at least 212°. The next best thing is to mix a liberal proportion of air slaked lime all through the soil and after the roses are planted the whole of the soil in the benches or beds in the greenhouse should be well soaked with clear lime water every two weeks for the first four or five months after planting. To make a suitable lime solution take about a peck of fresh lime to fifty gallons of water; slake it as if for making mortar, add the proportion of water as soon as the lime is dissolved, thoroughly stirring it, then allow it to stand for twenty-four hours to become clear. If carefully applied as directed this will destroy large numbers of the pest and help the plants generally.

3. It is advisable to run Kaiserin Augusta Victoria two years if one finds them profitable to grow, more especially as this variety is much better during the summer months than in winter. Plants started a year ago need not be rested this season to run through the summer, but should be liberally fed, as in spring and summer they need this to keep up a steady, vigorous growth. Then they could be rested late next fall or early in winter and started up again for spring and summer blooming. After they have been gradually dried off for three weeks, say in December, fire heat could be discontinued altogether for the balance of the time it may be desired to rest them, which would be a considerable saving in expense, but this, of course, only applies if the blooms are desired for spring, summer and fall use. After a full rest they will require six to eight weeks to produce a good crop in spring.

4. To secure good plants it is absolutely necessary to have healthy cuttings to start with. Having these at command, select a front bench in a rose house, if you have no regular propagating house, clean out all the old soil, thoroughly wash the boards, and then place some bricks or old bats evenly over the bottom of the bench, filling any odd corners with a little clean, dry moss. On this place about three inches of clean, sand, screening it thoroughly to take out all the coarse particles Press the sand quite firmly; a block of wood or a whole brick is a good implement to beat it with. After this is done give the bed a good wetting with clear water at about the same degree as the normal temperature of the house. This done your bench is ready for the cuttings.

Cuttings should be made of two or three eyes. Make a clean cut diagonally, just below the bottom eye; cut the bottom leaf off clean, close to the eye; leave two good leaves on next eye and the same on the top. Where three-eyed cuttings are used cut the top off just above the last eye. Take a flat lath about two inches wide and long enough to reach across the bench; place this straight across and with an old table knife, putty blade, or any similar thing, cut a line close to the lath and one and one-half to two inches deep. Insert your cuttings one to one and one-half inches deep in the sand and in the line made by the knife. When the row is full press the loose sand, which the knife blade will have raised, quite firmly with the fingers. Water through a fine rose pot sufficiently to settle the sand evenly around each cutting, then lay your lath as near to this row as you can without disturbing the cuttings just put in; cut another line across as before and insert your next row in the same way.

If the sun is bright the cuttings should be shaded with sheets of newspaper or similar material placed an inch or two above the foliage. This not only keeps the sun off but also the strong current of air circulating through the house, which is very necessary to ensure success. Should the weather be very cold and a strong fire heat maintained in the house, the cuttings should be syringed very lightly overhead for the first twelve or fifteen days. Of course the sand should never be allowed to become dry during the time the cuttings are rooting. The shading should be removed as soon as the sun is off the bench and the ventilators are closed.

Under ordinary circumstances these cuttings should be nicely rooted in about four weeks and as soon as they have made roots one-half to three-fourths of an inch long they should be lifted out of the sand, being careful not to break any of the roots, and potted at once into clean 2-inch pots, using a nice fresh soil with but very little manure in it. Press this soil fairly firm and place them back in a similar position in the greenhouse. Shade from hot sun, just as the cuttings were shaded, till they show indications of starting to grow. As soon as potted, water with tepid water through a fine rose, but be very careful not to overwater them at this time. As soon as they start new growth, which will usually be in ten or twelve days, the shading should be discontinued and in four or six weeks they will, if carefully handled, be ready for a shift into 3-inch pots. Press the soil quite firm but do not bury the stem any deeper than in the first potting. Use the same grade of soil as for the original potting but the plants will not need any shading this time. Give them frequent heavy syringings, to keep down red spider, etc., and light fumigating frequently, to keep green fly from getting on them, and plenty of air at all times after they are once established in their first pot; this is very essential to their future health. Weeds, dead leaves, etc., should be removed immediately they appear. As soon as the plants have filled these last pots fairly well with roots and before they begin to turn brown from being pot-bound, they should be shifted into pots another size larger, and by the time these are filled it will be time to put the plants into their permanent quarters, where they are to bloom the coming season. JOHN N. MAY.

THE AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The annual general meeting of the American Rose Society will be held in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-third street, New York city, on March 28, 1900, the chair to be taken at 2 o'clock p. m., for the following business:

To elect officers to serve during the year 1901.

To elect two members of the executive committee to serve for a term of three years, N. Butterbach and H. A. Siebrecht retiring in accordance with the terms of their election.

To act upon an invitation from the Society of American Florists to send delegates to discuss the rose at its convention to be held in New York city, August 1900.

To receive and discuss a resolution creating a board of trustees, in whom shall be vested the permanent funds of the society.

To receive and discuss a resolution to amend the constitution, Article 4, Section 1, referring to the honorary vice-presidents, substituting "a board of" in place of "four."

To consider meeting place for next year; and to transact such other business as may come before the meeting.

Proxies of members in good standing, duly filled in, may be sent to the secretary at 136 Liberty street, New York city, up to Tuesday, March 27, and at the Fifth Avenue Hotel on the day of the meeting.

Prof. Byron D. Halsted will lecture on "Some Diseases of the Rose."

The completed schedule for the exhibition has been issued and copies may be obtained by addressing Leonard Barron, secretary, 136 Liberty street, N. Y. The schedule carries a grand total of cash prizes amounting to $964.50 besides special prizes of an aggregate value exceeding the cash premiums.

The sections and premiums are as follows:

Section A., open to all, teas and hybrid teas, thirty-one classes, $125 in first premiums, $65 in second.

Section B, limited to establishments having not more than 20,000 feet of glass devoted to the rose, teas and hybrid teas, thirty-one classes, $66 for first and $32 for second prizes.

Section C., open to gardeners and amateurs only, teas and hybrid teas, thirty-two classes, $69 in firsts, $33 in seconds.

Section D., open to all, hybrid perpetuals, nineteen classes, $81 in firsts, $54 in seconds.

Section E., open to gardeners and amateurs only, hybrid perpetuals, twenty-one classes, $66 in firsts, $38 in seconds.

Section F., open to gardeners and amateurs only, plants in not larger than 8-inch pots, thirteen classes, $101 in firsts, $63 in seconds.

Section G., open to all, climbing roses in pots, three classes, $32 in firsts, $18 in seconds.

Section H., open to gardeners and amateurs only, standard roses, three classes, $27.50 in firsts, $15 in seconds.

Section J., open to all, novelties, three classes, $12 in firsts, $7 in seconds.

Special premiums are offered in twenty-four classes and include thirteen silver cups, three medals and other valuable trophies and coin.

Lilium Masseyi.

In our issue of February 17, page 846, some mention was made of this new species, which was discovered in North Carolina and named in honor of Prof. W. F. Massey, of Raleigh, N. C. Thanks to the courtesy of Prof. Massey, we are now enabled to present an illustration of the flowers, prepared from a photograph of herbarium specimens. The plant is technically described by Prof. C. W. Hyams, of the North Carolina Experiment Station, as follows:

"Bulb 12mm in diameter or less, composed of fleshy scales; stem 1.5 to 3dm high, with two distant scales below; leaves linear, acute at both ends or the lower obtuse, 12 to 25mm long, 2 to 4mm wide, in whorls of 3 to 8, the central ones generally alternate, glaucous, the margins revolute, prominently three-veined; flowers 1 to 3, erect, 2.5 to 5cm high; perianth reddish-orange, its segments spatulate, obtuse, slightly pubescent, the blade 6 to 12 mm wide, gradually narrawed into the claw, purple spotted below; capsule obovoid, 12 to 25mm high."

The Double Snowdrop Anemone.

The writer does not know the origin of this new hardy herbaceous perennial, botanically known as Anemone Sylvestris fl. pl. It seemed to crop up at several places about the same time, as some of the sports of the chrysanthemum have done. Perhaps some one can give information as to the locality of its origin and whether it is a sport or a seedling. As this novelty is receiving considerable attention in England and other European countries and is being pushed by some firms as a leading novelty, our experience with it may be of interest to the florists of America.

LILIUM MASSEYI.
(From Herbarium Specimens.)

We have not as yet been able to test its flowering capabilities but as compared with the same sized plants of the type, this double variety was quite as free, although the plants were imported, divided and potted, about December 15, only two months previous to the time of flowering. The individual flower lasted well, was very double, and white, with the exception of a slight tint of green at the center. The stem was stout enough to support the flower well above the foliage. We had these small plants, in 2½-inch pots, in a night temperature of about 45°. Toward fall these plants began to flower again outdoors, but the very severe early frosts destroyed the blooms before they were fully developed. As far as we could tell, however, the green tint in the center was entirely absent. When a first-class certificate of merit was awarded to this plant by the Royal Horticultural Society of England, a foot note was added to the notice to the effect that the stems were weak and the centers of the flowers were green, but that the plants had been specially forced for the occasion, which might account for these drawbacks.

The flowers resemble double French anemones in miniature, and if well established plants, when forced, produce flowers with white centers, this novelty will soon become a favorite with florists, as it should do well in a frame or greenhouse where violets are grown. As an addition to the hardy plant border it is sure to be in demand, as early flowering plants are always especial favorites, and this is among the earliest. R. N.

More About the American Wonder Lemon.

Without seeing and testing the so-called lemon named American Wonder, mentioned in your issue of February 3, it may not be proper to give a definite opinion of it, but having examined a great many citrus fruits of like character it may not be out of place for me to speak of it from the standpoint of a pomologist.

If it is a true lemon, which I greatly doubt, it is worthless to the fruit trade. A lemon must not exceed two and one-half inches in diameter and two and one quarter is better. Nor is one with a bitter skin of much value. The fruits pictured were about five inches in diameter, and one is said to have weighed two and one half pounds. My belief is that this fruit is either a pomelo or some nondescript hybrid of the genus citrus. There are hundreds of such mongrels growing in Florida and California, where they have come up by accident, some being sweet, some sour, and some intensely so. None of them are much valued except as curiosities.

If there is a desire on the part of greenhouse men to grow a lemon tree occasionally, why not get a good variety, like Eureka, Villafranca or Lisbon? The true pomelo, improperly called "grape fruit" by many, is also a good fruit of which there are several well established varieties. Walters and Marsh are two of the best. But they make quite large trees for house culture.

One of the nicest of all the citrus fruits for house culture, and one of the hardiest as well, is the Satsuma orange. It is called Oonshin in Japan. If budded on trifoliata stock, which is now a very common practice, it dwarfs the tree in some measure and also makes it more able to resist cold. The fruit is small but delicious and attractive.

Parksley, Va. H. E. VAN DEMAN.

Apropos of the American Wonder lemon, an illustration of which recently appeared in your valuable paper, I send you herewith a seedling lemon which is one of sixty-five grown on a four-year-old tree this year. Many of them weighed as much as three pounds. The tree is planted in the ground in my greenhouse and now has matured fruit, fruit half grown, fruit just started and blooms, all at the same time. It blooms and fruits during the entire year.

A TOUR OF THE WHOLESALE DEALERS — SOME VERY BUSY PLACES —THE SPECIALTIES.—GREAT QUANTITIES OF STOCK — PROPOSITION TO CONSOLIDATE TWO CORPORATIONS.—CARNATIONS AT THE BOWLING MEETING.—DIMMOCK RETURNS FROM EUROPE.—OTHER NOTES.

A tour of the wholesale cut flower district at the present time indicates a gradual increase in daily receipts and a general anticipation of lower values, the realization of which, however, may be somewhat retarded, until more sunny and spring-like weather is experienced. The quantity of flowers delivered at the various wholesale places in one morning is in the aggregate enormous, there being no less than twenty-six of these establishments of varying importance. A trip that will take them all in, allowing a reasonable time in which to examine their stock and greet the out of town callers one is sure to meet may easily consume an entire day and, it might be added, a day well spent. At John Young's, on Twenty-eighth street, one sees Ward's fancy carnations, also bulbous stock and roses in profusion and learns all about what the Florists' Club is doing. Next door is J. I. Raynor's, so crowded with buyers, roses and Johnnie Weir that you have to walk edgewise to enter; a busy mart on the dullest day. Just above is Ghormley & Perkins' new place, clean and spotless in a coat of fresh paint and glittering with gold letters on the window, and next below Raynor is Ed. Horan's, where sweet peas, forget-me-nots, amaryllises and lilies fill the window while faithful Billie hustles inside.

The handsomest store on the street, or rather two stores, is that of Thos. Young, Jr. Groups of palms and azaleas adorn the entrance and whole tiers of lilacs, Brunners, cape jasmines and, later on, Wiegand's renowned Jacqs. and hybrids, make the interior a perfect garden. Next comes Walter Sheridan, doing a big business but never busy, always cordial, and famed for his fine Beauties and violets. Across the street is Traendly & Schenck's, the headquarters of the bowling fraternity, where the visitor can get all the bowling news—provided there are no customers to attend to, which rarely happens, for they have a good line of them. A few doors above are Young & Nugent, who express great satisfaction over the results of this, their first year in business and have for a colleague Harry Bunyard, the "green goods" king. To reach J. K. Allen one must now cross Sixth avenue, a hazardous undertaking, but Mr. Allen agrees to provide accident insurance for all growers or buyers who will make the attempt.

Twenty-ninth street boasts a goodly row of wholesalers, too. Charlie Millang and Geo. Saltford occupy a store together in enviable harmony, while the office and cash are presided over by the most amiable little bookkeeper in the world, Miss Josephine Millang. A few doors below is M. A. Hart. Good natured and jolly he is and it is said that Mike can, with that twinkling smile of his, wheedle half a dollar more on the hundred out of a Greek than any other living man. Close to Broadway, the last in the row, is W. H. Gunther's "headquarters for violets," and every purple bunch is as conscientiously watched as an egg in a nest.

Julius Lang holds the balance of power on Thirtieth street, between Broadway and Sixth avenue. Independent and straightforward, he asks no favors of anyone, carries a good stock and manages to sell it all. Across Sixth avenue are the Ford Bros., well equipped with a Chester county smile and Quaker shrewdness and a window full of carnations and other good things. Skipping over a bunch of the lesser lights we can take a car down to Twenty-third street, where the New York Cut Flower Co. dispenses No. 666, Liberty, Olympia and Admiral Dewey to an eager throng, and Moore, Hentz & Nash maintain, with due ability, the prestige of the commission man. Far away at the Thirty-fourth street ferry is Frank Millang, doing a snug trade of his own in the early morning, surrounded by the strange, cosmopolitan bustle of the break-of-day flower market.

In all the tour we have met Johnnie Weir a score of times, listened to fourteen distinct phases of Charlie Carlin's philosophy, encountered several Greek gambling groups, seen a few hundred thousand roses, carnations, valley, daffodils and violets melt away into the immensity of the great metropolis, laughed at Mallon's witty gossip, learned the inside facts about the bowling tournament, the Boer war, the tenderloin and the Philippines, shook hands with the grower from Babylon and the retailer from Bridgeport and find ourselves at the wind-up with a pocket full of good cigars and the memory of a substantial dinner with a bunch of congenial spirits at May's or the Old Knickerbocker Cottage, just around the corner from where we started.

Negotiations are in progress between the New York Cut Flower Company and the New York Cut Flower Exchange looking to an amalgamation of interests and securing quarters in the neighborhood of the wholesale center. A special committee has been appointed by each of the parties to confer. If a union is effected a new corporation will be necessary.

Kretschmar Bros., from West Nyack, brought to the Flatbush bowling meeting last Thursday a set of seedling carnations of good size and general excellence. One very large one is a soft apple-blossom color and they have great faith in its future.

Fire did damage amounting to about $1500 in the conservatories of Mrs. Liebertz, at 971 Prospect avenue, Brooklyn, on the night of March 2.

H. A. Stoothoff has moved to 116 West street, where he has abundant room and facilities for converting tobacco stems into sure death for bugs.

Alfred Dimmock sailed for New York per steamship Etruria on March 3 and will soon be shaking hands with his American friends.

J. B. Kidd arrived last week from California and will take up his duties at Wm. Elliott & Sons' at once.

THE SEASON OF RESTRAINT BRINGS NO DIMINUTION IN TRADE.—BEAUTIES STILL SCARCE —PRICES HOLD WELL.—MARCH MEETING OF THE CLUB.—LONSDALE DISCUSSES BEGONIAS.—MICHELL TO WRESTLE WITH A TOUGH PROPOSITION.—VARIOUS ITEMS.

The sackcloth season is here but the trade, particularly the transient, ever-moving quantity, is better than before. There is much blooming stock about, everything seasonable being abundant. Harris is making a hit with his bougainvilleas, bringing in a few at a time but doing them so well that all are sold before they are really ready. His lilies and rhododendrons are also very fine. In the cut flower department there seems to be an even state of things, except that the American Beauty supply does not keep pace with the demand. Anything above regular orders is always promised with a "hedge," or way to get out of it if the order is not filled. Prices are about the same as last week, there being no noticeable weakening as yet. Daffodils and violets are an exception, however, these now being a little in excess of the daily requirements. Good daffodils may be had for $3, and 50 cents to 75 cents secures good double violets, while singles are 25 cents to 50 cents per hundred. Carnations range from $1.50 to $4, the quantity price being $2 for very fair flowers. Lily of the valley is $3 and mignonette $2 to $3. Harrisii lilies are $12 and scarce at that. All the growers seem to be holding back for Easter.

We saw some American Beauties at S. S. Pennock's this week that took the "rag off the bush," in fact most likely the bush and all. They were fine flowers on heavy stems, a few inches short of eight feet in length, clothed with luxuriant foliage to the bottom. Fahrenwold was the grower who cut them this extra length for a special order.

The March meeting of the Florists' Club was well attended, five gentlemen were elected to membership and several were proposed for action at the next meeting. The club roll is growing rapidly and shows a healthy state of affairs in Philadelphia trade circles. Edwin Lonsdale's paper on begonias was very interesting. He presented a new idea in that he claimed the plant to be a life saver, as in a private residence, when all the conditions necessary to plant growth, such as water, heat and light, are exactly right and the plant does not thrive and sheds its leaves, it shows the atmosphere of the apartments to be unhealthy and not fit for human use. When asked as to the best method of propagating Begonia Gloire De Lorraine, he said he was still experimenting with more or less gratifying results.

At the next meeting Henry F. Michell will wrestle with the problem as to "why floral products, such as plants and flowers, remain at last season's prices, while everything the growers use has risen 100 per cent or over in price." If he will explain this satisfactorily we know of several other mysteries that he will be called on to solve and he will soon become a mighty seer.

Resolutions of sympathy were passed on the death of Joseph W. Simpson, whose funeral occurred on March 8, a a retired private gardener, who, several years ago, was made an honorary member of the club.

H. P. Hugenholtz has been capturing orders for the house of K. J. Kuyk, of Ghent, in this city the past week. He says he finds the growers responsive and is well satisfied with his trip. K.

TRADE GOOD.—ROSES INCREASING IN QUANTITY.—WHITE CARNATIONS A SCARCITY.—BULBOUS STOCK CROWDING.—VIOLETS STILL LOW.—CARNATION SHOW AT PARK STREET MARKET.—ALDERMEN MIX UP WITH THE PARKS.—DAWSON'S CRIMSON RAMBLERS.—VARIOUS MATTERS.

Trade holds out well for Lent. The wholesalers are all quite busy and those who make a specialty of miscellaneous supplies find the demand quite brisk and steady. Roses are slowly but surely increasing in cut and the augmented supply makes buyers more critical, but no reasonable man can complain of the prices, which compare favorably with any recent year. Carnations do not increase any yet, there being almost a scarcity of whites and some favored varieties in other colors. Bulbous stock of all sorts begins to crowd a little. At the prices prevailing there is not much profit in it and should it accumulate to any degree there must follow a loss to some one. Violets are exceedingly plentiful and bringing low figures on an average, as has been the case for some time past. Lilies are getting more abundant and a few lilacs are beginning to come in. Already the talk of Easter prospects and Easter values is heard and opinions vary greatly, as usual, the "wish being father to the thought" in all cases.

There was a good exhibition of carnations at the Park street market on Saturday, March 3. Several of the novelties of the season, including No. 666 and some of Mr. Ward's seedlings, were shown by exhibitors from a distance and there were seedlings of varying merit from local growers. Nicholson, Patten, Cook, Macrae and others made good displays of carnations, one white from Carmichael being especially liked. Pierce showed mignonette and lilies of high grade, Comley showed good violets and Howard threw everything else into the shade with roses of remarkable size and finish. Among the visitors were M. J. Edmonds, Bristol, R. I., John Macrae, Providence; W. S. Nichols, Barrington; A. B. Knowlton, No. Grafton; H. F. Littlefield, Worcester; H. A. Cook, Shrewsbury, and Geo. E. Buxton, Nashua, N. H.

The Board of Aldermen has started an investigation of the park department, the commissioners and superintendent being the intended victims. All the average alderman knows about park management or requirements would not make a very large book but they are afflicted with a woeful unrest while there exists any department which they cannot work for political purposes. In the present instance they are aided and abetted by a handful of chronics who are not recorded as having ever accomplished anything themselves but assume to know it all. The chairman of the committee to which this precious coalition looks for relief is a liquor dealer.

Jackson Dawson has a lot of pretty little Crimson Ramblers in 4-inch pots, each bearing one or two large clusters of buds. These are but eight weeks old, having been two-eye grafts on pieces of Manetti root early in January and are now showing color. There is a suggestion in this for plant growers. How a window full of such would sell on Broadway, Chestnut street or Michigan avenue!

Mr. Dawson visited Schenectady on Tuesday of last week on a very sad errand—to attend the funeral of the little grandson of whom he was so fond.

On Saturday last the horticultural society appointed a committee to confer with the market managers with a view to holding future carnation exhibits in Horticultural Hall.

Chas. J. Dawson has been appointed forester of the Essex County, New Jersey, parks and will enter at once on his new duties.

The department of botany at Harvard University will send one case of the famous Blascka glass flowers to the Paris exposition.

Wading about the greenhouses in rubber boots, picking violets, was the pastime of some of the suburban growers during the recent freshet.

Mrs. James Quinn died at her home in Brookline on Monday morning, March 5.

SEVERE WEATHER DOES NOT CUT TRADE.—STOCK SHORT OF THE DEMAND.—A CLUB ENTERTAINMENT AND A MEETING. BOWLERS TO PREPARE FOR CONVENTION CONTEST.—NOTES.

For the past two weeks this city has endured the most disagreeable weather of the whole winter, blizzards with deep snow and the thermometer marking many degrees below zero. At present the ground is covered with fifteen inches of snow but the bright sun of the past few days has already made an improvement in the quality and a decided increase in the quantity of all flowers. Stock has been extremely scarce and far short of the good demand which all dealers have enjoyed.

The Florists' Club recently gave an entertainment in Harmonie Hall. The night was very stormy but that did not deter about thirty members with their families and friends from attending. An excellent supper was served and card playing and dancing were indulged in till after midnight. The best of feeling prevailed and the affair was the most enjoyable event in the history of the club.

The club meeting last Wednesday evening was well attended, though many of the members present had long distances to come, which shows well for the interest taken in the organization. The feature of the meeting was the report of the carnation meeting at Buffalo from the observations of several members who attended, and the discussion which followed upon the merits and characteristics of the varieties shown there was very interesting and instructive.

Active work will begin at once by the bowlers who expect to go to New York next August. The railroad fares will be paid by the club for the team selected to enter the contest.

Robert Flowerday sailed last Saturday for England, where he will remain several weeks, visiting the scenes of his boyhood.

F. Kolbe, whose stock and greenhouses were destroyed by fire a short time ago, has taken charge of the greenhouses of John Krumholz on the Creek road.

J. K. Stock has just completed two houses, one 18x80 the other 16x40.

Recent visitors: Geo. T. King, Boston; Paul Berkowitz, B. Eschner. Walter Mott, Philadelphia; J. E. Killen, New York, and Robt. Greenlaw, of Boston.

MARCH MEETING OF THE INDIANA SOCIETY.—NEW MEMBERS.—FIRE INFLICTS HEAVY LOSS UPON A PROSPEROUS CONCERN.—NOTES AND COMMENTS.

At the March meeting of the Florists' Association of Indiana Mr. Bauer, of Bauer & Smith, read a very interesting paper on carnations. E. G. Asmus of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, was a guest and Ch. Knopf, of Richmond; J. A. Newby, of Logansport, and F. B. Tinker, of Peru, were elected to membership. A. Wiegand will speak before the society at the April meeting, on "Floriculture thirty years ago, or how we got a start."

The Indianapolis Plant and Flower Company suffered from a fire on Monday night, March 5. The blaze started in the boiler shed, to which a tank tower is connected. Both shed and tower were completely destroyed and three employes who were asleep in their room beneath the tank had a narrow escape. As all the greenhouses adjoin the shed they were more or less damaged and the smoke and heat ruined most of the stock. The heating apparatus was damaged to an extent that made it impossible to put it in running order before the next night, which promised to be a severe one, and other florists went to the company's assistance and hauled as much of the stock as could be saved to their places. W. J. Hasselman, the head of the company, estimated his loss at from $5,000 to $6,000, with insurance of only $1,000. It is his intention to rebuild as quickly as possible.

Martin Nelson, whose heating apparatus failed him during the last cold snap, suffered a loss which entitles him to our sympathy.

H. P. Smith, of Piqua, O., visited Indianapolis on his annual purchasing tour.

Wm. Bertermann has gone from Nashville, Tenn., to Florida. H. J.

HEAVY BUSINESS FOR SOME WEEKS.—ROSES AND CARNATIONS IN BRISK DEMAND.—OPPORTUNITY FOR SOME GOOD MATERIAL IN OTHER LINES.—SOME NOVELTIES.—VARIOUS NOTES.

Trade has been good for the past six weeks and it is probable that more flowers were sold than in any previous February. For a time orders for roses could only be partially filled but soon a run on carnations, which were good, relieved the tension on the rose. Judging from the returns from commission dealers and numerous telegrams for extra shipments of those two flowers, the grower is warranted in concluding that these two items will stand an increased output, but I wish to warn him that hundreds of people purchased roses or carnations who would have preferred something else, could they have obtained it. Just as soon as some two or three growers appreciate this fact and supply the market with choice crops of some desirable novelty, roses and carnations will be more severely culled than ever before and any increase in crops will be a discouragement. An expression which is familiar to every florist is: "I want a pretty center piece but am tired of roses and carnations; what can I have?" How many Milwaukee growers are preparing to help the retailer out of such a dilemma? One florist here has made a practice of keeping orchids and has found them a great help. Another has secured Chas. Raupach's entire cut of roses, which, compared with other roses, are as much of a novelty as orchids.

Frank Dilger has made a beginning. Last spring his Spanish iris was quite popular and lately a crop of ornithogalums has gone like hot cakes. Another florist has gained much of his popularity by having something to break the monotony of florists' windows. Last month long sprays of pink begonias, Euphorbia jacquiniæflora, Primula obconica, Echeveria metallica and pots of nasturtiums in full bloom have attracted considerable attention.

Loeffler Bros. are producing splendid single violets, and A. Billings has superior lilies and lily of the valley. Some pansies, mignonette and forget-me-nots are coming in now. Fresh crops of adiantum are also in. Buettner's Novelty tulips take quite well and his first quality Beauties are deserving of praise. In two recent decorations a quantity of Bignonia venusta in full bloom was used.

The bowling club, lately organized, is practicing Thursdays. They will endeavor to acquire skill and courage sufficient to invite the Chicago team up soon for a contest.

There is prospect for a good supply of lilies for Easter.

Herman Hunkel is distributing a well gotten up circular in the interest of the S. A. F. Other vice-presidents would do well to follow suit. C. B. W.

FLOWERS ABUNDANT BUT TRADE GOOD.—DEMAND GROWING FOR THE BEST STOCK.—CARNATIONS IN TROUBLE.—ABOUT VIOLETS.—ROEDDER MEETS WITH AN ACCIDENT.—VARIOUS OTHER NOTES.

Notwithstanding the abundance of flowers all the commercial growers and dealers have been doing a good business. Each year adds largely to the residents of the vicinity, eastern people who are accustomed to using flowers and paying well for them. When they come here they are not satisfied with the garden flowers and seek the stores. Thus the demand for a superior quality is increasing and both the growers and dealers are interested.

A considerable loss has been sustained by the carnation growers by bursting calyxes. Fully twenty-five per cent of Los Angeles, the leading white variety, have been lost through this cause during the past month, and now the unusually hot and dry weather has developed millions of thrips.

Violets are grown here in great quantities to supply the local demand, and thousands of bunches are sold daily. The Central Park Floral Co. has made a specialty this season of the Princess of Wales and are well pleased with the result, but some of the growers believe that this variety does not produce nearly as many flowers as the California.

Alfred Roedder, of Shorb, met with an accident on February 23, while removing some large palms, one of which slipped, weighing about 800 pounds, and struck him on the right foot, breaking some of the small bones. It was necessary to enclose the foot in a plaster cast. In a few days the foot will be subjected to the X-ray to see if the bones are knitting properly.

H. Wilfrid Walker, who started a plant establishment about two years ago, has sold his stock, abandoned the business, and gone to Mexico.

Hon. Thos. R. Bard, the recently elected senator from California, is an enthusiastic horticulturist who has produced several new varieties of roses which have merit.

M. Welsh, who at one time was a florist in Ohio, but who now is a capitalist of California, is in the east and south. All along the route he has been "picking up" desirable plants to add to his collection. One of the recent additions was a Cocos nucifera in fruit. This was secured in Florida and arrived safely in California.

J. V. Linden, for a number of years Superintendant of Lincoln Park, Denver, Colo., is visiting Los Angeles with the intention of remaining. D. R. W.

WINNIPEG, MAN.—R. England, the city gardener, has the stock at Assiniboine Park in excellent condition.

Tarrytown, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held on Thursday evening, February 22, President Turner presiding. A letter was read from the secretary of the American Rose Society asking the society's co-operation at the forthcoming exhibition. It was voted to contribute $15 for a special premium.

The following gentlemen were elected to membership: Jas. Clark and Michael Ward, Irvington; Theodore Dinkle, Peter Smith and Wm. Hearney, Tarrytown. The following were proposed for membership: Eli Jago, Irvington; J. I. Donlan, New York; Wallace Odell, John Walquist and R. W. Husted, Tarrytown.

E. W. Neubrand reported that the Dutchess County Horticultural Society's dinner was a complete success. Our representatives thoroughly enjoyed themselves; they said that as a natural consequence the further up the river there is less and less water.

Wm. Stevenson staged a most excellent table of plants, including fine specimens of azaleas, cinerarias, primulas, Spiræa astilboides, Adlumia cirrhosa, and a fine lot of Paper White narcissi, for which he was awarded a certificate of merit. A certificate was also given to P. M. Pierson, Briar Cliff Greenhouses, Sing Sing, for a vase of Defiance mignonette. The flower spikes averaged fifteen inches in length and the foliage was like chrysanthemum leaves. Honorable mention was awarded to L. A. Martin for a vase of Princess of Wales violets, also to John Boshard for a vase of Marie Louise.

The executive committee presented the preliminary schedule for the fall show and it was ordered distributed.

L. A. Martin read a paper on vegetable growing, dealing with his subject in a masterly manner. He gave some good advice regarding soil, situation, manuring and also a complete calendar of operations for the vegetable garden.

The following syllabus was announced: March, chrysanthemums, by Jas. T. Scott; April, indoor roses, by A. A. Taaffe; May, small fruits, by Thos. Cockburn; June, outdoor roses, by Wm. Turner.

BUSINESS QUIET.—NO OVER-SUPPLY OF STOCK.—PERSONAL MENTION.

Business is rather quiet and, except when funeral orders are to be filled, the store man's life is one of leisure. The supply is not much more than the demand, however, and there is no prospect of a glut of anything, in fact carnations were rather scarce last week.

Julius Tischinger, whose attack of paralysis was noticed three weeks ago, is little, if any better.

Philip Welsh is seriously ill and has gone to a hospital for expert treatment.

MACK.

New Haven, Conn.

The cut flower trade has been very good for the past three weeks. St. Valentine's day was the best in several years and Washington's birthday was another good day for the florists. Plants of all kinds are in good demand, especially azaleas and Dutch hyacinths. Cut daffodils and tulips find ready sale. Roses and carnations are very plentiful, also violets.

Karl Rosien, of Westville, who has been ill with pneumonia, has recovered and was in town last week.

Recent visitors: R. H. Tuppe, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Horan, Bridgeport; O. H. Nye, Milford Mr. Ludwig, Cromwell; Paul Berkowitz, Philadelphia.

CROMWELL, CONN.—Chas. A. Olson, with A. N. Pierson, and Miss Sarah M. Ostergren were married March 3.

EAST HAVEN, CONN.—John A. Long & Bro. lost considerable glass in a recent wind storm and much stock was damaged.

CLEVELAND, O.—Ella Grant Wilson is putting up some excellent wedding decorations and has enjoyed a very fine trade throughout the season.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—Geo. Hansen, who formerly conducted greenhouses here but who has for some time been located at Pittsfield, has returned to his old place.

CUMBERLAND, MD.—John A. Bopp recently lost considerable glass in a wind storm. For a time it looked as though the greenhouses would all be destroyed.

PONTIAC, ILL.—W. J. Miller has secured a new location on the banks of the Vermilion river and proposes to remove his houses in the summer, enlarging his place somewhat.

AMES, IA.—P. T. Barnes has resigned the foremanship at the Agricultural College greenhouses and has been succeeded by Mr. Irwin, from the Kansas Experiment Station.

LENOX, MASS.—Thieves have been systematically robbing the greenhouses of Wm. D. Sloane although the superintendent, Wm. Griffin, is doing his utmost to prevent the depredations.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.—At the annual meeting of the Northampton Horticultural Society, on the evening of February 26, E. P. Copeland was elected president and James King secretary and treasurer.

BRANCHPORT, N. J.—Henry Hulick has removed his greenhouses from Eatontown to the property which he recently purchased here. He will put up a range of new houses this summer.

LEOMINSTER, MASS.—The residence of Joseph Fuller caught fire from a defective furnace flue February 25, causing damage to house and furniture to the extent of $2,000 or $3,000. The property was fully insured.

GREEN BAY, WIS.—C. Meyer, formerly with H. M. Reinecke, and his uncle, H. Detjen, of Milwaukee, have embarked in business here, leasing the store formerly occupied by Theo. Noehle. They have also bought land near Woodlawn Cemetery upon which to erect greenhouses.

WATERTOWN, CONN.—The packing room and boiler house connected with the greenhouses of Otto Roeski were badly damaged by fire on the morning of February 20. Mr. Roeski's residence and the greenhouses were only saved by excellent work on the part of the fire department.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J.—Ernest Petzold reported to the police on February 27 that early on the morning of that day forty-eight sashes had been smashed and that the violets growing underneath were frozen. He attributed the act to malice and furnished names of suspected parties to the detectives.

AMERICAN FLORIST CO., CHICAGO.

SIR JOHN LUBBOCK, well known as a scientific writer on plants, is to be henceforth known as Lord Avebury.

AN English writer speaks very highly of Physalis Franchetti for pot culture. He recommends two year old plants, stating that one year seedlings are too weak for the purpose.

THE next big event is the spring exhibition of the American Rose Society, to be held at the Eden Musee, New York, March 27-29. The premium list is now ready and copies may be had on application to Leonard Barron, 136 Liberty street, New York.

THE colored plate which John Forbes, of Hawick, Scotland, sends us of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine Caledonia shows a handsome plant with pure white flowers, each bearing a cluster of yellow stamens in the center. Next autumn Mr. Forbes will offer B. Gloire de Lorraine Nana Compacta, which is said to be similar to the parent in all but habit.

THE production of window glass is at present at its highest point, 2168 pots being in operation in this country. The trust is supplying jobbers at prevailing low prices while the strong independent factories are holding for better figures, a hope which may not be realized, as well informed glass men believe that the policy of the combine is to discourage the building of additional factories and to drive the weaker concerns from the field.

THE notice of the meeting of the American Rose Society and the programme for the work at its sessions has been mailed to the members. Aside from purely business matters, the only feature announced is a lecture by Prof. Byron D. Halsted on "Some Diseases of the Rose." In scanning the list of officers and executive committeemen one notes that, geographically, the names are not representative. The New York-Philadelphia center claims all the officers and four out of six committeemen, Mr. Hill, of Indiana, and Mr. Wood, of Massachusetts, being the only outsiders. This is undoubtedly accidental, but the matter should have attention at the coming meeting, as the society is supposed to be "American."

Galax Leaves.

These leaves which within a few years have become so popular in floral design work are gathered in the mountains of North Carolina and Eastern Tennessee. Picking begins early in September but the leaves cannot be shipped safely by freight until later. The bronze leaves, which are in much greater demand than the green, cannot be got until about the middle of November, when the rich coloring is caused by successive frosts.

The pickers put the leaves in bundles and take them to the general merchandise store where they are received practically as cash at about 25 cents a thousand. The receivers have no regular arrangement for storage of large quantities and aim to unload the material as fast as received, which they usually do, as the demand about equals the supply. Dealers north place contract orders with them for certain quantities to be delivered at their convenience between certain specified dates. The leaves are packed dry with a little sphagnum moss among them, which supplies all the moisture they need. They keep better and travel better if frozen; in fact, the same conditions that are required by hardy ferns in storage just suits them and most of the damage to them comes from the same cause that injures the ferns—heating in transit. The dealers place them in commercial cold storage houses at about 28° Fahrenheit, and if in good condition when stored thus they will remain so for an indefinite period. Florists after receiving them should aim to keep them constantly in a temperature below freezing until ready to use them.

PROLONGED SHORTAGE IS AT AN END.—AMPLE SUPPLIES IN MOST LINES AND OVERSTOCK IN SOME.—TRADE STILL BRISK.—SCHILLER SELLS OUT AT NILES CENTER.—FOREST GLEN GROWERS SUFFER FROM FIRE.—CHRYSANTHEMUMS IN MARCH.—ANTHONY GOES TO GENEVA.

After six weeks of continual shortage stock has at length become plentiful. Since the beginning of the week there has been a sufficiency in all lines and on some items an over-supply. There are none too many long Beauties nor too many white roses but in some cases Bridesmaid and Meteor roses have had to be forced unless of better than the average quality. White carnations have gone well because of the quantity of funeral work in the hands of the retailers and bulbous stock has been moved by the same factor. The inclemency of Monday and Tuesday caused an accumulation of colored carnations and of violets, but then the sun came out and so did the fakir, with the result that the load was lifted at fakir's prices. Pansies, sweet peas, lilacs, jonquils and other specialties are to be had in considerable quantities. Shipping trade continues good and is of material assistance to the wholesalers, most of whom are still cleaning up in fair shape each day.

Herman Schiller has disposed of his establishment at Niles Center, the greenhouses going to John Brod and the residence and one acre of land passing to George Busscher. The new proprietor of the greenhouses is a young man who has been learning the business there and whose father has taken this excellent opportunity of setting him up for himself. Mr. Schiller will, for a time at least, continue to operate his three stores on the west side, consuming a portion of Mr. Brod's output, the balance of which will be consigned to this market.

Brant & Noe suffered a considerable loss from fire on February 28. The flames originated in their rear boiler room, in one of the worst storms Chicago has known in years, and three adjoining houses were injured more or less. In two of the structures one crop was almost entirely lost. They have most of the material on hand for their six new houses and, although the ground is not yet cleared, will rush the work of construction to have them ready for early planting with Beauties.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club it was voted to invite the Society of American Florists to hold its seventeenth meeting in Chicago in August, 1901. A committee consisting of W. N. Rudd, Walter Kreitling and G. L. Grant was appointed to arrange the details of the trip to New York next August.

J. T. Anthony is now in charge of the establishment of W. P. Harvey, at Geneva, Ill. Hitherto the greenhouses there have been devoted to the cultivation of vegetables, but it is now proposed to grow carnations in them, also outdoor flowers, for the Chicago market.

M. O. Hoechener & Son, formerly at 1058 So. Hoyne avenue, have removed to larger and more commodious quarters, at 874 W. Twenty-second street, having secured a five year lease of this well located store.

Kennicott Bros. Co. received a splendid bloom of Chrysanthemum Minnie Wanamaker on March 7. It was from C. Oehlinschlager, of Oconomowoc, Wis., and was as large, well formed and as pure in color as in mid-season.

C. L. Washburn and family left yesterday for a ten days' outing at West Baden, Ind., with a party of Hinsdale people. Mr. Washburn has been suffering with the grip for two or three weeks.

J. W. Enzweiler, of 5325 Morgan street, on March 10, opened a branch store at Fifty-fifth and Halsted streets under the style of the Garfield Boulevard Floral Co.

Kennicott Bros. Co. had an unusually large supply on Wednesday, the stock from Grand Rapids, due on Tuesday not getting through until the next morning.

The establishment of the Chicago Carnation Co., of Joliet, is the subject of an illustrated notice in Mollers' Deutsche Gartner-Zeitung of February 17.

Bassett & Washburn have sold a large number of carnation cuttings. Their carnations are very fine this year.

J. V. Merrion, at the Union Stock Yards, is now dealing in pulverized sheep manure.

Benthey & Co. have been getting some extra Blanche Ferry sweet peas.

St. Louis bowlers have been invited to meet the Chicago team.

Visitors: H. Weber, of Oakland, Md.; John Bertmann, of Indianapolis, Ind.; Wm. L. Rock, Kansas City, Mo.

SHOW OF CARNATIONS.—THE BEST DISPLAY EVER MADE IN THE DOMINION.—THE EXHIBITORS AND JUDGES.

The Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association and the Toronto Horticultural Society united in holding a carnation exhibition in St. George's Hall, on Thursday, March 8. The affair was a great success as the display was the finest showing of carnations ever made in Canada and the hall was thronged, both afternoon and evening.

No effort had been spared to secure entries from the best growers in both the United States and the Dominion and the following well known firms were represented by their best products:

F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind.; C. W. Ward, Cottage Gardens, Queens, L. I., N. Y.; W. J. Palmer, Buffalo, N. Y.; John N. May, Summit, N. J.; E. H. Michell, Philadelphia, Pa.; Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa; Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass.; Richard Witterstaetter, Sedamsville, O.; L. E. Marquisee, Syracuse, N. Y.; H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md.; J. L. Dillon, Bloomsburg, Pa.; E. G. Hill & Co., Richmond, Ind.; Wm. Scott, Buffalo, N. Y.; Miller & Son., Bracondale, Ont.; J. H. Dunlop, Toronto; George Hollis, Bracondale; W. Fendley, Brampton; F. Dicks, London; J. Gammage, London, and C. Scrim, Ottawa.

The judges were Wm. Gammage, London; Wm. Scott, Buffalo; Jas. McKenna and Jas. Bennett, Montreal. S. P.

Chestnut Hill, Pa.

At the last meeting of the Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society sixteen new members were admitted, and awards made as follows on the evening's schedule:

For the best vase of twenty-five carnations, to Robt. G. Carey, gardener to T. C. Price. For best specimen fern to Geo. W. Brown, gardener to Robt. N. Carson, for a grand specimen of Nephrolepis exaltata Bostoniensis. For three heads of salad, to Geo. W. Brown. A special prize for fine specimen of the Cucumber Sion House was awarded to William Boyce, gardener to Randal Morgan.

In connection with the above, special mention was made of a very fine seedling pink carnation, exhibited by Robt. G. Carey; a handsome large specimen Azalea Madame Vander Cruysen, shown by G. W. Brown; a very fine lot of Emperor William beans, exhibited by William Boyce, and for highly meritorious collections of carnations exhibited by Jesse Newman, gardener to H. C. Curtis, Wyncote; and William Robinson, gardener to J. W. Pepper, Jenkintown.

Special mention was also made of two fine specimens of Phaius grandifolius and of a seedling yellow calla lily, exhibited by Frank Gould, gardener to John T. Morris; for a collection of cinerarias and hyacinths, exhibited by John Moore, gardener to Edward L. Welsh, specimen plants exhibited by John McGowen, gardener to Wm. Bayard, and for a specimen Adiantum Farleyense, exhibited by Richard Moore, gardener to James Cheston.

In addition the gardeners were all interested in two fine vases of the new carnations, Olympia, from John N. May, and Ethel Crocker, by Robt. Craig & Son.

Prizes have been offered to be competed for at the March meeting: For vase of twelve roses in variety, vase of six American Beauties, three plants of cineraria, bunch of fifty violets, best plate of one dozen mushrooms and specimen of a flowering plant. J. HOWES HUMPHREYS.

OBITUARY.

JOHN G. GLEN.

The senior member of the Glen Brothers Nursery Company, of Rochester, N. Y., died February 27, at Haddon Hall, Atlantic City, N. J., where he was sojourning for his health. He was one of Rochester's oldest and most prominent business men and is survived by three brothers, Frank W. Glen, of Brooklyn, Alonzo P. Glen, of Medina, Ohio, and Gerrit S. Glen, of New York.

ROBERT C. BROWN.

The treasurer of the Brown Brothers Company, the well-known nurserymen of Rochester, died very suddenly on February 27. He had been suffering with a severe cold, which inclement weather caused to result in pneumonia. Mr. Brown was born in Rochester in 1864 and at twenty years of age he and Charles J. Brown embarked in the nursery business. Ten years ago they incorporated as the Brown Bros. Co. The firm's business has developed rapidly. They now have large packing grounds at Brighton, near Rochester, a Canadian branch near Toronto, and maintain a Chicago office. Mr. Brown had a beautiful home at Rochester, the grounds being embellished with many rare trees and shrubs. The deceased was also treasurer of the Herrick Seed Co., the Perry Nursery Co., and a trustee of the Monroe Avenue Methodist church. He is survived by Mrs. Brown and a little daughter.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.—James T. Scott has taken charge of the horticultural work carried on in connection with the House of Refuge, Randall's Island, New York.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres; ALBERT McCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

VISITING CHICAGO: A. J. Brown, of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Howard F. Darrow, of Minneapolis.

RESULTS from advertising in the literary papers and magazines are not considered extra good so far in 1900.

SAGINAW, MICH.—The contract has been let by the Grenell Seed Co. for a three-story building to cost about $5,000.

WINTRY weather with heavy snow storms in the northern sections of the country have apparently given the mail order trade quite a set-back.

THE lowest bidders on the government seed contract are said to be the Ullathorne Seed Co., A. C. Nellis and Charles Parker. We have not learned yet, however, that the award has been made.

HOUSTON, TEXAS.—The seed business carried on by T. H. Thompson & Co., wholesale dealers in fruit, produce, etc., has been taken over by T. H. Thompson, who intends to establish a general seed store in this city.

St. Louis.

STOCK INCREASES.—OVER SUPPLY OF VIOLETS.—ROSE PRICES.—HEALTH TOURS CONTEMPLATED.

There has been a decided change in the cut flower market this week. Stock is more plentiful and prices are lower. There is an over supply of violets and long stemmed Californias are being sold in the retail stores at 10 cents a bunch and the small German variety has no sale whatever except with the street fakirs, who sell them at 5 cents a bunch. Bride and Bridesmaid roses are bringing from $4 to $8 per hundred. Meteors remain scarce and Perles bring $3 to $4. About the only demand is for funeral stock.

It is reported that Will and John Young, of C. Young & Sons' Co., are about to take an extended trip for their health.

J. M. H.

ROCKDALE, PA.—Andrew Springer's greenhouse was destroyed by fire on February 28.

SHENANDOAH, IA.—O. B. Stevens' boiler blew up on Sunday, February 25, and a serious loss was narrowly averted.

HILLSDALE, MICH.—Nicholas Smith's greenhouse was recently damaged by fire resulting from a defective heater. The loss was $250, fully insured.

are the successful growers who advertise in THE AMERICAN FLORIST.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

W. J PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

A NEW dwarf evergreen named Rosedale Hybrid is offered by Baker Bros., Fort Worth, Tex., who claim it to be a cross between the golden arbor-vitæ and Retinospora squarrosa, with the form and growth of the former and texture and color of the latter.

Root-injured Nursery Stock.

Owing to the unusual severity of the winter of 1898-9 and the prevalence of root killing, this question is pertinent in view of the possibility of a recurrence of the injury under present snowless conditions this winter.

I think it is safe to say that in nine cases out of ten the wisest thing to do is to dig root-injured stock and burn it. One-year-old trees rarely recover, because the roots from the scion have developed to only a slight extent. Two-year-olds show a larger percentage of those which recover, while three-year-olds make a still better showing. In the case of three-year-olds which may recover, it is necessary to allow them to remain an additional year in the nursery row. This makes them too stocky and too heavy for distant shipping and their only value is for local trade. Therefore their features of usefulness are very limited. But it should be remembered also in this connection that own-rooted trees are valuable. I have many times noted that a root graft might loose its seedling root the first year and yet save itself by the roots thrown out from the scion. In such cases the trees, if taken up and set somewhat deeper in the nursery, were uninjured afterwards, by conditions as severe or even more so than those which killed the roots of the stock in the first place. There are those, too, who argue that a tree upon its own roots is more fruitful and healthful than a tree on any other stock.

American plums were in some instances killed last winter but oftener they were only root injured. That is to say, the cambium and inner bark were discolored. Where this condition prevailed and where good cultivation was given afterwards, the tree grew and apparently entirely recovered. The difficulty is, however, that they were unfit for market on account of their large size when this recovery had taken place. As in the case of the apples, a limited number might be used for local trade. It would therefore seem wise in the case of injured American plums to try the benefits of good cultivation in saving one and two-year-old stock. Where Myrobalan stocks are used it may be considered useless to spend time in cultivating and endeavoring to save injured roots. So far as I have observed frozen Myrobalan stocks did not recover at any point throughout the region of severest injury. The same is true of Marianna stock and Mazzard cherry stocks.

The experiments which were carried on here last season emphasized very strongly the value of good cultivation in orchard and nursery. The fore part of the season was so exceptionally favorable to growth that thousands of trees which would otherwise have died were saved. The latter part of the season was exceptionally dry, and where good cultivation was given the moisture was saved to the soil and was thus available to the trees. Good cultivation conserved water supply and thus assisted growth. The value of such cultivation was never more completely demonstrated. So abundant was the rain-fall in the early part of the season that one correspondent wrote me stating that while everything was root-killed in his locality everything was growing, even to his willow wood-pile.

Ames, Ia. JOHN CRAIG.

Work of New York Nursery Inspectors.

Certificates of inspection of nursery stock have been issued by the Department of Agriculture at Albany to nearly 500 nurseries in New York state during 1899. These certificates are good up to and including June 30, 1900.

The inspectors found that the San Jose scale has not increased appreciably in 1899 and are under the impression that it is on the decrease. There has been about 43,000 nursery stock destroyed this year; about seventy per cent of this number being confined to one locality, where the scale had gained such a foothold that it was not only necessary to destroy nursery stock but a great many other trees and shrubs as well. The western part of the state is comparatively free, there being but three or four instances where it existed to any extent, and that stock was entirely destroyed.

There are in the state five inspectors, men who are taken from the civil service eligible list, after having passed an examination for the position of nursery inspector. There is now before the legislature a bill amending the law, so as to have fumigating applied to all stock raised within the state as well as to all stock brought from without the state.

Many sorts being extra fine. Our Brides and Henriettes we might term "fancy" stock. Bride will run close to two feet, which is prime for that sort; Henriettes are heavy, running two to three feet Most Teas and H. T's will run close to two feet—some sorts larger, even, while a very few of the poorer growing sorts are not much over one foot. The Hybrids will of course average up heavier than tender varieties—all very fine. Leading varieties we can do in quantity, being especially heavy on such as Bride, Henriette, La France, Bon Silene, Brabrant, Soupert, Devoniensis, Safrano, Wootton, Carnot, White Rambler, etc. La France in grades from 7 to 9 cents: the 7 cent grade being about 12 to 15 inches high and woody. An average assortment of these plants will weigh in the neighborhood of 300 pounds to 1000 plants, packed light, not including weight of packing cases; while a selection of all heavy sorts will weigh more. This stock is freshly dug, grown in our virgin soil of Southern California, free from disease or insects and will give you and your trade satisfaction. We have sold thirty thousand Roses during the past sixty days, but have twenty-five thousand more which must be sold—hence extremely low prices appended. Prices will apply to not less than ten of a variety, properly packed, f. o. b. Los Angeles.

OWN ROOT PLANTS LEAD.

The only place in the United States where you can get good stock of own root, field-grown Roses in variety, including tender sorts. Shipments by freight must be prepaid here, and we require at least 25 per cent cash with orders; balance payable on arrival of stock. Less than 500 plants, cash with order A few hundred plants can be shipped by express, packed light, so that, considering our low prices, plants will not come very high laid down at most any point.

Come at us quickly and make sure of 'em.

At Flatbush.

The third and final contest in the series between the New York, Hudson county and Flatbush florists' bowling teams came off on Thursday afternoon and evening, March 1, at the alleys of the Flatbush club. A goodly crowd of rooters accompanied each aggregation and the spectators' seats were filled to overflowing excepting when the occupants had business with the ice water with which the ice box in the corner was supplied and without counting J. Austin Shaw who kept score. Larry Hafner's time between spares was fully occupied in winding up Mike Hart, and Louis Schmutz was ready at all times to either extend sympathy or precipitate a cakewalk according to circumstances. Alex. Burns, being sick, was sadly missed but no doubt will be glad to know that it was possible for his team to win out without him and that Traendly was available to take his place as coach.

Following are the results of the engagement:

A review of the complete scores made in the tournament shows that Flatbush did its poorest work on its own alleys, while New York did its best on the Flatbush alleys. In the series with Flatbush last year the averages of the scores were, New York 140, Flatbush 136. This time New York averaged 139 and Flatbush 133, showing that New York has improved slightly since last season and that Flatbush has made a decided loss. The Hoboken aggregation was not "in it" at any stage. The trophy, paid for by the losing teams, jointly, is a set of six regulation balls and these the New York boys expect to use with terrible effect on all contestants that have the temerity to show up next August.

The contest settled, all adjourned to the Prospect Park Hotel where a luxurious repast was provided by the generous Flatbush hosts. Even the defeated ones were cheerful and jolly and the winners gallantly accepted Schwalback's explanation that the local representatives were too well bred to beat their visitors. Papa Zeller presided, as usual, and in his address of welcome congratulated everybody on their good behavior and extolled the social advantages of bowling teams in general. Capt. Traendly and Capt. Brown responded briefly and were followed by a number of other speakers and musical celebrities including Messrs. Butterfield and Schmutz the latter contributing a monologue in fourteen different languages concluding with the Marsiellaise in soprano alternated with bass. The introduction of Mr. LeMoult was the signal for a vociferous rendering of "On the Bowery" at the noisy end of the table. J. Ivera made a very witty speech and considerately refrained from weilding his broad axe.

CRABB & HUNTER, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Brunswick, Ga.

This has been a very severe winter. Since the middle of December three heavy freezes have killed all outdoor stock and after each freeze we have had days warm enough to start the buds on many plants, only to have them frozen back in the next cold spell. Outdoor violets have been plentiful and have retailed as low as 20 cents to 25 cents per hundred, but outdoor narcissi have been a complete failure. A bed of Paper Whites in one place has only furnished eight flower stalks, while last season from the same bed the cut was over 2000 stalks. The same state of affairs is being reported from private gardens.

Carnations have been grown here in very limited quantities and with not a shadow of profit. Our soil is too sandy for good results from roses; yet with plenty of water and fertilizing some nice flowers are grown. Of late years the thrips have seriously injured roses and other flowers.

C. S. Tait has just completed an artesian well with a flow of 125 gallons per minute. He has on his place some fine specimen plants, palms, pandanuses and ferns. One Nephrolepis exaltata in a 16-inch pot stands three and one-half feet high, with a spread of seven feet. He has some seedling cannas which will be tested another season and the best ones will then be offered for sale.

ETHEL CROCKER

Absolutely the BEST PINK CARNATION ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another). By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety). In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July. With 18.000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and the order filled by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished, prepaid, at $1.00 per dozen—amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date, every sample, excepting one, out of several hundred sent, has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES, good little plants, at 75 cts. per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

AZALEAS FOR EASTER.

Large specimen plants have all been sold, but we still have a good supply of the popular commercial sizes, 10 to 12 inch, and 13 to 15 inch crowns. While our supply of these is extensive, the indications now are that there will not be sufficient to last until Easter, and those who delay ordering may be disappointed in not having orders filled.

THE IDEAL PINK CARNATION Genevieve Lord

Fills the bill. The ladies declare it is just right in color. We claim it has the best stem of any Carnation. That it will rank very near the top in size. That its odor is very sweet. That it is the most profitable Carnation we ever grew. That it has an individuality all its own. Customers recognize it at a glance. There is not a great deal left that is wanting in this variety. If you want to make money, plant it. But don't delay, for stock for delivery prior to March 20 is all sold. It is an easy, rapid grower, however, and the April and May deliveries will make large, fine plants. Some of the finest plants we have are from cuttings from sand planted in the field June 1st. Remember all sold until March 20th. If you wait too long the chances are that we will be sold out of stock. Make yourself safe by ordering at once.

TRADE BRISK, STOCK GOOD AND PRICES FAIR.—EXCELLENT SWEET PEAS.—AN EEL MAKES TROUBLE.—NOTES.

Business is fair and stock is good but prices are about the same as last week. The higher grades of roses and carnations bring excellent returns. J. H. Small & Sons are handling as fine Blanche Ferry sweet peas as have been seen in Washington for some time, grown by Theo. Deitrich.

A. Gude & Bro. have had quite a time with their water supply. After spending some time trying to find the cause of the loss of flow they found a large eel jammed in the valve. They are shipping quantities of cut flowers to Florida and are getting good reports. P. G.

TRADE HOLDS GOOD.—MUCH FUNERAL WORK.—LUDWIGS MAKE GOOD DISPLAYS.—BUSINESS AT LIBERTY MARKET.—NOTES.

The Lenten season is now here and naturally there is a falling off of orders for social affairs but funeral work is on the increase and prices still hold firm. At Allegheny market they are making fine displays of cut flowers, particularly in the stocks of the two Ludwig firms, who have many varieties of choice carnations. The market supplies not only the people of Allegheny but many Pittsburgers and even East End people go there to make their floral purchases.

The East Liberty market experienced quite a boom during the three weeks of the food fair. Mr. Welfer and Chas. T. Seibert, who have stands in the market, express themselves well satisfied with the business.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club, March 8, arrangements were made for a "smoker."

Superintendent Wm. Falconer, of Schenley Park, has returned from his western trip.

Oscar Hyde lost a greenhouse and its contents by fire during the cold spell.

G. O.

KINGSTON, N. Y.—John McVey has opened a branch store on Broadway.

RICHMOND, IND.—Mrs. E. T. Grave says that because she will double her range of glass this year she is buying a great many carnation cuttings, but that she will use, as far as possible, cuttings from her own stock.

Newport, R. I.

The Newport Horticultural Society has voted to hold a rose and strawberry show in June.

Richard Gardner, formerly manager with the Newport Nursery Co., is now employed growing plants for the estate of J. J. Van Alan.

A fire company known as Number Three, organized for the better protection of summer residences, its member being nearly all gardeners, gave a house warming recently in the new building given to them by the city. Among those present were many prominent citizens, including the mayor. At the conclusion of the speechmaking the guests were served with a bountiful supper. The menu was as follows:

Tomato Pisque a la Number Threes.
Roast Turkey from Coggeshal Avenue Farms.
Mashed Potatoes from Bellevue Avenue Fire Hydrants.
Stewed Onions a la Esplanade.
Turkey Stuffing from Lime Rock.
Ice Cream with Quick Hitch Up Forms.
R. I. Avenue Hot Coffee.
Cigars of Cliff Brand.

The roster of Number Three Hose Company is as follows:

Foreman—John T. Allan.

Assistant Foreman—B. M. Anthony.

Hosemen—Andrew S. Meikle, William H. Maher, John H. Murphy, Thomas J. Murphy, William A. Maher, Charles Burns, Patrick Reynolds, John H. Glynn, Henry C. Hogan and James Porter.

Substitutes—John Hammond and Alexander Frazer.

Driver—Daniel J. Congdon. J. J. B.

DUNKIRK, N. Y.—Th. F. Vander Meulen has just completed new houses which give him 6,000 feet of glass.

Port Chester, N. Y.

The Westchester County Gardeners' Association held its monthly meeting on February 24, President Shore presiding. Messrs. Fremd, Williamson, Anderson, Smith and Duncan were appointed executive committee for the present year. There was an excellent display of carnations on the tables. Geo. M. Hay captured the prize for the best collection, in which he had some sixty blooms in ten varieties. Mr. Hay was also first for best eighteen and Wm. Anderson second. Joseph Dexter was awarded a special prize for his collection of California varieties. These were certainly a revelation in carnation growing. For size of flower and rigidity of stem they have seldom been equalled in this section. The varieties were Iris Miller, Grace Runyon, Leslie Paul, Helen Dean and John Carbone. Very noticeable was the large vase of Olympia exhibited by John N. May.

Robert Williamson exhibited a collection of vegetables. Other exhibits included cinerarias by John Fraser, anthurium seedlings by Geo. Draycott and carnation seedlings by John Harper. The prizes included some beautiful glass vases, the gifts of Frederick Fremd, of Rye Nurseries.

This was the first of a series of monthly exhibitions and if the good work goes on every meeting will prove a gala night for the gardeners of Westchester county.

The F. R. Pierson Co. has offered $15 in prizes for Chrysanthemum Col. D. Appleton and Messrs. Peter Henderson & Co. have offered $10 in prizes for six distinct ostrich plume and six distinct anemone flowered chrysanthemums at the fall exhibition.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SPORTS.

In our issue of January 13 comment was made on a chrysanthemum sport as follows:

Wm. Gallagher, of Little Rock, Ark., has sent us an excellent chrysanthemum bloom (for this season of the year) claiming that it is a sport of Wm. H. Chadwick. This hardly seems possible, the latter being a distinctly incurved variety, while Mr. Gallagher's flower is as distinctly reflexed. The flower, however, is good and of a pale pinkish tint.

This awakened some interest in the subject of sports generally, but very little information of a definite character was forthcoming. Our correspondent "E. L." wrote us in the matter, and his observations, herewith reproduced, appeared February 3:

I note what is said on page 698 in the AMERICAN FLORIST of January 13 respecting a sport from a chrysanthemum, and that you take exception to the statement of the owner thereof, namely, William Gallagher, Little Rock, Ark., that it is a sport from the variety W. H. Chadwick. Your comment to the effect—"This hardly seems possible, the latter being a distinctly incurved variety, while Mr. Gallagher's flower is as distinctly reflexed"—is likely to provoke further observations, for instance: It is supposed from said editorial comment that Dame Nature when in a sportive mood confines her predisposition to variation to change in color of the flower only, but such may not always prove to be the case. There is no known reason why she should not change the form as well as the color of the flower. We have many evidences where dwarf varieties in growth have been secured from different cultivated plants, and also some with larger or stronger growing tendencies, as Climbing Kaiserin, among roses, and drooping or the so-called weeping, among deciduous trees and evergreens. All these, and others which might be mentioned, being facts, then why should not the statement as made by Mr. Gallagher be true?

The attention of some chrysanthemum experts was then directed to the question, and a number of these kindly replied, the following being a fair representation of the opinions submitted:

I doubt if there could be a change in form. I have never seen any other than a color sport but I have noticed some of the incurved of the Queen of England type become reflexed when grown as specimen plants, but stock from these would again produce properly incurved blooms when grown to a single stem.

T. D. HATFIELD.

I am unable at present to recall any case in which a chrysanthemum has sported in color and at the same time taken on a decided change of form. The variety Wm. H. Chadwick, from certain buds and under certain cultural conditions, loses very much of its incurved form and might possibly be almost entirely reflexed. The chrysanthemum Harry Balsley, which is ordinarily a very ragged bloom, assumed with us one season an almost perfectly regular incurved form through a whole bench, so much so that we had considerable difficulty in convincing the originator, Elmer D. Smith, that it was not some other variety. We afterward failed to get another such flower, however, from the same stock. It would be a rash man who would say that Mr. Gallagher's variety is not a true sport; but if, under other conditions, the variety uniformly retains a decidedly reflexed form, there will be room for an honest doubt.

W. N. RUDD.

Referring to the statement by Mr. Gallagher and the comment by "E. L.," the argument brought forward does not establish the fact that the shape or form of the flower of any plant is materially changed, notwithstanding the form and growth of the plant may be and often is radically changed. For instance, the flowers of the Climbing Kaiserin Augusta Victoria are practically the same form as those on the original plant. The flowers of any drooping or so called weeping trees are invariably similar to those of the original plant from which the sport sprang, at least this has been the case in those I have had the opportunity to examine closely. In my experience with chrysanthemum sports, of which I have had several at various times, the most marked difference I have ever seen is in the variety Chempwec, a sport from Silver Cloud. The parent is a flesh shaded salmon, loose graceful reflexed, the lower petals falling nearly back to the stem. Chempwec is a bright golden yellow reflexed but not as pronounced as its parent, though I hardly think anyone could decide that its form was distinct enough to class as anything but a reflexed, the only difference being that the petals appear to have a little more substance, consequently stand a little firmer than in the parent, and the stem is somewhat stiffer also. In Mr. Gallagher's sport the form of the flower is distinctly changed; this being the first instance of which I can remember, it would be very interesting if any of your readers could give us any account of any chrysanthemum having sported in this way in the past.

JOHN N. MAY.

It should be noted that none of the foregoing affords much light as to sports the flowers of which differ in form, decidedly and permanently, from those of the parent plants. We have carefully examined the literature of chrysanthemum sports at hand, but so far have been unable to locate a single case in which the flowers changed to this extent, although it has been frequently noted that the character of the plant as to vigor may be changed in sports. Exact information on the subject would be of some value to growers and we shall therefore be pleased to learn of any additional facts which may have come to the notice of others.

VIOLETS.

TROUBLE WITH MARIE LOUISE.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I send you under separate cover some plants of Marie Louise violet and a portion of the soil in which they were growing, hoping you may be able to assist me in determining what is wrong. The soil is composed of well rotted sod and about one-third good, clean cow manure and is the same as we use for roses and carnations with splendid success. It was heated thoroughly with live steam to a temperature of 200°, as last year we had an idea that eel worms might have caused the mischief, having found some galls on the roots. We planted young stock, which had every appearance of being healthy, (having been rooted in fresh sand and then potted in sterilized soil) into solid beds, eight inches of soil, well drained with cobble stones underneath a layer of ashes, early in June. They grew fairly well until the latter part of September; since then they have been going from bad to worse and now are in the condition of samples. The sash was kept on the house all summer but our arrangement of ventilation allows us to open every other sash on the back of the house about three and one-half feet, and we put on very slight shading. The plants have had good care, with a night temperature of 40° since we started firing and plenty of ventilation during the daytime. The house is new, with cement walls and dry atmosphere, in fact every advantage that we could give the plants, and still year after year they act the same way. We succeed splendidly with Princess of Wales planted in the same soil and same house. We have purchased new stock each year as healthy as we could find and from growers that have been successful with them. You may find slight traces of aphis on the sample but this has come on during the last ten days, as we have thrown out one-half of the violets, running that part of the house warmer for carnation cuttings. We have been determined in our efforts to grow double violets and have spared no expense during the past three years, but we are nearly discouraged now and come to you with our hard luck story. We have lost 3,000 plants this year. IGNORAMUS.

The diseased violet plants of your correspondent, "Ignoramus," have been received and carefully examined. We find that the roots of all the specimens are well developed and do not appear to be at all diseased, which indicates that the soil conditions are good. We find no evidence whatever of any fungus and therefore are at a loss to account for the peculiar development, except on the theory that the primary injury was produced by black aphis several months ago. Some of these insects are still present on the plants, and it takes very few of them to check growth in such a way as to cause the plants to continue to produce curled, malformed leaves. At any other season of the year such injury might not have been so appreciable, but during the winter, when vitality is at a low ebb, it does not require much of a check to start a violet plant going the wrong way. It is probable that as warm weather comes on the plants in question will show recovery, but it must be remembered that if they are not kept free from aphis they will not prove of much value.

B. T. GALLOWAY.

A NEW VIOLET PEST.

The United States Department of Agriculture, in bulletin No. 22 of the new series, gives the following data upon the authority of D. W. Coquillett:

In Europe, two different species of cecidomyia attack cultivated and wild violets—the one, Cecidomyia violœ of Franz Löw, dwarfing the entire plant and causing it to assume the form of a rosette through the working of the larvæ at the bases of the short sessile leaves; the second species, the Cecidomyia affinis of Kieffer, folds and distorts the young leaves and unopened blossoms. It is somewhat curious that, although sweet violets have been somewhat extensively cultivated in this country for many years past, yet up to the year 1896 no complaint had been made of any cecidomyian attacking either these or any of the many wild species of violets which occur in almost every locality in this country.

A NEW VIOLET PEST.—Diplos's violicola. A, female fly; B female antennal joints; C, male genitalia; D, larva; E, breastbone of larva.

On October 5 of the above mentioned year Mr. P. H. Dorsett, of this department, brought to this office several leaves of sweet violets from the vicinity of Washington, D. C., each of which was folded up in such a manner as to bring the upper surfaces together; the leaves were much wrinkled and distorted, and each contained from one to three whitish, or more or less yellow, legless larvæ. Thirty-one adults were bred from these on the 23rd and 24th of the same month. Mr. Dorsett has published a brief account of this pest, which is known among florists as the "gall fly", together with figures of the distorted leaves. More recently Dr. Howard, by request of a correspondent, has published a brief account of this insect in a current publication.

Plants of violets infested with what is evidently this same pest were received July 17, 1896, from Mr. W. A. Hammond, of Richmond, Va., with the statement that these insects had been quite destructive to his violets during the months of June and July for two years past. The attack was principally directed against the youngest leaves, which in a short time turned brown and dropped from the plant. As many as a dozen larvæ were sometimes found within a single folded leaf.

September 9 and 21, 1897, larvæ of this species were also received at this office from Mr. W. Davison, of Nyack, N. Y.; and on August 31, 1898, others were received from Mrs. J. H. Marbacher, Tappan, N. Y. The latter stated in an accompanying letter that her violet plants were literally covered with these larvæ in the folded and distorted leaves. From those received, three adults issued on the 9th of the following month.

Under date of October 12, 1898, Mrs. J. Sampson, Gordonsville, Va., wrote that a "gall fly," presumably this species, had been injurious to violets grown in beds during the early spring of that year, but all the intested leaves had been picked off and destroyed and no specimens were available at the date of writing.

Writing under date of January 27, 1899, Mr. W. V. V. Powers, Cornwall-on-Hudson, N. Y., stated that he had noticed species about three years previously, and had been troubled with it more or less ever since. He was not certain that there was any connection between the appearance of this pest and the introduction of the so-called California violet, but stated that they both appeared the same year in his vicinity.

In a letter published December 3, 1898, Mr. Davison, mentioned above as having sent specimens of this insect to us for identification, states that his experience with this maggot convinces him that it is the worst enemy the violet grower has to contend with, owing to the extreme difficulty experienced in its destruction without injury to the plant. He says:

It secretes itself in the crown of the plant; the leaves as they come up are tightly curled, and when unfolded there will be found six to eight small white maggots. On some plants you can pick off the young leaves until the crown is bare. Loosing the crown will cause the side crowns and runners to start; the latter must be taken off. The maggot seldom appears on the side crowns, giving them a chance to make good plants. The flowers will not be as large as crown flowers.

I find when the maggot leaves the plant it goes into the ground. As proof of this, I placed forty or fifty of the leaves containing maggots on a pot filled with soil, covering the soil with glass, expecting in this way to see the maggot in the chrysalis state. At the end of two weeks, wanting to send some specimens to the Division of Entomology at Washington, I removed the glass, but the maggots were gone. I turned the soil out of the pot and found maggots all through the soil in the same state in which they left the leaves.

He also expressed the belief that the fly was introduced with manure purchased from a person who collected garbage, as no flies were seen in his greenhouse previous to the introduction of this manure, and the maggots were observed only where it was used. Further experience is necessary to confirm this opinion.

The subject of the so-called gall flies which affect violets has also received mention by Mr. B. T. Galloway in his recently published handbook on violet culture, under the heading "Gall Fly Maggots." The nature of the injury is there described and remedies suggested. This account also includes a half-tone illustration reproduced from a photograph showing the twisted leaves of violets.

This insect, although belonging to the same family as the two species already referred to as also attacking violets in Europe, pertains to a different genus; and while its work is very similar to that produced by the Cecidomyia affinis, yet a comparison of the adult gall-gnats with the description of the last mentioned species reveals the fact that the two are very distinct, not only differing in the venation but also in the structure of the antennæ. Following is a description of our species:

Antennæ in both sexes three-fifths as long as the body, 14-jointed (2x12), the first two joints subequal in length, each as broad as long; third joint more than twice as long as the second and more slender, other joints becoming successively slightly shorter except the last one; joints three to thirteen each slightly constricted near the middle, narrowed at the apex into a petiole, which, on the thirteenth joint, is almost one-half as long as the thickened portion of the joint; two whorls of bristly hairs on each of the joints from three to thirteen inclusive, one near the base, the other near the apex of the thickened portion. Head and thorax black, the hairs yellow; antennæ and legs brown, halteres yellowish, scutellum and abdomen bright yellow, the hairs also yellow. Wings gray, strongly iridescent, thickly covered with short hairs; first vein extending rather close to the costa, terminating slightly before the middle of the wing; third vein terminating distinctly below the extreme tip of the wing, its basal portion, connecting with the first vein, imperceptible; fifth vein forked near the middle, the anterior fork terminating midway between the apex of the posterior fork and of the tip of the third vein. Length 1.25mm to 1.50mm.

The remedy generally employed against this pest consists in picking off and destroying the infested leaves. It is also amenable to the hydrocyanic acid gas remedy, as detailed in Circular No. 37, 2d Ser., of this Division and undoubtedly also to the buhach insect powder, recommended as a specific against the "gall flies" on roses. Tobacco, however, can not be safely used to any great extent on violets grown under glass.

BI-FLOWERED VIOLETS.

Three violets on one stem do not often appear, neither are two blooms on one stem of frequent occurrence, even in gardens where violet culture is a feature. At Fifield, however, Mr. R. Cawte grows Marie Louise violets so well that, though he has several frames full of plants, the majority of the flower stems bear two blooms, each with a long stalk, while not infrequently three blooms are borne on one stem, each bloom of full size, fine shape, color and fragrance. Exceptional vigor seems to be the cause of such production, but if Mr. Cawte could fix this variation from the normal form he would be quite justified in calling it a bi-flowered strain. In most cases the peduncle or flower stem branches quite low down, so that the two or three flowers, as the case may be, have each a stem three or more inches in length, and can be used individually or collectively. Judging from the number of flowers Mr. Cawte sent us a few days ago, his violets flower with the utmost freedom, and by virtue of the branched flower stems the crop is about doubled.—The Gardeners' Magazine.

TOPPING YOUNG PLANTS.

Do not be in too big a hurry to top the young plants. Let them get high enough to have at least four good joints between the top of the pot and the point where the plant is topped; in strong growing varieties this can be increased to five such joints. Some growers do not think this is the proper method and some go so far as to pinch the top out and leave only the two lower leaves on the young plant, so that it breaks growth right at the bottom. There is no particular objection to this method beyond the fact that it makes a solid mass of growth down to the ground and there is much danger of getting the soil into the bottom growth of the plant; this may not be a direct cause of stem rot but it certainly aids and abets it. This very low topping also causes a check to growth by taking practically all of the foliage away from the plant; this may not be so perceptible as some other checks but is none the less undesirable.

In topping the young plants I find that to allow them to grow until the axillary buds at the base of the leaves are beginning to push out into growth is a decided advantage, as they are then ready to push forward and take the place of the top that you cut out, keeping up the proper root development. Although this is another point on which growers differ, it seems reasonable that in topping the young plants a good sharp knife should be used and the top cut out instead of pulled out, as a clean surface heals up much more quickly than a ragged edge.

There is always the temptation to take the top of a new variety as soon as it is large enough to form a cutting that may be rooted and thus increase the stock of the variety, but this is often the cause of a complete failure with a novelty which might have been a success had the purchaser paid some attention to the natural laws of plant life, in handling the young stock. It is far better to have twenty-five good plants of a novelty for trial next winter than to have twice or three times that many poor ones.

It is not absolutely necessary that a carnation be topped before it is planted in the field, as some of the finest plants I ever had made no sign of growth at the axillary buds and were allowed to grow three weeks in the field before topping, which ran them to about the first of May, and yet they made plenty of side shoots before August and planting-in time.

There are exceptions to all rules and the exception to this rule of waiting until side growth starts before topping comes when a variety runs so high that it is in danger of falling over before the side growths start, and thus making a deformed plant; then the plant should be topped at such a height that it will not fall. This is, however, an exceptional case. Where the plants are grown properly and not forced into a weak, soft growth there is little danger of their getting top-heavy. ALBERT M. HERR.

Flowering Shrub Shoots Indoors.

The kinds of shrubs to select for flowering indoors are those which bloom quite early under natural conditions. There is but little use to try summer bloomers or even those of late spring. The following list will give an idea of the kinds meant: Common alder, dwarf apple, common hazel, Deutzia gracilis, Daphne Mezereum, goat willow, amelanchier, Cornus Mas, forsythia, Lonicera fragrantissima, Persian lilac and Jasminum nudiflorum.

These have all been tried at various times and have been found to force well. I use the term "force," though all that is required is to place them in a greenhouse to start the flower buds. Lengths of about a foot are a good size to use. The Cornus Mas, Daphne Mezereum, alder, hazel and Jasminum nudiflorum are quite impatient to flower, and it will be but a few days after being taken inside before the buds will be seen to expand. The golden bell, forsythia, should also be included.

The Cornus Mas, which is also known as Cornelian cherry, because of the large fruit it bears later, is very pretty when in flower. The blossoms are small, but there are such numbers of them ranged along the branches that quite a display is made. Outside this usually leads all shrubs, excepting the Daphne Mezereum. This is the first and its flowers, white on some plants, pink on others, though small, are very fragrant.

When grown in pots in a greenhouse the Carolina jasmine, Gelsemium sempervirens, blooms early, and it is a most lovely vine, as all visitors to the south in early spring are aware. But though the plants live out with us they are usully somewhat injured in winter, so that I have never seen one flower out of doors. If a bundle of shoots could be had from the southern forests, no doubt they would bloom nicely.

I have never been very successful with branches of fruit trees, such as apple, cherry, plum and pear. It may be that if laid on damp moss in a dark place for a while and brought to light later, when the buds were somewhat advanced, success would be attained. The same may be true of Spiræa Reevesii, S. Van. Houtteii, lilacs, snowballs and late spring shrubs, which certainly do not succeed in bottles of water as well as the other sorts named.

A friend of mine had a few dwarf apples last season, and these made an uncommonly beautiful showing when in bloom. They were a mass of flowers in a short time after given heat. These dwarf apples are on the Paradise stock, which dwarfs them, and then the potting increases the tendency to early flowering. These should make good selling plants for Easter. An apple in full flower would be pretty, besides the sweet odor of the flower, and then what of the fruit to follow? JOSEPH MEEHAN.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

Without doubt this is one of the most useful greenhouse decorative plants that has been introduced for half a century. We have no plant that will last in bloom for such a length of time in the greenhouse. Plants that were in blossom in September are still in good condition and there is no telling how long they will blossom if they only are well looked after.

This begonia is a hybrid between B. Socotrana and B. Dregii. The cultivation of this hybrid is made easier by knowing something about both parents; therefore I will give a short description of each plant. B. Socotrana was sent to the Royal Gardens, Kew, twenty years ago from the Island of Socotra. As soon as it blossomed great things were expected from it in the way of hybridization. Very soon Veitch & Sons took it in hand and crossed it with several other species of begonia and raised several winter flowering hybrids. M. Lemoine also raised some hybrids and he kept on working until he raised one of the finest hybrid begonias in existence, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

B. Socotrana has a perennial rootstock formed of numerous fleshy buds clustered around the base of the plant. It has a slender stem from six to twelve inches long which dies down annually. The leaves are orbicular, four to ten inches across and the petiole four to six inches long. The flowers, which are of a bright rose color, are produced in winter on erect, slender axillary peduncles. The other parent, B. Dregii, is not quite as showy. It is a native of South Africa and was introduced into cultivation about 1840. Its flowers are white, about one inch across and produced in axillary cymes. The leaves are oblique, green color, thin in texture and the succulent stem is about one foot high. The rootstock is fleshy. The descriptions are dry reading but this new hybrid partakes of some of the characters of both parents and the principal thing I want to point out is that the rootstock of B. Dregii is fleshy, and in good sized plants of B. Gloire de Lorraine it will be found that it has also a fleshy rootstock. Therefore, by cutting the plants well back the undeveloped buds on this fleshy rootstock begin to grow and those growths, when they are an inch or two long, make the very best cuttings.

If any one wants to grow large plants for next Christmas, the plants would have best been cut back during February. Remember to keep the plants in the warmest house after cutting them back. In a week or two there will be plenty of cuttings to take. With a good propagating bed they root very easily, and in about two weeks they are ready for thumb pots. They ought to be kept growing right along in the warmest house and never given a check by neglect of potting when they require it. During the early spring months on bright mornings a slight syringing overhead does the small plants good, but whenever the weather gets warm and the fires are stopped the syringing must be done away with. After this the watering must be done very carefully as too much moisture on the benches or plants will produce a very disastrous fungus disease. During the summer a slightly shaded warm house is the best and in autumn they may be grown cooler and given plenty of sunlight. When the plants begin to show flowers they ought to be neatly staked out. The staking takes a good deal of time but it pays in the end.

I have had plants grown along from one cutting in each pot that was struck last spring and when they were staked out neatly measured two feet across at Christmas. I tell this because some writers advise to place three or four plants in a pot. The soil I use is a rough fibrous loam, leaf-mold, sand and sheep manure. After their final shift, when the plants are well rooted into the soil in the pots, weak liquid manure can be given about once in every two weeks. Plants can be raised from the leaves but as this begonia is so plentiful now this method of propagating is too slow, as the leaves take too long to develop buds. ROBERT CAMERON.

Helpful Reminders.

One of the most popular hardy perennials for June blooms is the oriental poppy and if you started some in the fall they should have immediate attention on account of their habit of forming a long tap root. If left in flats or a bed, it is almost impossible to shift them without a large percentage of loss, but if put into 3-inch pots in a cool house now, the roots will curl up and form a compact ball for setting out May 1.

If you did not pot Lilium auratum and L. speciosum and pack in a cool pit in the fall, you can start some now. They are not only valuable for summer cut flowers but plants just started are good for bedding out. In potting these bulbs, plunge them deep enough to allow the roots from the top of the bulbs to grow into the soil as these are essential to a well developed stem and flower. Many persons prefer paying 25 cents for a potted plant in May to taking chances on a bulb at 10 cents in the fall; besides many people are inclined to have some gardening done in May who will not enthuse in autumn.

If you use Japanese maples for spring and summer decorations, they should be brought into warmth now. They are beautiful and unique and a decorator should not be without a few.

Cobœa scandens should be sown now and do not forget that unless the seeds are placed on edge they are almost sure to decay.

Agathæas should be shifted and encouraged now for a good bloom at Easter and the balance of spring.

Most of the annuals for early spring bedding should be sown by the middle of March. This is a trifle early for nasturtiums, as they grow so rapidly and become too large.

Too few gardeners make use of the salpiglossis; it is a flower that attracts more than usual attention and is seldom seen. It is not valuable for cutting because of the odor, but in the garden this is never noticed.

In selecting aster seed one cannot be too careful to have the varieties which give the most perfect individual flowers and it pays to disbud them the same as chrysanthemums.

For veranda boxes or vases the vinca is a valuable vine and nursery-grown honeysuckles started in pots now make very desirable vines for boxes. C. B. W.

Notes of a Western Traveler.

The eastern tourist finds many things floricultural out here in contrast to his accustomed environments. Violets, for instance, which are far from plentiful in the eastern cities in February, may be obtained in San Francisco by wagon loads. It is the same with callas. Acacias are in every florist's window and are handled in quantities. With the whole outdoors almost one great conservatory one would not expect a great sale for florists' stock, but this is not the case. Roses and carnations are in constant demand and the wholesale prices are higher than they are in the east.

At Menlo Park, Sidney Clack runs the greenhouses of the Sunset Seed and Plant Co. He grows roses, carnations, violets and bulbous stock, particularly lily of the valley, in large quantities and produces a great deal of smilax out of doors. M. Lynch, a neighbor of Mr. Clack, has quite a large place and has been growing sweet peas extensively but thinks that roses and carnations pay better and will devote his glass to them hereafter.

E. W. McLellan, the wholesaler and commission man, has a model establishment of more than 100,000 feet of glass at Burlingame and states that he will soon begin the erection of a range of 50,000 feet additional. The plant, which has all been erected within three years, is heated by crude petroleum, the only system of its kind on the coast.

The establishment of John H. Sievers & Co., in San Francisco, is the Pacific coast home of the carnation. None of the eastern varieties are grown here, however, but for size, strength of growth and variety of color, the Sievers seedlings are remarkable. Ethel Crocker originated here.

Ferrari Bros. have a big place and grow general stock. At present they are completing a range of new houses. Fick & Faber make a specialty of carnations and have all the varieties well known in the east.

Leon Ronnean has upward to 30,000 feet of glass devoted to stock for the wholesale market and L. Chiappari has 60,000 feet for the same purpose. He has excellent kentias.

Edward Scheverin has a new seedling carnation, named for himself, which appears to have merit.

A. Pottet has a well stocked place and some particularly fine heliotropes.

MONTHLY MEETING OF THE CLUB SLIMLY ATTENDED.—GOOD PROGRESS IN CONVENTION MATTERS.—A FINE PREMIUM LIST IN SIGHT.—DOINGS AT THE MEETING.—TRADE QUIET.—LOW GRADE STOCK MOVES SLOWLY.—CHANGES AMONG THE WHOLESALERS —VARIOUS NOTES OF INTEREST.

The attendance at the monthly meeting of the Florists' Club, on the evening of March 12, was rather light but the proceedings were sufficiently animated to well repay those who were present. President O'Mara was unable to attend, owing to a severe attack of tonsilitis, so Vice-President Herrington was called upon to fill the chair, which he did in a most acceptable manner. The principal business of the evening was reports of the various sub-committees on the different features of the coming S. A. F. convention. All reported substantial progress and encouragement from every direction. The exhibition committee's plans, as usual, received the greatest attention and the demand for gold medals, cash prizes and other trifles continues unabated. If appropriations were made according to the views of every adviser the schedule would require the financial backing of the sugar trust or some similar institution. However, it will soon be in shape to publish and that it will be as liberal and comprehensive as could reasonably be asked, cannot be doubted.

Max Richter, of New Springville, S. I., sent, via Alderman Morris, a bunch of excellent Princess of Wales violets and a special committee awarded honorable mention therefor. Mr. Atkins mentioned that an invitation to Jamestown, N. Y., for the convention of 1901 would be extended to the S. A. F. at the New York meeting. A vote of thanks was extended to the Buffalo Florists' Club for hospitalities extended to members of the New York club on the occasion of the recent carnation meeting. It was announced that a meeting of all committees on convention matters would be called for Monday evening, March 26.

Trade in general is quiet among the cut flower men but not more so than could reasonably be expected in Lent. The weather has been cold, which does not help the situation any, as the possibilities of street business are thus curtailed and the best existing means of disposing of the surplus lower grade stock is cut off. The supply coming in is limited, considering the season, and this is fortunate under the circumstances. Carnations continue to find a ready outlet for all of good quality that are sent in. In roses the best sale is found for the highest grade but there is a determined attack on prices in progress continually which requires backbone and alertness on the part of the wholesalers to resist.

The firm of Blauvelt & Guttman has dissolved. A. J. Guttman, as successor, will, on April 1, take Koffman's present location on Thirtieth street. J. H. Blauvelt has opened in the place just vacated by J. J. Perkins & Co.

J. N. May went to Holyoke last week to lecture on rose culture at the Young Men's Christian Association.

John Finck, for many years employed in the establishment of Henry Butler on Broadway, is dead.

Peter MacDonald has been appointed to a position of responsibility in the New York park department.

The New York Cut Flower Company may locate at the corner of Broadway and Thirtieth street.

TRADE IS QUIET.—NO GREAT OVER-SUPPLY.—PREVAILING PRICES.—EASTER PROSPECTS.—INDICATIONS ARE FOR MANY LILIES.—CRIMSON RAMBLERS WILL BE FINE.—GOOD SHOW ASSURED FOR NEXT WEEK.—ANTICIPATIONS OF ROSE SHOW.—NOTES.

Things are quiet at present, the weather being dark and blustery. There is no great overstock accumulating, however, nothing seeming to be in full crop. Roses are a little more plentiful and are being shaded a trifle in price; $4 to $5 per dozen is now being asked for the best Beauties, $8 to $10 per hundred for the best teas, with the emphasis on the "8." Carnations bring $1.50 to $2 for the quick movers and $3 to $4 for the fancies. Violets are plentiful at 50 cents to $1 for the doubles and 25 cents to 50 cents for the singles. Bulbous stock is going slowly at from $3 to $4 per hundred. Daffodils in pots have begun to sell well; in fact all blooming stock, and there is just now a fine assortment to be had, is moving right along.

All eyes are, of course, turned to Easter, now drawing near, and orders are being placed for select and scarce stock. In fact everything of this character has already been ordered. Of Easter lilies I think it may be said that there will be enough to go around, as with few exceptions the crops are all good and ninety per cent will be ready for Easter delivery. The various lots are in different stages of development, some with buds so far advanced that they can be counted, others having the buds just above the leaves and still others with buds far enough up to begin to turn down, and all are said to be just right. They probably will all appear in fair condition for the market when the time arrives, but as to which are just right now is a question. Crimson Ramblers are going to be fine, for well budded plants are to be seen in several places in this city. The clusters of buds are now formed well above the foliage so that each bud may be counted. They are thought in this condition to be about right and likely to be at their best for the Easter trade. Hydrangeas are now seen with buds from two to three inches across and promise to be very fine.

The exhibition of the horticultural society next week should be a good one. The premium list offers a chance to growers and dealers alike to make a fine display and when it is considered that all prizes won are to be paid in spot cash the day the show closes there would appear to be no good excuse for other than a clean sweep. The American Rose Company's prize of $50 for the best seedling carnation should bring out something fine in this line.

The great rose show in New York is being looked forward to with pleasure by the craft in this city and a goodly representation will no doubt be present. There will also be quite a few exhibits from this vicinity.

A. D. Hoag will shortly take possession of the basement store, 1631 Chestnut street.

Robt. Craig is out west on a business trip.

MR. WARD LECTURES ON THE CARNATION.—GOOD EXHIBITS ON VIEW.—SOME AWARDS.—BUSINESS UNEXPECTEDLY LIVELY.—CARNATIONS IN EXTRA DEMAND.—SOME SPECIALTIES.—PROSPECTS FOR A PARTY TO THE ROSE SHOW.—CASES OF THE GRIPPE.—VARIOUS NOTES.

C. W. Ward's lecture on carnations and their development attracted a very large and attentive audience to Horticultural Hall, on Saturday, March 10. The choicest display of carnations ever seen in Boston adorned the exhibition table and the varieties displayed thereon were frequently referred to by the speaker in the course of his remarks. Awards were made by the Massachusetts Horticultural society, to Gov. Roosevelt a certificate of merit, to G. H. Crane a certificate of merit and to No. 666 honorable mention. The Marquis and Olympia, both of which were shown in superb form, had been before the society on a former occasion and duly recognized. Genevieve Lord from H. Weber & Sons, Maceo, Bradt and a large number of seedlings from C. W. Ward, seedlings from Patten & Co. and May Whitney and Eleanor Ames from D. Carmichael were among the other notable exhibits. In the lower hall James Comley held forth with a fine display of violets, lilacs, camellias and promiscuous flowers, N. F. Comley showed new violet Sunnyside, a pale colored cross between California and Lady Hume Campbell, and Oakes Ames and H. A. Wheeler had some nice orchids, a certificate of merit being awarded to Mr. Ames for Cattleya intermedia var. alba. James Anderson showed hyacinths and other spring flowers.

Business has been excellent during the past week. The weather, although pleasant, has not been sufficiently warm to precipitate an oversupply and the demand from store and street, local and country, has been unexpectedly lively, much shipping having been going on in the wholesale stores. Carnations sell out in good shape, white ones being decidedly short as compared with the call for them, consequently carnation values are all right generally. Among the fancy things now coming in are splendid acacia, which is coming to Geo. A. Sutherland in fair supply, and forced May flowers, of which Welch Bros. are receiving regular shipments. Lilies are not yet plentiful but those that are in are generally of good quality and sell for prices not far short of Easter quotations.

It is probable that a good sized delegation from this neighborhood will attend the rose society's exhibition in New York during the last week in March. The regular spring show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society takes place in Boston the previous week and by the time it is over the pilgrims who went to Buffalo from here expect to have managed to unload all the Canadian silver quarters that came into their possession while in that border town.

A number of cases of the grippe have occurred among the local fraternity during the past week. Among the victims are M. H. Norton, Wm. Edgar and David Welch.

Edward Hatch mourns the loss of a favorite sister, who died very suddenly last week. The funeral took place on Saturday from their residence on Commonwealth avenue.

Among the recent visitors are Messrs. C. W. Ward and Paul Dailledouze, who spent a few days in calling upon a number of the local carnation growers.

Jos. A. Dirwanger, Jr., passed through here Saturday on his way home to Portland after another long trip to Manila in the service of Uncle Sam.

Thos. Waters is now on the road representing Geo. A. Sutherland among the New Englaud towns, and reports good business.

Wm. F. Molloy, for many years in the employ of E. M. Wood & Co. as salesman, has resigned his position.

Recent visitors: Carl Jurgens and Carl Jurgens, Jr., of Newport, R. I.

ANOTHER BUSY WEEK.—STOCK INCREASING IN QUANTITY.—QUALITIES SOMEWHAT IMPROVED.—EXTRA DEMAND FOR WHITE.—ADOLPH POEHLMANN TO START FOR HIMSELF.—FRIEDMANN TO MAKE AIRSHIPS.—BUYERS FOR THE GARLAND GUTTER.—VARIOUS NOTES OF INTEREST.—VISITORS.

This has been another extra good week in wholesale circles and most of the retailers have had their share of prosperity. Monday was the best day of the week but the following days were large and, although production is on the increase, everything has sold, even several lots of over-ripe roses which growers who have retail stores had held in their own ice boxes for a week or so before consigning them to be worked off at any price the commission man could get. There have been enough of the long Beauties, too many of the short ones but not sufficient supply of the medium lengths. Brides and Bridesmaids have been fairly plentiful but every day has furnished illustrations of the greater profit in growing first-class stock, for the poorer grades always have to wait until the firsts are gone. The principal demand has been for white and carnations have been the principal shortage in that line, commanding an extra price on that account. There have been large quantities of callas and they have sold fairly well; the bulbous stock moved after a fashion. Violets have done slightly better than for some time past because the weather has been such most of the time that the street men could handle anything which the retailers did not want.

At the Florists' Club meeting last evening, March 16, the attendance was large. The principal attraction was the fine display of hyacinths made by Superintendent Stromback, of Lincoln Park, from bulbs produced in the state of Washington. A Hollander present stated the blooms were as good as he had ever seen. They were strong growing varieties, however, and he doubted if similar success could be obtained with such delicate sorts as La Grandesse, Czar Peter, etc. The Chicago Carnation Co. made a fine display of seedling carnations, one remarkably fine variegated, No. 82, making the high score of 88 points. The others were No. 44, scarlet, 86 points; No. 64, variegated, 70 points; Chicod, variegated, 81 points. Wm. Timmie and Wm. Fisher, of Joilet, M. Magnuson, Bowmanville, and Chas. Hughes, city, were elected to membership.

On April 1 the Weiland-Risch Floral Company, of Evanston, will open a Chicago wholesale store at 59 Wabash avenue, street floor. J. P. Risch will be in charge and Robert Northam, now with George Reinberg, will be the salesman. The Evanston range of glass is now turning out considerable quantities of good stock and new houses will be added this season, while all the latest roses and carnations will be planted for next year. This will be the first wholesale house in Chicago upon the street level and the innovation will be watched with interest by the rest of the trade.

Adolph Poehlmann has sold his interest in the Poehlmann Bros.' greenhouses at Morton Grove to his two brothers, John and August, and is planning to invest several thousand dollars in a range of glass upon his own account. Under the new regime John will continue in charge of the salesroom at 53 Wabash avenue while August devotes his energies to the management of the greenhouses. They have had a good season thus far.

O. J. Friedman is about to embark in the manufacture of airships and automobiles according to the declared purposes of the Friedman Automobile Co., which was incorporated at Springfield one day this week. The capital stock is $100,000 and the incorporators are Mr. Friedman, James Rosenthal, a lawyer at 79 Dearborn street, and Walter W. Robinson.

E. R. Sackett, of Fostoria, O., was a visitor this week and invested in a sufficient quantity of Garland's iron gutters to fit out a new 10,000-foot range of rose houses. Eastern growers seem to be taking to the Garland device, for George Wrisley, of Windsor, Conn., has placed an order for 1,000 feet of the Valley Gutter, sufficient for a good sized range.

The Amling establishment looks like business. Space is given to two other dealers and with the advent of George Piepgras, who has a neatly partitioned-off corner, there is no unused room in the big basement.

The St. Louis bowlers have accepted the invitation to come to Chicago for a match game but the date of the contest has not yet been determined.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports a very encouraging sale for mahonia leaves. This is a green which the florists are just beginning to appreciate.

McKellar & Winterson have a large stock of spring bulbs, having taken the entire output of a southern grower, and report good trade.

H. S. Chase, of the Alabama Nursery Co., Huntsville, Ala., has been in town this week and reports heavy spring orders.

Peter Reinberg is forcing some lily of the valley this year and having very fair success.

BUSINESS SLOW EXCEPT IN THE LINE OF FUNERAL WORK.—REPORTS AT THE CLUB MEETING.—THE ELECTION.—MUCH SATISFACTION EXPRESSED.—THE BANQUET AND SPEAKERS.

Business continues to wear a subdued air, though the supply has not yet passed greatly beyond the demand. Funeral work continues strong and the men who depend on it, apparently have escaped Lenten dullness so far.

Reports from the sick members at the club indicate the speedy recovery of Phil Welsh, but there is not much improvement in Mr. Tischinger's case. The report of the show committee was that the carnation exhibition was a success, although the weather hindered the attendance somewhat. Votes of thanks were given to E. Holden for his show of cinerarias, and Mr. Perine for the loan of jars for the show. After receiving proposals for membership from Jos. Hogarth, Robt. M. Kemp, Jno. Wolf and Jno. Wiedey, the club proceeded to the annual election of officers. Robt. Halliday was nominated by F. G. Burger and elected by acclamation, in spite of his protests. N. F. Flitton was chosen vice-president, F. G. Burger, treasurer; Henry Ekas, financial secretary; J. J. Perry, recording secretary and J. L. Wagner, librarian.

After the election, and a very few minutes was sufficient for it, felicitation ran high and all adjourned to the dining hall to partake of one of the most thoroughly satisfactory banquets the club has ever enjoyed. E. A. Seidewitz acted as toastmaster, a position in which all hands acknowledged him to be inimitable. Although the speeches were informal and light in vein, no one failed to express some hopeful or cheerful sentiment and the whole banquet was fairly odorous with the feeling of good-fellowship and the expectation of a prosperous and successful year. From the president-elect, who opened by outlining the work before the club in preparing for the carnation society's convention, to R. Vincent, who was one of the last and who lifted up the veil of the future enough to give a glimpse of a greater convention still in the distance but within sight, all were optimistic and filled with good feeling. It would be impossible to give even a synopsis of the speeches without trespassing upon the rights of other correspondents, but the following members had something to say which was well said: Robt. Halliday, Wm. Christie, N. F. Flitton, Geo. Brown, Fred. G Burger, Wm. McRoberts, Jno. J. Perry, Robt. Graham, Harry Ekas, Wm. Fraser, Thos. Patterson, Chas. L. Seybold, I. H. Moss, Richard Vincent, John Rider, Jno. Wiedey, H. Cleveland and W. Stocksdale.

MORE ABOUT THE CARNATION SHOW.—WHAT THE GROWERS STAGED.—ALL THE NEW SORTS IN EVIDENCE.—BEST FLOWERS EVER SHOWN IN CANADA.—CERTIFICATES NOT YET AWARDED.—MEETING OF THE HORTICULTURAL ASSOCIATION.

The carnation exhibition of March 8, reported on briefly last week, was a great success. The flowers were extra fine and the hall was so crowded at times that it was difficult to get near the tables. Miller & Son, of Bracondale, showed good vases of Lady Van Horne, Lady Roberts, Lady Minto and Jno. Dunlop. F. Dorner & Son, Lafayette, Ind., had a vase of magnificent blooms of G. H. Crane. C. W. Ward, of Cottage Gardens also had very fine flowers of G. H. Crane and Mrs. Bradt. W. J. Palmer & Son, Buffalo, had extra good blooms of Mayor Pingree, and a fine large sport from the same, orange and salmon in color; also a white sport of Daybreak equal to that flower at its best.

J. Gammage had a dark pink seedling called Rosy Morn, and a white named Expectant; also very good vases of Mary Wood, Leslie Paul, Red Bradt and America. C. Scrim, Ottawa, had a vase of Imperial in fine condition, some extra Marie Louise violets and a number of good roses. The most notable thing in the exhibit was a vase of the famous Liberty rose which was superb. Harry Dale, of Brampton, showed good blooms of White Cloud, Armazindy, Glacier, Lily Dean and others. Ewing & McNaughton were on hand with their patent plant boxes, which seemed to be a success, judging from the orders they were taking.

A. M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa., sent a fine vase of Ethel Crocker in splendid condition. Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass., contributed Mrs. T. W. Lawson, in fine shape. R. Witterstaetter, Sedamsville, O., showed Enquirer, which was magnificant in every respect. L. E. Marquisee, of Syracuse, sent a large vase of The Marquis, splendid blooms, in superb condition. This formed, to the visitors, one of the principal attractions of the exhibition. H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., had a fine vase of Genevieve Lord. J. H. Dillon, Bloomsburg, Pa., sent Queen Louise, a pure white flower of fair size and quality.

E. G. Hill & Co.'s principal exhibits were magnificent vases of Olympia and J. Whitcomb Riley, three and one-half-inch blooms. W. Fendley, Brampton, had Wm. Scott in extra fine condition and some exceedingly good violets. Wm. Scott, of Buffalo, had an extra good vase of White Cloud. F. Dicks, London, showed Portia, Eldorado and Daybreak, all good.

J. H. Dunlop had extra good blooms of Mrs. Bradt and General Gomez, and a magnificent vase of twenty-five spikes of Defiance mignonette. J. N. May, Summit, N. J., showed a vase of Olympia, described by the judges as magnificent.

After the carnation meeting a repast was laid in the dining room in honor of the visitors, at which fifty seven sat down, and a pleasant and jovial evening was spent, enlivened with appropriate speeches, toasts, songs and stories, Wm. Scott being awarded the cake for the latter. At a meeting of the Canadian Horticultural Association held the same evening it was arranged that the convention should be held in Montreal the week prior to the S. A. F. convention in New York so that those who wish can take in both. The programme, which will be published later, was arranged. The new Canadian trade journal was promised the support of the Association. S. P.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—THE SECOND CARNATION SHOW.—ENQUIRER CAPTURES THE GOLD MEDAL.—MANY CERTIFICATES AWARDED.—SOME GOOD BLOOMS.

Stock has been more plentiful the past week, the increase being at least fifty per cent. Roses have been equal to the demand with the exception of long stemmed Beauties. Carnations have been steadily improving in quality and were never better. Violets are quite plentiful at 50 cents per hundred. Harrisii lilies are still scarce and sell at $1.50 per dozen.

Our second carnation show was held at the society's club rooms on March 10, and was pronounced by all the best of this season. The blooms shown eclipsed all previous displays. The vase of Enquirer was the center of attraction and was well worthy the McLean gold medal which was awarded to it. Mr. Witterstaetter also received a certificate for Elinore and two cash prizes. Messrs. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., showed a magnificent vase of No. 11, a pink of grand form, and No. 30; both were certificated. Mrs. E. T. Grave, of Richmond, Ind., exhibited Dorothy, a dark pink, which was awarded a certificate. L. E. Marquisee, of Syracuse, N. Y., was awarded a certificate for The Marquis, which arrived in excellent shape. Crabb & Hunter, Grand Rapids, Mich., exhibited a vase of Irene which scored eighty-five points and received a certificate. E. G. Hill & Co. staged a fine collection, notable varieties being Leslie Paul, Ethel Crocker and Olympia, which received certificates. Among our home growers A. Sunderbruch was first with Daybreak, Wm. Murphy first with four vases of commercial varieties, and W. Rodgers first with a vase of mixed varieties. Visitors at the show were: E. G. Hill and John Evans, of Richmond, Ind.; H. Weber, of Oakland, Md.; S. H. Harbiston, Danville, Ky.; Theo. Bock, Hamilton, O., and S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia.

TRADE IS QUIET AND BARGAIN OFFERINGS IN VOGUE.—RESULTS ARE GOOD.—A VISITOR FROM PHILADELPHIA.—PHIL SCOTT GOES TO DENVER.—OTHER NOTES.

Lenten season is with us in every sense of the word. Trade has been decidedly quiet and had it not been for the bargains offered by different stores, as dry goods firms do, every day would have been like a Sunday. One would sell carnations, another violets, and so on, trying to attract the public. I think bargains in flowers are all right providing it is a bargain and one has the public understand that it is for one day only. While the dealer does not make any money he does not lose and it all has a tendency to bring people to the store. Ten customers at $1 each is certainly a better business proposition than one at $10. While the profit may not be as large at all times, one makes a busy business center out of his store.

Phil. Scott has accepted a position with the leading florist of Denver, Col., and we shall lose a very active participant in our social and athletic activities. Denver seems to lay claim to Buffalo boys, especially from Scott's, as M. Bloy went there January 1 to assume the management of the greenhouses of the Park Floral Co., the firm which has now secured Philip Scott to manage its store.

The cards displayed in Adams' window, advertising his Lenten bargains, also Meteor, Romans and lilies, have created plenty of talk but they make a good advertisement. Good roses are still bringing $2 to $3 per dozen; carnations from 25 cents to 75 cents; violets $1.50 per hundred; bulbous stock 60 cents to 75 cents; Beauties $7 to $9 and meeting ready sale.

We were honored last week by the presence of J. Walker, of Philadelphia. Wm. Scott had Mr. Walker under his care. He called on the trade in general, ending up by the commissioner, Mr. Walker, Adams, Phil Scott and a couple of others engaging in a bowling game.

This week will see a considerable change in the flower stores of Buffalo. William Scott removes to Cold Spring, severing his connections with the down town brigade. W. A.

TRADE GOOD AND STOCK PLENTIFUL.—LEISSLER COMES TO TOWN.—SOME DECORATIONS.—ROSE BOXES SELL WELL.—NOTES.

Trade is holding up well and some of the florists say they are quite busy but others are feeling that Lent has set in. Roses, carnations, violets and bulbous stock are quite plentiful but prices are fair.

George A. Leissler, formerly of Anacostia, D. C., has taken the greenhouses of Mrs. M. N. Phillips at Cottage Hill. He is growing a general stock of roses, carnations and bedding plants. His Golden Gate roses, carnations and Astilbe Japonica are looking fine.

The American Rose Co. had the decoration for Mrs. Lyman J. Gage's supper, March 10, and in the center of the table was a large vase of about 200 seedling carnations, no two alike, which were much admired.

Carnations being more in demand than roses, the American Rose Co. tried the experiment of fixing up a lot of dollar boxes, using about six nice roses with a few bulbous flowers and a spray or two of Asparagus Sprengerii. In two days they sold over eighty boxes. Their carnations, Luna, Mephisto, Liberty and America, are looking fine.

J. H. Small & Sons have a very fine lot of Lilium Harrisii. Quite a number are in bloom now but most of them will come in about Easter.

Wm. Crawford had the decoration for Mrs. Gen. Foster's luncheon, March 9, using about 500 yellow narcissi and asparagus. Trade is fair at his Grant Place Flower Store.

A. Gude & Bro. are adding four more houses to their new range of glass.

P. G.

St. Louis.

There is very little change in the cut flower market this week, with the exception that stock is coming in a little more plentifully. There is still an over-production of single violets. Extra fine roses hold their own in prices, Brides, Bridemaids and Meteors bringing from $4 to $8 per hundred, and Perles $2 to $4. Carnations bring from $1.25 to $2 while extra fancy varieties go as high as $2.50 and $3. Bulbous stock brings $3 and $4. The retailers all report good business. The opera creates quite a demand, several large bunches of roses being handed up over the footlights each night, besides the boxes of cut flowers that are sent back of the stage.

J. M. Potts, of Chicago, has opened a very pretty retail store at 3838 Finney avenue. J. M. H.

EVERY day we learn through our Directory Department of new firms starting in business. Advertisers can reach these by using our columns.

THE imports of window glass into the United States during January amounted to 85,555 boxes, an increase of about 20,000 boxes over those of the last months of 1899. The heaviest shipments were to San Francisco, Boston and St. Louis.

PRIMULA KEWENSIS (P. floribunda × P. verticillata) is a new hybrid obtained at Kew Gardens, England, and described as a yellow P. obconica with the flowers borne in whorls. P. floribunda bears small yellow flowers in the greatest profusion and many attempts have been made to cross it with other species.

ELSEWHERE in this issue will be found portraits of F. W. Taylor and Wm. Scott, superintendent and assistant superintendent, respectively, of horticulture at the Pan-American Exposition, which is to be held at Buffalo, N. Y., next year. Both gentlemen are so well and favorably known to the trade that any commendation on our part would be superfluous. To Mr. Scott has been assigned full charge of floriculture.

Geraniums for Winter.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please give names of five or six up-to-date geraniums for winter blooming and state when the cuttings should be taken so as to have the plants in 4-inch and 5-inch pots and in bloom November 1. E. E.

Red, Heteranthe and John Doyle; pink, Francis Perkins, Mme. Jaulin and Beaute Poitevine; white, Mme. Ami Chevrelierre. Cuttings taken anytime in May or June should make nice blooming stock by November 1. They must not be allowed to get hard but should be encouraged in every way and kept growing right along.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Chatterton Warburton registers Carnation Cressbrook, a seedling from Mrs. G. M. Bradt × William Scott. Color, bright pink; size of flower, three to three and one-half inches; stem strong and wiry; plant a strong grower, ready rooter and having no surplus foliage.

C. H. Gerbig registers Geranium A. N. Gerbig, single zonale. Flowers bright apricot salmon shaded much deeper towards center, with distinct white eye; truss large; foliage deep green with dark zone; growth strong and compact.

WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

The Tendency of the Times.

The question of flower values in the market as affected by improved quality and increased production, touched upon by Mr. Herr in a recent article, is one of vital interest, not alone to carnation specialists but to all commercial flower growers. A regular market for superlative grades of any flowers at fancy prices exists only in certain metropolitan communities. The country or suburban florists and their customers, too, know good material as well as anyone, as their well-known disposition to find fault with medium-class goods shows, but while ever ready to take their cue from their most critical city colleague in the matter of quality, will not follow him in the matter of price. The inevitable result of this double-edged protest against medium-grade stock on one side and fancy prices for extra stock on the other, is a determination on the part of the out-of-town florist to become independent of the city supply by producing locally as much as possible of the stock needed and the city wholesaler, to whom the country florist has been a good customer in the past, sees his once profitable shipping trade slipping away until it no longer exercises any influence on distribution or values.

The immediate gainers from the movement are the greenhouse builders and the rooted cutting men, whose business prospers therefrom, and the city retailers, who, seeing a well-supplied market and fearing no interference from outside demands, make it their business to grade up on choice selection and batter down general values, with the result that we see only the smallest percentage of the entire cut commanding fancy figures, while the balance of the product, being in unmanageable surplus with no protection from either city or country trade, becomes the prey of the street vendor, who quickly gives it the finishing blow by exposing it for sale under debasing conditions and surroundings.

It being certain that there will always be old and dilapidated greenhouses, always plenty of careless or incompetent growers who can be depended upon to produce all the low grade material that the cheap demand can consume, it would seem that the time had now come when it would pay the best growers—those who aim to produce high-grade stock and cater to the trade that is able to pay for it—to cut loose absolutely from the low-class market. Whatever disposition they would make of the percentage of inferior stock that is unavoidably produced in even the best-managed places—whether it is destroyed, given away or sold—it should never be seen in the same market where such growers' standard product is handled nor should they, under any possible circumstances, allow their name to be associated with it. Manufacturers in other lines have learned that there is always room for the concern that produces high-class goods exclusively and stands upon the reputation that no other quality can be bought from it. The fact that such a grower gets $2 a dozen for his carnations while his neighbor who caters for the cheaper market gets $2 a hundred for his will not indicate that the former is getting rich any faster than the latter. Each will find his level and each make his legitimate profit based upon his enterprise and business sagacity and afforded by the operations of supply and demand in their respective spheres.

Syracuse, N. Y.

We were never more surprised than when nine staunch and true Uticans alighted from the Empire State Express on March 7 to try conclusions with us on the bowling alley, and our victory of three straight games gave us equal surprise. They were evidently overtrained, evidencing, as they did, superior work, but the pins would fall like gates ajar. The Utica party consisted of Peter Crowe, W. J. Crowe, Frank Baker, J. C. Spencer, W. Kauffer, Harry Matthews, Chas. Matthews, W. A. Rowland and A. C. Brown. The Syracuse contestants were Alfred Burt, T. Bishop, David Campbell, Geo. Ham, C. A. Fox, Joe Huller, W. Smiley, W. H. Dow, A. Davis and R. Bard. Scores in the first game were: Syracuse, 1005; Utica, 964. Second game, Syracuse, 1044; Utica, 967. Third; well, they had to catch the 12:20 train to go home. The highest score of the evening was made by A. Davis, 180.

A sleighride was enjoyed in the afternoon, twenty inches of "the beautiful" making it good running. The first stop was at L. E. Marquisee's to see the famous Marquis, a wonderful sight indeed; thousands of massive and finely formed flowers in full bloom among a sea of buds. The Syracuse also was in fine array, the flowers being far superior to those shown at Buffalo. White Cloud was also good. Proceeding to Henry Burt's we found that great old florist and market gardener, in his seventy-fifth year, around just the same as ever. After partaking of his hospitality a hurried visit was made to Quinlan's to see Golden Gate and Dunlop's new rose, Lady Dorothea, W. R. Smith, of this firm, receiving the boys courteously. A supper was served at the Bastable.

Trade has been quite a little better since Lent began. Flowers of all kinds are plentiful, with the exception of roses. Bulbous stock goes rather slowly, yellow tulips, daffodils and lily of the valley being the best sellers. There are more yellow teas and functions this season than the red of last year. Golden Gate roses are fast becoming favorites, the extras on long stems bringing 75 cents each at retail. R. B.

OBITUARY.

W. W. GREENE.

W. W. Greene, the oldest florist of Watertown, N. Y, and for some years retired, died quite suddenly on March 8. He was an octogenarian and was born in the city in which he spent his long and useful life. In 1852 he married Miss Elizabeth Ingham, of Redwood, who survives him with two sons and two daughters.

ARCHIBALD MIDDLEMASS.

Archibald Middlemass, one of Milwaukee's pioneer florists, died March 15, of pneumonia. He had been ailing for three years with bronchial trouble, which prevented his usual activity and no doubt was the cause of what appeared to be a sudden closing of a long career. He is survived by his wife, two sons and two daughters. Mr. Middlemass was born in Edinburg, Scotland, fifty-eight years ago. He was first known in Milwaukee as gardener to David Ferguson, with whom he remained until shortly after Lee's surrender, when he formed a co-partnership with John M. Dunlap, who had what were then known as the Rose Hill Nurseries, opposite Forest Home Cemetery. After a few years he took a piece of land adjoining Mr. Dunlap's, where he has lived and done business ever since. For a time he had as a partner Alexander Laine who was for a long time superintendent of Forest Home Cemetery. Four years ago he purchased a large plant for roses and carnations known as the Duester place; this proved a decided financial failure and was very disheartening. Mr. Middlemass was a plantsman particularly, but in those days when each florist had to do everything, he held his end up to equal any. He has always been quite prominent in the St. Andrew's society, foremost in out-of-door games and had a good voice. He was a leader among the curlers of Wisconsin. The greenhouses are now well stocked and will be managed by his wife and daughter until spring business is at an end; whether they will continue the business later is not yet determined upon. C. B. SMITH & SMITH,

P. O. Box 869. 345 Sixth Ave., PITTSBURG, PA.

When corresponding with advertisers, mention the AMERICAN FLORIST.

Omaha.

Business is good and stock is somewhat more plentiful, as we are having the finest of weather, in fact almost too good for the violets. Lilies are looking well and the indications are that Easter will eclipse all previous records. This has been a good season, as prices have held up better than in former years and everything was readily disposed of.

GRIPPE.

PORTLAND, ME.—Jas. Fyles & Son have bought a greenhouse from S. C. Dennett.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

MAIL trade houses in the northwest report trade good the past week.

J. B. AGNEW, the California seed grower, is making an eastern trip and visited Chicago March 16.

IT is noticeable this season that the general literary magazines are carrying more seed advertisers than usual.

THE Nebraska Seed Co., of Omaha, Neb., is reported slightly damaged by water and smoke. Loss covered by insurance.

THE wholesale trade is slow, dealers being inclined to get sight of the bottom bags of their present stocks before buying any further supply. Some scarce items are weaker in price.

IT is reported that the lowest bidder on the government seed order has declined to comply with the contract conditions and that the two next lowest are now being considered.

SHREWD buyers of Dutch bulbs are inclined to delay their purchases believing that English growers who use Dutch stock largely will not buy as heavily as usual this season, and in consequence lower rates must prevail later.

FLOWER SHOW IN APRIL.—A MATTER OF RESTRICTING EXHIBITORS. — SEEN AT AUDUBON PARK.—BUSINESS GOOD.

The committee of arrangements has decided that the flower show will take place on April 18, four days after the opening of the state fair. Cash prizes amounting to $450 will be given. A discussion was raised at the last meeting of the committee to decide if a florist had the right to enter for competition a plant which was not raised by himself. Of course the south draws a large amount of plants from the north and the north also sends all over the world for its stock, but at the same time it seems to not be proper to have a plant from outside entered for exhibition without its having been in the exhibitor's possession for at least a certain length of time. Now the question is, how could that be prohibited? The only thing was to instruct the judges to give the preference to the home grown stock.

Our parks are in good order and improving all the time. At Audubon Park, under the care of E. Baker, the large greenhouses are full of exotic plants, growing in full ground, most of them reaching the top glass fifty feet high. The smaller greenhouses are full of potted plants which soon will adorn the ground outside. Near the experimental station, which is under the direction of the state, there is a large nursery. Palms and half exotic plants are raised there in quantity. Phœnix Canariensis seems to be the only palm one can rely on.

Business is now quite brisk. Some florists report better trade than for many years. Last Sunday the market was loaded with plants, which found good sale, good geraniums in 5-inch pots selling early at 25 cents.

J. B. Heiss, of the Exotic Nurseries, Dayton, Ohio, was in town for the Mardi Gras, and took many orders for his plants.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W. J. PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

ACCORDING to the Garden, the London parks occupy approximately 17,000 acres.

PROF. E. S. GOFF, of Madison, reports root-killing of nursery stock in Wisconsin this winter.

IN 1894 we exported $115,590 worth of nursery stock to Canada; in 1898, $36,862 worth.

I. E. ILGENFRITZ & SON, Monroe, Mich., say that the outlook for trade in nursery stock of all kinds is remarkably good.

NOT all Canadian nurserymen favor the law excluding stock grown in the United States. A. W. Graham, of St. Thomas, is one of these.

IT is the better policy to buy good, thrifty trees at a fair price than inferior stock at a less figure. Fancy prices are equally to be avoided.

ZEIGLER BROS. are going into the nursery business on quite an extensive scale at St. Elmo, Ill. They hope to plant 100,000 fruit trees this spring. Chas. Little is the manager.

MOST nurserymen, and all the large ones, are in full accord with the purposes of legislators who are enacting laws for the protection of the planter, but they believe that there is a limit to the necessity for restriction.

NEW YORK now has a law making the standard fruit package one quart or sixty-seven cubic inches and providing a penalty for violations unless the the smaller package is marked "short" in letters at least one-half inch high.

THE Congressional committee on agriculture has so amended the federal inspection bill that it does not take precedence over the diverse state laws, thereby defeating the very purpose for which the bill was devised and losing for it the support of the men who have been pushing it for two years.

American Grape Vines in Europe.

According to an Associated Press message, dated Strasburg, March 5, the government of Alsace Lorraine has declined to grant the petition of the vine growers of the Reichsland that they be permitted to import American grapevines in order to renew their ruined vineyards. Baron Zorn von Bulach, secretary of state for agriculture, declared on the floor of the landtag that the American vines brought into the country are worse blights than phylloxera.

PERU

A New Pure Glistening White

CARNATION

Well Tested, Has Proved a Great Success Wherever Grown.

It is a strong grower, with long, stiff stems, large size, fine form and substance; fragrant, perfect calyx; never bursts, long keeper, blooms very freely and without cropping from October on.

Rooted Cuttings now ready. $1.50 per Doz., $10 per 100, $75 per 1,000. Cash with Order.

F. B. TINKER, Peru, Indiana.

ETHEL CROCKER

Absolutely the BEST PINK CARNATION ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another). By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety). In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July. With 18 000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and the order filled by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished, prepaid, at $1.00 per dozen—amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date, every sample, excepting one, out of several hundred sent, has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES, good little plants, at 75 cts. per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

OUR DIRECTORY FOR 1900 WILL BE MAILED TO YOU PROMPTLY UPON APPLICATION. PRICE, TWO DOLLARS.

Miami, Fla.

The cold wave of mid-February did some damage to early vegetables north and west of Miami, but toward the south nothing was damaged and there are whole fields of tomatoes just coming into bearing, one field containing 250 acres. Oranges, grapefruit, limes and lemons were not damaged at all. Pine apple fields suffered the loss of some foliage and small plants were slightly hurt, but the fruit buds were not injured. All shedded plants came through without the loss of a leaf. Over 1000 crates of vegetables per day are being shipped from here. The through vegetable express train was put on the Florida East Coast Railroad March 15. This train carries from six to ten car loads of vegetables north daily.

Warm days and cool nights bring out the rose buds in perfection while carnations are loaded with buds and blooms all the time; the climate seems to just suit them. Dickerson & Belden are finding quick sale for both carnations and roses among the hotel guests, the city being full of winter tourists. Their Bridesmaids are perfect but the Brides show a tint of pink on the outer petals, caused, no doubt, by the bright sun. The firm is busy now shipping sword ferns by the thousands. Epidendrum venosum and Cyrtopodium punctatum are proving good sellers. POINCIANA.

THE IDEAL PINK CARNATION Genevieve Lord

Fills the bill. The ladies declare it is just right in color. We claim it has the best stem of any Carnation. That it will rank very near the top in size. That its odor is very sweet. That it is the most profitable Carnation we ever grew. That it has an individuality all its own. Customers recognize it at a glance. There is not a great deal left that is wanting in this variety. If you want to make money, plant it. But don't delay, for stock for delivery prior to March 20 is all sold. It is an easy, rapid grower, however, and the April and May deliveries will make large, fine plants. Some of the finest plants we have are from cuttings from sand planted in the field June 1st. Remember all sold until March 20th. If you wait too long the chances are that we will be sold out of stock. Make yourself safe by ordering at once.

PRICE
$2.00 per Dozen,
$10.00 per 100,
$75.00 per 1000.

H. WEBER & SONS,
OAKLAND, MD.

Our catalogue is now ready; in it are listed the above as well as all the new "big ones" at introducers' prices all the best standard sorts, and a complete list of chrysanthemums, novelties and standard sorts.

INTERESTING TO GROWERS....

The rapid growth of our business imperatively demands that we secure for another season more METEOR and PERLE roses.

We would request anyone able to grow these two varieties well and in quantity to correspond with us.

We can convince the right parties that we can offer them a chance seldom equaled to dispose of their stock. Now is the time to take up the matter.

Westerly, R. I.

S. J. Reuter is planning to erect two more houses this season. Two a year seems to be Mr. Reuter's regular gait and his place, now the third largest in New England, may yet attain such proportions as to necessitate lapping over the boundaries of the little nutmeg state into Connecticut or Massachusetts, if the grade of stock raised here continues as it has been this winter. The Brides and Bridesmaids from Mr. Reuter are certainly equal to the best produced and Mr. Welch, who places them on the market in Boston, thinks they are just a little better than the best, barring none. Mr. Reuter is busy grafting and budding; 25,000 is the number to be started. He finds the budded stock fully equal to the grafted. He has a dark colored sport from Bridesmaid which has proved steadfast and will be propagated as rapidly as possible without danger of weakening the stock. In color it is nearly as deep as American Beauty. Golden Gate does grandly here, being, in Mr. Reuter's experience, the most prolific bloomer in the list, but the buyers have not yet learned to appreciate it. Carnations Daybreak and White Cloud do finely, Freedom very poorly and Scott indifferently. A house of Easter lilies shows stock from several bulb dealers in "deadly parallel" rows. One firm, at least, will have difficulty in duplicating the order next year.

SPRING WEATHER BRINGS OUT THE BLOOMS. —PLANTSMEN APPEAR AT THE MARKET. —FUNERAL WORK.

For the past week the weather has been quite springlike and florists notice a great change in the quality of flowers as well as an increased supply. Roses are coming in freely, which may result disastrously for the Easter trade. Both Brides and Bridesmaids are large and fine. Meteor, too, is showing up well. Last Saturday, for the first time this year, the smaller growers showed up at the market house. Several stalls were filled with blooming plants and purchasers were numerous. Later in the spring these growers have the best of the plant trade and sell at prices that allow a very small margin of profit.

The death of the fire chief, Capt. E. M. Carrell, who was killed while responding to an early morning alarm, called for some very elaborate and novel floral pieces last week.

Trade continues fairly good despite the fact that it is the Lenten season.

BUSINESS BRISK AND STOCK SHORT.—ROOM FOR MORE GOOD GROWERS.—A SMOKER PLANNED.

Business is holding up to such an extent that there has not been enough stock to supply the demand. White stock is particularly scarce. It is hard to say to what this scarcity should be attributed unless it is that there are not enough growers in Pittsburg. There seems to be room here for several producers of first-class stock.

The "smoker" of the Florists' Club will take place on March 22, at the rooms of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. At the last meeting J. B. Ferguson was elected to membership. G. O.

Notes on Foliage Plants.

The Easter trade and special plants that are grown for that occasion are doubtless engrossing the attention of growers at the time of this writing, and it is quite natural that this should be so, for no other special occasion during the year presents just the same difficulties and anxieties. But after the Easter rush is over other questions come in view, among them being that of proper attention to the stock of foliage plants, the latter now forming at least a portion of the regular stock of every retail florist. In order to get the best results, and to have our plants in the best possible condition for the fall trade, a reasonably early start should be made.

The palm stock occupies the most prominent position among plants of this character at the present time, and should receive first attention, for after April 1 any or all palms that are pot-bound may be safely shifted and will soon become re-established. In the case of old or stunted specimens of palms it is a good practice to wash out all the old compost from among the roots, but root pruning should be done cautiously, and if the roots are in fairly healthy condition I prefer to leave them alone so far as the the knife is concerned, and simply to repot firmly in good compost after the washing operation. The sun at this season being very strong, shading of some description is required, this being especially necessary in the case of newly potted palms, in order to encourage a fresh start and to bring back the color into the foliage of those specimens that have been starved.

Were it not for the great expense of such appliances, a system of roller blinds for shading the palm house would prove very useful, for the plants might then be shaded only at such times as the shade is really required, but for the average commercial place such a system does not now seem practicable. Consequently we have to depend on a paint or wash for this purpose, and the ideal preparation for this kind of shading does not appear to have been reached yet. Various growers use various preparations, among them being naptha and white lead, kerosene and white lead, lime wash and sundry water paints, all of them, with the possible exception of the lime wash, mounting up quite rapidly in the item of cost, and during a showery season causing a great deal of extra labor.

In handling palms much depends on the care they receive just after repotting, and it pays to give a little more attention to watering, syringing and ventilation at that special period. A newly potted palm should never be allowed to get very dry, or its roots get a check that takes them a long time to get over, and later in the season the poor condition of the plant will often be credited to sour soil, over-watering, or some unknown disease. It is attention to the small details that brings success in plant growing in general, and palm growing is no exception to the rule.

Regarding insects, it is sometimes claimed that growers who practice vaporizing with certain insecticides, or regular spraying with tobacco preparations, have no trouble from noxious insects, but notwithstanding these claims, it really does appear at times as though there must be a class of immunes among these insect pests, and we find at such times that we are compelled to return to first principles, and give the plants a good washing. A brush, for example a tooth brush or similar weapon, is often recommended for the removal of scale insects from palms, but this also has its disadvantages unless very carefully used, for a stiff brush in the hands of a muscular cleaner is likely to result in permanent injury to some of the foliage.

Variegated aspidistras in well grown plants are always useful to have, for no other plant of similar beauty possesses the same amount of endurance, and while frequent repottings are not needful in this case, yet even an aspidistra will respond to liberal treatment. The early spring is a good time for the division of these plants, and the rhizomes from a few strong clumps, if cut into short pieces and planted in boxes or pans of light soil, may be made into a nice crop of young stock for the following season. Pandanuses of the two leading species, P. Veitchii and P. utilis, are still in demand, providing the plants are stocky, well-furnished and of good color, and to produce plants of this description the stock should not be permitted to get badly pot-bound before being repotted, and though the pandanuses do not need full exposure to the sun during the heat of summer, yet they should have plenty of light.

Ficus elastica, when well grown, continues to find a ready sale, in fact it seems extraordinary where all the ficuses go each season, when we take into consideration the great numbers that are produced in several of our large cities, and in addition to these a considerable number have been imported in small sizes of late years. Dracænas are spoken of to a greater extent than in former years, and it seems possible that there may be a revival of interest in these beautiful plants. Many of the species are doubtless too tender for general use, but there is also room for improvement in the methods of growing them, to the end that they may be placed on the market in such a hardened condition that the plants would endure more exposure. A race of American hybrids among the dracænas, for example, some in which bright coloring was combined with some blood of D. congesta or some other sturdy grower, might find an opening among the decorative plants of the future.

W. H. TAPLIN.

CARNATIONS.

HEATING CARNATION HOUSE.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—How shall I pipe a carnation house 30x200, the north wall of which is five feet high, the south wall four feet and the ridge twelve feet? The heater is a hot water boiler capable of heating 10,000 square feet. I should like to have the three center beds on the ground, with two benches, two and one-half feet wide, at the walls. D. M. R.

There are several methods of piping that will give good results. When overhead flow pipes are to be used four 2½-inch pipes can be carried on the purlin posts, from one to two feet below the glass, to the farther end of the house, where they should be connected with ten 2-inch return pipes. Three of these should be under each of the side benches, and two in each of the inside walks. For under-bench piping twelve 2½-inch or fifteen 2-inch pipes should be used. One-half of these can be used as flows and the others as returns, or, if there are several houses, all of the pipes may be used as flows and connected at the farther end with a common return. L. R. T.

A GROWER'S PLAINT.

To have the full measure of success in the business of growing carnations there should be closer relations between the growers and the retailers. As matters now stand a grower situated some distance from his market, who does not get into direct contact with the retail trade, is at a great disadvantage by not knowing exactly what to plant.

The retailer has the advantage if a variety does not sell, simply refusing to handle it, but the grower may have a house of it planted and he is going to sell the product of the house for something and try and get enough out of the balance of his place to make up the loss on this particular variety, and in this way the retailers' interests are indirectly affected.

Perhaps no better illustration of this phase of carnation culture can be given than the case of Gen. Maceo and Gen. Gomez, similar in color and both good commercial varieties from a grower's point of view. There were quite enough plants sold last season to have permitted a fair test of their value to the retailer but I have never heard or read an expression by a retailer giving a clue as to which of them was finding the most favor with the buyers of carnations.

Some say Gen. Maceo is too dark under artificial light and in their eyes Gen. Gomez is the better of the two, but a far greater number prefer Gen. Maceo on account of its being a trifle larger, and it has other points in its favor. This is the growers' opinion, but when it comes to a matter of color a grower is not the best judge of what to produce, and there is danger of too many Gen. Maceo being planted for the wants of the trade next season, a danger that could easily be avoided if the retailers would tell us which of these two find the most favor with their customers and about what proportion of these colors can be sold.

To my mind Gen. Gomez is the better color and the variety most desirable to grow, and yet when I told this to a grower he accused me of knowing better and simply wanting to unload Gomez cuttings on him. He was red hot for Maceo and thought it was the proper color. Which of us was right?

I would like to plant a house of either Gomez or Maceo if the flowers from it could be sold next season, but am afraid to do it on account of the experience I had with yellow varieties a year ago. I had as fine yellow carnations as were produced anywhere in the country but after about a month's shipment of flowers in the beginning of the season I was notified by my buyers that they could not sell them and that I should send no more of that color. The result was that I had two houses of yellow carnations to dispose of with no buyers for them and I do not care to repeat the experience. So instead of planting a house or two with the dark shades for next winter I shall plant but a portion of a house to each of three varieties in this color and wait until another season before deciding what to plant.

This waiting two or three years is perhaps good, old-fashioned policy, but I might be making a goodly sum of money out of one or the other of these varieties in the interval, if the retailers would only express their ideas of the selling qualities of carnations as they are introduced by the growers. ALBERT M. HERR.

COLUMBUS, O.—Justice Andrews has decided that the lease of Hester Getz, who occupied a portion of the jewelry store room of F. R. Cross & Co. with flowers and art ware, has expired and has given possession to Chas. Roth, well known as a florist.

Helpful Reminders.

Although Begonia Gloire de Lorraine is a desirable plant for Christmas, do not neglect propagating the older B. incarnata. This makes a larger plant and for some purposes is far superior. For long sprays for cut flowers or some effective decoration the Gloire de Lorraine cannot hold a candle to it.

Bring a batch of Spanish iris into a cool house. They will make considerable long narrow foliage which should not be broken down with heavy syringing.

If you have lilies or anything that has become infested with greenfly, sprinkle tobacco dust on them; it is the best way of cleaning them while buds are forming.

Any one carrying a general stock should not fail to have a Strelitzia reginæ in the open ground. They thrive in a house kept from 50° to 60° and multiply like callas, the large orange and purple flowers attracting considerable attention.

Rhyncospermum jasminoides is of little value carried in pots but affords quantities of beautiful sprays if grown in open ground and trained over a wall.

Where Cypripedium insigne were repotted last fall or late summer, they will be starting new growths now and should be encouraged; a good growth of well developed foliage is what will insure you flower buds later on.

Bougainvilleas should be placed in more heat now; give plenty of water and see that drainage is perfect.

Be careful of condensation on foliage caused by the cool atmosphere of early mornings. Gardeners who do their own firing are apt to stay in bed when they are sure danger of frost is past, thus damaging crops that have been successfully brought through the winter. Where there is shading, this is less apt to occur for the same reason that we do not have white frosts with cloudy skies; I need not stop to explain here.

Be on the lookout for imperfect glass burning your foliage; it is safest to put Aurora C sheeting over all your palms and ficuses.

For summer flowers, a very taking thing and easily grown is the tritoma; be sure yours are starting; you cannot afford to be without them.

If you are a member of the S. A. F. make out a list of the supplies you will need and send it in to the purchasing committee. C. B. W.

Spring Exhibition at Boston.

Good weather favored the exhibition this year. The display was full, brilliant and well worth a visit, and there was no apparent reason why the public should not have crowded the halls continuously, other than the general indifference to horticultural shows that has prevailed for some years. The attendance was certainly disappointing.

From an expert point of view there was not much of special interest, new varieties being conspicuously absent, and no notable advance in cultural achievement over late years being apparent, but this could hardly have been looked for, so high a degree of excellence having been attained before by the skillful gardeners who are the main contributors to this show.

The display of spring flowering bulbs was gorgeous in the extreme, there being not far from 1,000 large pans and pots of these brilliant subjects in the upper hall. Hyacinths, while not to be compared with those shown years ago when the competition for the Dutch medals was on and when an exhibitor did not mind paying a dollar or two for the right kind of a bulb, were fully up to the quality of late years and as good as they can be done with the commercial grade of bulbs now generally used. Dr. C. G. Weld, Kenneth Finlayson, gardener, took most of the first prizes and Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher, gardener, most of the seconds, and these were the principal contributors. In tulips Dr. Weld, W. S. Ewell & Son and E. S. Converse, D. F. Roy, gardener, were the main competitors and the prizes were awarded in the order named. Like the hyacinths, tulips lacked in novelties, but one new one, Queen of the Netherlands, a blush white from Dr. Weld, was much admired. The narcissus section showed some advance, especially in the line of single trumpets. Dr. Weld, H. S. Rand and W. S. Ewell & Son were the winners. From W. S. Ewell & Son and Dr. Weld came magnificent general displays of spring flowering bulbs and there were special entries in lily of the valley, crocusses, freesias, Roman hyacinths, ixias, tritonias, etc, from both these exhibitors, also from the Bussey Institution, Mrs. J. L. Gardner and J. Burnett, and fine longiflorum lilies from E. N. Pierce & Son.

Dr. Weld was in the lead on ericas, flowering stove plants, hard-wooded greenhouse plants and polyanthuses. The varieties shown were mostly identical with those of previous years. Acacias, pubescens, Drummondii and armata, made a gorgeous show. Mrs. J. L. Gardner's contributions in these classes were also very effective, one Acacia heterophylla being especially fine. Her hardy primroses were very good, making a better showing of these pretty subjects than has been seen here for some years.

In orchids but two specimens were entered, a Cattleya Schrœderæ with forty-nine blossoms, from Bayard Thayer, Jas. Brydon, gardener, and a Dendrobium nobile from J. C. Whitin, Wm. McAllister, gardener. In climbing roses there were but two plants shown, a Carmine Pillar and a Crimson Rambler, both handsome specimens and both from C. H. Souther, C. Sandiford, gardener. Cyclamens, as heretofore, occupied the position of honor in the hall. Mrs. B. P. Cheney, John Barr, gardener, swept all the premiums in the open class and J. S. Bailey, Wm. Donald, gardener, did the same in the class limited to 7-inch pots. Cinerarias were well displayed by C. H. Souther, Mrs. J. L. Gardner and Dr. C. G. Weld. Cineraria stellata from Mrs. Gardner attracted fully as much attention as the fancy florists' varieties.

Azaleas have never before been shown so meagerly here. H. H. Rogers and Dr. Weld were the only contributors and about $50 of prize money was uncompeted for in these classes. The fine collections of forced hardy shrubs and native herbaceous plants from the Bussy Institution found as many admirers as did anything else in the hall. Norris F. Comley showed some very good violets in nine varieties and Rea Bros. made a pretty display of Primula Sieboldii. Begonia Gilsoni from Walter Hunnewell, T. D. Hatfield, gardener, showed up well.

The gem of the exhibition was Jackson Dawson's new ever-blooming multiflora rose, Little Tot, which was awarded a certificate of merit. Yomanaka & Co. received honorable mention for an interesting collection of dwarfed trees and Japanese curios. Mrs. Cheney showed a group of Magna Charta roses and Jas. Comley a miscellaneous collection in which was a superb plant of white genista from seed collected by him in Japan.

The cut flower display was very good, carnations, violets, pansies and hybrid roses being shown in excellent shape. Margaret Dickson, Magna Charta, Mme. Gabriel Luizet, Gen. Jacqueminot, Paul Neyron and Marquis de Castellane were among the handomest of the hybrids, the exhibitors being C. H. Souther and Col. Chas. Pfaff, Geo. Melvin, gardener. On tender roses there was no competition, F. R. & P. M. Pierson being the only exhibitors of American Beauty, and W. H. Elliott the only exhibitor of Bride, Bridesmaid and Meteor. Carnot, Kaiserin and Liberty were not shown and so $140 of rose prizes revert to the treasury. Vases of fifty assorted blooms were staged by J. W. Howard and Miss M. S. Walker.

Carnations were good, and their arrangement in tall vases on a roomy table extending the length of the lower hall was very effective. Briarcliff Greenhouses and M. A. Patten were the chief exhibitors, Mr. Patten being first with vase of 100 assorted and with twenty-five crimson, and Briarcliff first in all the other classes. G. H. Crane, Frances Joost, Mrs. Jas. Dean, White Cloud, Gold Nugget and Mrs. Bradt were the principal varieties staged. Col. Pfaff and J. W. Howard were second and third on 100 assorted blooms. Norris F. Comley took all the violet prizes. The showing of pansies was excellent, W. C. Ward being the winner. C. H. Souther showed a group of Cineraria stellata, H. A. Wheeler a table of orchid blooms, J. W. Howard antirrhinums, E. N. Pierce & Son mignonette and Geo. Anderson and M. R. Cushing carnations.

CATTLEYA × THAYERIANA.

Cattleya × Thayeriana.

The illustration produced herewith is that of a new seedling cattleya the parents being C. intermedia × C. Schrœderæ alba. The cross was made March 26, 1896, the seed sown April 14, 1897, and the first of the plants is now in bloom. It is a desirable plant, being a great improvement over the seed parent C. intermedia. The color is a delicate pink throughout, the tube of the lip being primrose yellow with a purple irregular shaped blotch in the center. The name given above is provisional, and may stand in the event of the cross being unflowered in Europe.

Some Good Plants for the Home.

[Paper read by A. Blanc before the Philadelphia County Farmers' Institute, February 24, 1900.]

This subject has been gone over so carefully on previous occasions, by Mr. Craig and others, that it seems almost needless to discuss it again. Few, if any, new plants have appeared of late that can be added to the list of desirable plants mentioned heretofore, which consists principally of araucarias, palms of various sorts, ficus, cycas, dracænas, pandanuses, crotons and ferns, all of which are popular as house plants and last in perfection for quite a time, providing adequate light is given and careful attention paid to watering. The washing of the leaves is of the utmost importance with all those mentioned.

There are, however, quite a number of flowering and foliage plants that I have found easy to grow under adverse circumstances. Anthurium Scherzerianum, for instance, blooms freely in almost any light window and will stand more cold than imagined. Abutilon Savitzi will bear many degrees of frost and not lose a leaf. Bougainvillea Sanderiana, cut back late in the year, kept rather dry in a cold cellar, can be flowered easily in a bay window. Many of the begonias, especially B. semperflorens gracilis, bloom in 2-inch pots and, so to speak, forever afterwards, providing they are re-potted when needed. What is more beautiful than Asparagus Sprengerii, especially the new compact sort. Ardisia crenulata always attracts attention when in berry, and the otaheite orange when in fruit. The latter will soon be entirely superseded by the dwarf oval Japanese kumquat, which bears innumerable little golden oranges that can be eaten right off the plant. It grows and fruits well in the house and is nearly hardy.

Nothing will probably ever equal the Boston fern and the other members of the nephrolepis family, but some of the Australian tree ferns, especially Alsophila Australis, make very fine specimens indoors in a very short time. This variety might well be called the water fern; it just revels in it and preserves its foliage for a long while. The lace fern, Polystichum proliferum, has been taken hold of lately, and I know it to be one of the best room ferns that can be had. Japanese fern balls made up of roots of Davallia bullata are an "old novelty" revived and really do very well in living rooms. They would last longer if made up of peat and moss instead of pure sphagnum. Aspidistras have long been grown. I know of a fine plant of Sanseviera Zeylanica that has been grown for years, winter and summer in a south window. Its peculiar thick leaves, variegated green and gray, always attract attention.

Among other plants that the florists do not grow we find the æchmeas and bromelias, and yet they are far easier to handle and certainly fully as handsome as the dracænas. Their gorgeous flowers are delightful, they do not drop their leaves and will stand rough treatment even better than a cactus. The papyrus, if more plentiful, would become very popular. It grows almost like a weed when once well established. Carex Japonica variegata and quite a number of the marantas, especially the varieties Makoyana and Massangeana, and even the various peperomias are not difficult to manage and I well remember a magnificent specimen of Peperomia Mexicana trailing down three feet below the pot, grown in a room having only two windows. Of course much depends upon the grower; one must not expect to grow a fine ficus from a leafless stalk stuck in some poor soil, as attempted by some folks.

I have grown dieffenbachias, with their grand mottled leaves; Phrynium variegatum, so beautifully variegated with green and white; fittonias, marbled with pink and white; Pothos aurea, with large leaves splashed with golden yellow, and found them all far easier to handle than geraniums. The new Ruellia Makoyana grows well in the shade and blooms freely; its leaves are also quite showy.

Kalanchoe flammea, of which so much has been said in trade papers of late, is recommended as a market plant. It is still unknown in this country but from illustrations it appears to be exceedingly showy. All the kalanchoes do well indoors. The variety K. carnea is in bloom the year round, but the finest I have ever seen is the Kalanchoe marmorata, which bloomed at the Kew gardens only a few years ago. It makes a fine show plant, with large, succulent leaves six to eight inches long and five inches wide, of a light silvery green spotted with purple, the whole surmounted by a dense cluster of pure white flowers four inches long; many a time have I counted thirty to forty flowers open at one time. Many other succulent plants are worth growing as house plants by those who like them. Cacti of all sorts are used, especially those grown for their odd shapes. For Easter flowering none can equal the comparatively new Epiphyllum Gaertneri, which blooms when only a few inches high.

Besides those already mentioned, it is not difficult to succeed in growing and blooming many choice plants, even in a crowded city, such as Spiræa Anthony Waterer, the new deutzias of Mr. Lemoine, especially the variety compacta, the new russellias and browallias, tecomas, the baby primrose, Linum trigynum, the various justicias and others.

AQUILEGIA CŒRULEA IN POT.

Among flowering bulbous plants, what could be handsomer than the grand amaryllises raised by Veitch and others, producing two and three spikes to the bulb with flowers eight to ten inches across, or the gorgeous imantophyllums, with dense clusters of orange flowers a foot across? Certainly the various callas should not be disdained, now that the golden yellow sorts are becoming cheap, and whoever chooses to take a little extra trouble could enjoy in the house those great floral pictures called Brazilian caladiums. Of course, much will depend on your surroundings. Those who are fortunate enough to live in the country have every advantage over those hemmed up in crowded cities. Fresh air, plenty of light, pure water, pure and rich soil is really all that is needed to grow all kinds of plants in the dwelling as well as the florist does in his greenhouses, and sometimes even better.

PORT CHESTER, N. Y.—The Westchester County Gardeners' Association had an interesting carnation exhibition at their February meeting. Geo. M. Hay and Wm. Hay won first and second premiums respectively and a special award was made to Jos. Dexter for a collection of superb California varieties. J. N. May showed Olympia in good form.

Pot Columbines.

One of our representatives calling at Denver, Col., some time ago found that the native columbine of that region, Aquilegia cœrulea, is occasionally grown there in pots for indoor use in winter and spring, with such delightful result as may be imagined from the accompanying illustration. It is true, of course, that the proper place for columbines in summer is the flower border or rock garden, and in these locations they are all very charming plants; but they are none the less welcome additions to our greenhouse flora on that account. Owing to the rather fleeting character of their flowers, it is doubtful if pot grown columbines will ever be extensively used by our floral artists. There may be, however, some small demand for them, and in this connection it should be remembered that the flowers of the double and semi-double varieties remain perfect much longer than those of the strictly single sorts, although it must be admitted the latter are always the most graceful and beautiful, eclipsing in these attributes many more popular garden flowers.

In the long list of species of aquilegia there is none quite so beautiful as the typical form of A. cœrulea. The flowers are of a delightful light blue tint, such a shade indeed as one could fancy clothing the tips of its native Rockies, merging them with the skies beyond to the delusion of the spectator. But it is an extremely variable plant and the type is quite rare even in its native wilds. The variation is found chiefly in the flowers, the color ranging from blue to white with many intermediate blendings. The form shown in the picture had blooms of a lavender shade.

We have seen A. Canadensis, with orange-scarlet flowers, similarly grown in pots for the adornment of greenhouses and conservatories in winter and spring, and its bright color renders it very serviceable for this purpose.

A Notable Carnation House.

The illustration herewith is from a photograph of the new carnation house at Briarcliff Farm, Scarborough, N. Y., that has been attracting wide attention, both on account of its unusual size and for the quality of the stock produced. The photograph was taken in December, when the plants were still comparatively small. This house is situated on the estate of Walter W. Law, Esq., one of the most famous estates in the country, consisting of over 3,000 acres and known far and near as the source of Briarcliff milk and cream, the product of over 400 Jersey cattle that are bred and cared for in the most approved scientific and sanitary manner. The greenhouse shown is of the latest iron frame construction, facing the south, three-fourths span, heated by hot water. The size of the house is 51x306 feet. Of the house Paul M. Pierson, the manager, says:

"This is a rather decided departure from the usual house eighteen or twenty feet in width and no doubt some of the 'wise ones' will say it is too wide, but the quality and quantity of stock produced proves, at least to our satisfaction, that we have the right conditions for successful carnation culture. So well are we convinced of this that we are erecting a duplicate house. The benches are all on the level and are seven in number, each five feet wide, running the length of the house, except that there is a cross walk in the center."

There are eight other smaller houses in the range, of the usual type. The varieties grown are Mrs. G. M. Bradt, G. H. Crane, White Cloud, Gold Nugget, Mrs. Dean, Mrs. Joost, Jubilee, Flora Hill, and a number of other sorts which will be discarded to make room for the best of the recent introductions and to permit increased planting of the sorts named above

BUSINESS FAIRLY SATISFACTORY.—WHITE CARNATIONS THE PRINCIPAL SHORTAGE.—PROSPECTS FOR EASTER.—PARK DEPARTMENT INVESTIGATION PROGRESSING.—KEEPING QUALITIES OF OLYMPIA.—HARRIS TO LEAVE THE HUNNEWELL ESTATE.—VARIOUS PERSONAL NOTES.

Wholesalers report an excellent out-of-town trade during the past week and local business is generally satisfactory to all. The unusual number of deaths from grippe, pneumonia, etc., while not pleasant to contemplate, may be alluded to as responsible in part for the brisk demand, especially or white flowers. White carnations would be in short supply anyway, as the crop seems to be off on all sides, and it appears that the proportion of whites planted last fall was less than heretofore. Roses are selling fairly well, Beauty alone showing a slight downward tendency in price, partly on account of the Brunners, which are coming in moderate quantity. Lilies hold up to record prices for the season and lily of the valley is moving reasonably well but, other than these, bulbous stock generally is having a hard time. Violets, continue, as during several weeks past, in excess of the legitimate demand and are seen on every street corner at very low prices.

Nothing can be said yet regarding Easter prices or Easter prospects in the cut flower line. Plant growers are busy, however, locating orders for Rambler roses, lilies, azaleas and other standard stock, and all are greatly elated over the advance contracts already secured. Wm. Edgar, who has the finest acacias ever seen in this market, is receiving calls from all over New England for them and states that the call for Begonia Gloire de Lorraine surpasses all expectations. It now looks as though stock of this popular plant would again be scarce this year.

The sensational park department investigation is going on with sessions daily now and the reported proceedings make very interesting reading. As the motives of the investigators are gradually exposed by the counsel for the park commissioners, ex-Mayor Mathews, contempt for the entire affair grows, and the grotesque alliance of saloon keepers, sentimentalists, discharged employes, politicians and misfit doctors will, in all probability, get more than it anticipated before it gets through.

Horticultural Hall has again been invaded by thieves, this time the library room being the scene, and two owners are mourning the loss of their overcoats. This is a sure sign of a late spring.

The writer took home sample blooms of the new carnations exhibited at the time of Mr. Ward's lecture here, to test their keeping qualities. Today, after eleven days keeping, Olympia is in perfect condition and better, if anything, then when received.

W. A. Twombly has been confined at home for some weeks with a very painful abscess on the spine.

The firm of N. S. Wax & Son has dissolved by mutual consent, Henry Wax retiring, and the business at 56 Winter street will be continued by N. S. Wax.

W. H. Elliott has gone to Old Point Comfort to recuperate.

Spring exhibition is on this week. Full account in another column.

F. L. Harris, who has had charge of the H. H. Hunnewell estate at Wellesley for forty-six years, has resigned, and on May 1 will retire, to take a well-earned and much-needed rest.

E. N. Pierce was presented with a handsome gold watch and chain at his home in Waverley by a party of 175 members of the Boston Market Gardeners' Association on March 13.

J. H. Woodford, chairman of the committee of arrangements of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, is dangerously ill with pneumonia.

Crocuses and snowdrops are already blooming in sunny corners.

QUIETUDE PERVADES THE CITY OF BROTHERLY LOVE.—PRICES WEAKENING SLIGHTLY.—SPRING SHOW OF THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—SOME EXCELLENT EXHIBITS.—LIST OF THE AWARDS.—VARIOUS NOTES OF INTEREST.

Things are moving along quietly in this Quaker City. The only thing that might have caused a flurry was the spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, but the "saddest of all" lines apply here with great force, and the week passes without event. Prices are softening a trifle but scarcely enough to change the quoted list of last week.

Beauties are becoming a trifle more plentiful and $5 per dozen is now asked for the best and this is shaded even full twenty per cent to the slow buyer. The extra teas bring $10. Carnations are still a little stiff at $2 for anything worth having. Bulb stock is plentiful at from $3 to $4.

The spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was probably as good as might be expected and got all the patronage it deserved. Perhaps we expect too much, but we think not. In these progressive days, when there is so much life and activity, there should be a little mite from each active member contributed to help on the good work, but only a comparatively few take interest and to them, of course, should be given all praise.

There were some good things at the show, including some fine specimen ferns, two plants of gleichenia, by Thos Long. We question if their equals can be found in this country. A new double pink petunia, Perfection, raised by E. Banyard & Son and exhibited by H. F. Michell, was commented on by good judges as being ahead of anything in that line that they had yet seen. Joseph McGreggor staged some fine plants of zonale geraniums which were much admired. Joseph Heacock exhibited some of his premium palms, which, for perfection of everything that is required in palms, could not well be improved upon. They received a certificate of merit for culture.

Hugh Graham made an elegant display in the center of the hall with some of his electric light ball room fixtures, set in a circle, in the center of which was a stand surmounted by a fine Boston fern and decorated with palms and cut flowers. Cut flowers and smilax were filled in baskets at the base of the lamps. This, together with choice ferns and palms and two fine plants of Acacia pubescens, made a very artistic arrangement, which was very much admired. J. Kift & Son made a display of their adjustable flower vase holders, showing their effectiveness in mirror and other forms of decoration. They also produced a trailing rose effect with laurel leaves and branches, producing the effect of a large rose climbing about the wall and windows to a height of twenty feet or more. A rubber-capped vase on each rose kept the flowers fresh for some days.

The rose competition for the special prizes was quite keen. There were six vases of twenty-five Beauties, four-foot stems. The committee of judges, Messrs. A. B. Cartledge, L. Pennock, George Craig, Rob't Crawford and Rob't Kitt, were the gentlemen who offered the prizes. They voted by the entry number for their choice without consulting each other and, although all the roses were fine, only two obtained votes, one having three for first and two for second, the other two firsts and three seconds Myers & Santmann were first and Joseph Heacock second.

Other entries were made by G. Anderson, J. E. and A. L. Peunock, A Fahrenwold and J. Burton. Joseph Bevis was first for fifty Bridesmaids; Myers & Santmann, second. First for Brides was won by Jos. Bevis; second by Jos. Heacock. John Burton won the Meteor prize, while John Savage was given first for any other color for a fine vase of Mme. de Watteville. Scott & Son exhibited a vase of fine Liberty and the new hybrid tea, Robert Scott, which was given a certificate of merit.

H. Weber & Sons won a certificate of merit for Genevieve Lord, while Robert Craig & Son won a silver medal for the best 100 pink with a vase of fine Ethel Crocker. A fine exhibit of the Marquis was received at 5 p. m., three hours after the judging was completed. They were very fine flowers and were much admired.

Among the other prize-winners were the following:

Begonias, rex varieties: By John W. McCleary, gardener to William Weightman, School lane, second prize; on azaleas, specimens plant, Class 5, first prize.

Ferns, specimen plant: Exhibited by Thomas Long, gardener to George W. Childs Drexel, Bryn Mawr, first prize. Croton, two plants: By Joseph Hurley, gardener to James M. Rhodes, were awarded a certificate of merit. The marguerites, in this section, three plants, won first prize, and the collection of flowering plants gained a certificate of merit.

Narcissus (daffodils), three varieties, Joseph Hurley, first prize, who also took second prize. Lilium Harrisii, six plants, Joseph Hurley, first prize, and on asparagus a certificate of merit. Narcissus, single varieties, Golden Spur, Empress, King Umberto, Sir Watkin, Henry Irving, Countess of Annesley and Emperor, by Joseph McGregor, gardener to Mrs. Thomas A. Scott, Lansdowne, took first prize.

Violets, four pans, John McCleary, gardener to William Weightman, School lane, first prize. Violets, Joseph Hurley, gardener to James M. Rhodes, Ardmore, second prize. Pansies and hyacinths, by Joseph Hurley, first prize.

Ivy geranium, by John Hobson, gardener to Edward A. Schmidt, Radnor, certificate of merit. Zonale geraniums, six new varieties, by Joseph McGregor, first prize; also first prize on lily, specimen plant; zonale geraniums, specimen plant, and zonale geraniums, six plants.

Primula Chinensis, six plants, by John McGowen, gardener to W. M. Bayard, Germantown, first prize; and second prize to John T. Whittaker, gardener to Charles F. Lennig, Andalusia. Primroses, English hybrid, first prize to John McCleary, who also secured first prize on daises.

Roses, specimen plant, by George W. Brown, gardener to Robert G. Carson, Chestnut Hill, first prize; also genistas, three plants, first prize. Cyclamen, three best plants, by John T. Whittaker, gardener to Charles F. Lennig, Andalusia, first prize; John McCleary took second prize.

Calceolaria hybrida, first prize to Wm. Kleindinz, gardener to P. A. B. Widener, Ogontz. Hyacinths, twelve best blooms, by Joseph McGregor, gardener to Mrs. Thomas A. Scott, Lansdowne, first prize.

In Class 44, tulips, six pans and six varieties, first prize went to John McGregor; special prize on hyacinths, best twelve blooms, second prize went to John McCleary and first prize to Joseph Hurley.

Take it on the whole the show was pleasing to look at but on account of the poor advertising was not as well patronized as it should have been.

Robert Craig has returned from his western trip and is telling, with some reservation, of the good things he saw while there. There are many good things, notably carnations and chrysanthemums, that the west has given us, not to speak of the good citizens, some of whom can quote scripture. There are also some gilt edged eastern novelties, one of which is ripening up nicely and will soon be placed on view.

Robert Scott & Son are busy these days packing Liberty plants. Mr. Scott says that, although they have had good success with their cuttings and grafts, they cannot keep pace with the orders. This rose is certainly growing in popularity and will, without doubt, become one of the standards.

Chas. D. Ball has received a shipment of iron gutters from G. M. Garland, Des Plaines, Ill., for his new range of houses.

In town: Benjamin Durfee and Mr. Clark, of Small & Sons, Washington; Sam'l Feast, Baltimore; Wm. Burnham and Mr. Reikert, New York; H. Weber; Oakland, Md.

LENT HAS LOST ITS TERRORS.—NO CONGESTION OF THE MARKET AND EASTER IN SIGHT.—POOR STOCK MOVES SLOWLY.—VARIOUS ITEMS.

Lent is slipping away nicely, without having strained the flower business very severely. The anticipated congestion has not yet materialized, thanks to the weather, partly, and, with the exception of the bulbous flowers, which have had slow work all season, violets, which have been in over-supply for weeks, and roses, which are beginning to drag in the lower grades, there is nothing that can be complained of in reason. White material still has the advantage, white carnations especially. American Beauty begins to feel the pressure from Jacqs and Brunners, but these are coming in quite lightly as yet. Cheap grades of roses are hard to unload, even the Greeks spurning them.

The Market Florists' Association met on March 15 and voted to commence spring business at Clinton Market on Saturday, May 24

Much interest attaches to the coming exhibition of the rose society. Many strangers are expected from all directions.

T. W. Lydecker, of Englewood, has built a house 20x117, especially for American Beauty. It is even-span with the walk all around the sides.

Southern daffodils are being sent to the market in crates and, while they about ruin the local product, it is not easy to dispose of them at any price.

J. K. Allen has been receiving elegant Jacqs for two weeks, the best grade selling for $25 a hundred.

Regular auction sales have begun at the down town salesrooms and will be held every Tuesday and Friday hereafter.

Visiting New York: E. M. Wood, Boston; Carl Jurgens and Carl Jurgens, Jr., Newport, R. I.

Oceanic, N. J.

The Monmouth County Horticultural Society held its regular semi-monthly meeting March 16. The proceedings were of much interest to the large number present. The ball committee reported all bills paid and a surplus of over $40 on hand. Short speeches were made by Prof. C. H. Walling, T. S. Barkuloo, H. A Kettel, N. Butterbach and others. T. S. Barkuloo was appointed a committee of one to take steps for the incorporation of the society. The secretary was instructed to notify every member to be present at the next meeting for the transaction of some very important business.

THE CASE OF THE VIOLET.—A STORY OF UPS AND DOWNS.—AN EXPERT OPINION.—A SEVERE SHORTAGE OF WHITE CARNATIONS.—LILIES SAID TO BE PLENTIFUL FOR EASTER.—AFFAIRS AT POEHLMANN'S.—WEBERS TO HAVE A FINE PLACE.—AT REINBERG'S.—PROSPECTIVE BUILDING AT HINSDALE.—PERSONAL MENTION HERE AND THERE.

The violet has been the only item on the cut flower list which has not been aggressive for the past ten days. To be sure, values are generally lower than they were a few weeks ago but there has been no over-supply except of the bunches of blue. With the beginning of last week conditions were such that violets moved well at fair figures, but the first sign of frost cut off the market and during the continuance of the cold spell there were unwieldy quantities in all the commission houses, with the result that a great many growers will be disappointed with the returns which they will receive, but producers should understand that, at this season particularly, the weather is a most important factor in the violet market and that icy blasts always penetrate to the heart of violet values. With the beginning of this week things brightened somewhat and the return of spring on Thursday made a better market, but at no high figures. E. E. Pieser is of the opinion that the people have had enough of the violet for the season and that hence forth the sales will make a comparatively low average. Business has been good this week and roses and carnations have moved rapidly. Carnation supplies have been less than the demand. There has been a "famine" on white and all others except Scott and the reds have been short, so that prices in general have far exceeded those of the corresponding period of last year. Among the specialties nearly everything is doing fairly well, but pansies have rather hung back recently. All eyes are now turned toward Easter with a prospect of only fair supply. There promises to be goodly numbers of lilies available but there seems to be no considerable stock of pot plants in this market on which the retailers can rely in case of shortage of cut blooms.

Everything in the Poehlmann Bros.' thirty-three houses is looking well, including a large lot of longiflorums which will be in for Easter. They also have a quantity of marguerites which will be in. They have done splendidly with these, having sold large numbers at Christmas. This firm is one of the largest bulb forcers in this market, and among the many things they will have for Easter will be a big crop of tulips. Their place is ten years old and has been conducted by the three brothers up to two weeks ago, when Adolph Poehlmann retired.

When A. Grossman has finished rebuilding his range of glass north of town the Weber brothers will again take hold of the place, having made a five years' lease. They will have about 30,000 feet of glass, devoting it to roses, Beauties and teas, and J. A. Budlong will handle the cut. Ernest Weber is, in the interim, with Sam. Pierce, and Fred Weber is assisting Grossman in the work of reconstruction.

Peter Reinberg has determined to put up his 1900 addition adjoining his present range instead of at some distance, as was contemplated. He has the iron gutter up, much of the lumber and hundreds of boxes of glass on the ground, and will rush the work of erection as soon as the frost is out. He is meeting with splendid success with his carnations this year and is selling large quantities of cuttings.

Bassett & Washburn are figuring on duplicating the carnation house 30x580 put up last year. While the matter is as yet undetermined, if any building is done it will be on this pattern, as Mr. Bassett considers this the best house they have on the place.

Phil. Scott called on several members of the trade this week, en route from Buffalo to Denver, where he is to take charge of the store of the Park Floral Co. He was accompanied by Michael Bloy's wife and child, Mr. Bloy having preceded Mr. Scott by three months.

O. W. Frese has taken charge of the sales for George Reinberg, succeeding Robert Northam, who goes with the Weiland-Risch Co. Mr. Frese's retail store on State street will hereafter be conducted by his brother, H. C. Frese.

Miss Grace Todd has resumed charge of E. C. Amling's books and cash drawer after an absence of two months. Miss Todd is an adept at handling a commission florist's accounts.

John Ring, at one time a rose grower for Vaughan, but recently employed at potting by Bassett & Washburn, was killed by the cars on March 18.

C. L. Washburn is at home from West Baden, nicely rested up for the Easter rush. He says he has never known business to be so good through Lent.

Early Monday morning fire did $170 damage in the retail store of Chas. Wieglick, 239 North State street. There was insurance of $1,000.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports that the retailers are taking to mahonia leaves. They have just received another large shipment.

Randall's is a cheerful place these days, and the Bowmanville rose growers are correspondingly happy.

F. F. Benthey says he has never known a year in which carnations have brought the growers such good returns through Lent.

Adam Zender is preparing to build three new rose houses, for which he will use Garland's iron gutter.

H. B. Beatty, of Oil City, Pa., treasurer of the S. A. F., is in town for a few days in quest of recreation.

McKellar & Winterson are offering flowering plants for the Easter trade.

The "Old Reliable" isn't saying a word but C. M. Dickinson wears a look of contentment which speaks of good business.

TRADE ACTIVE AND CARNATIONS VERY SCARCE.—AN UNUSUAL CONDITION AT THIS SEASON.—EASTER PROSPECTS.—MEETING OF THE ENGLEMANN CLUB.—SPECIMENS OF BOTANICAL INTEREST.—PERSONAL AND OTHER MATTERS.

Business has been good during the week with all the retail stores, the demand being principally for white stock. Carnations have been in heavy call and there seems to be an unusual shortage for this time of the year. Some of the older florists say they never saw carnations so scarce and so much in demand at this season as they are just now. Roses are more plentiful, except American Beauties. Long-stemmed Beauties still go at a premium; $4 to $6 per dozen, wholesale, is not considered too high for perfect flowers. There is an over-supply of Meteors, as the demand runs more for white, pink and yellow. The crush of violets seems to have eased up a little, as there are not so many on the street; consequently the demand is heavier in the stores and the prices have advanced. The florists are now looking up stock for Easter and the prospects are for a good all-around business. The cut flower part will greatly depend upon the supply. As Easter comes late this year the chances are there will be plenty of stock in the market and prices will not be as high as has been the case in former years. The greenhouse men all show a fine stock of plants but it looks as if Harrisii lilies will be scarce.

The Englemann Botanical Club held its winter meeting on March 17. The exhibition proved a very attractive affair; it was well attended. Winter specimens were on exhibition, including twigs of trees, roots and early flowers, mosses, lichens and fungi. These had been secured from the immediate vicinity of St. Louis. There were also pussy willows from the Ozarks. The winter growth of plants and shrubs, also the several varieties of mosses and lichens, proved of considerable educational value to the visitors. The most interesting of all the specimens were those illustrating the process of germination of corn, peas, beans, potatoes and other specimens, which had been placed in water about a fortnight and which had sprouted. The various steps were explained by Miss Hirta Toeppen, of the Mary Institute. Another feature was the specimens of native woods, quarter sawed and showing their natural colors. Specimens of the common and of the poisonous weeds were numerous, for the club is anxious to instill in the minds of the young a wholesome awe of the poisonous varieties. Many of the public school teachers accompanied by their pupils were in attendance. The club has decided to hold another exhibition during the month of May.

The St. Louis bowling team has not yet decided when they will visit Chicago, but think it will be some time after Easter, as most of the boys are too busy now. In the meantime they expect to get well into practice, so the Chicago bowlers had better get down to work.

Mr. P. D. Hauser, of P. D. Hauser & Son, San Antonio, Tex., passed through St. Louis on his way to Palestine. Mr. Hauser is traveling for pleasure.

Those Frenchmen.

The French Journal des Roses has made a discovery and gives up nearly half a page to comments, under the title of "New American Roses." We translate somewhat freely:

"The horticultural journals of Chicago and New York announce with a grand flourish of trumpets the introduction to commerce this spring of the new roses Liberty and Meteor, two marvelous novelties the merits of which will be exceptional, as are those of all things which come to us from America!!!

"The variety Liberty produces roses deliciously perfumed like the American Beauty; they are paler in summer but in autumn the color is much like the deep crimson of the Gruss an Teplitz, of which the Journal des Roses published a colored plate in September. The rose Meteor produces a marvelous amount of bloom during August, September and October, its flowers surpassing General Jacqueminot. * * * It is probable that these are hybrid remontant roses. The future will show us whether they are worthy of the praises which the Yankees are showering upon them. Buyers be careful!!! Remember the rose William Francis Bennett!!!"

Who can fathom the depths (and shallows) of a Frenchman. Here is a venerable horticultural paper which does not know that the Meteor rose has been grown by the million here for years, which does not know that Liberty is not an American rose, that William Francis Bennett was not an American rose and that none of these is a hybrid remontant.

Chrysanthemum Judging in England.

The English Chrysanthemum Society has recently adopted a scale of points for judging chrysanthemum blooms. Three points each are allowed for breadth, depth, form, solidity, color and finish, making a total of eighteen points. A variety must score fifteen points to receive a certificate. A reward of merit will be given when the score is twelve points or more and less than fifteen and commendation for those scoring nine to eleven points.

For market or commercial varieties the scale is entirely different being as follows: Habit of growth, three points; freedom of bloom, three points; color, three points; suitability for cutting, three points; total, twelve points.

We note that Mr. Molyneux displays considerable pessimism when speaking of the difficulties to be met with when working under the new scale.

The Return of the Rosebud.

Until the present season, for a number of years back one might have searched every flower store in New York, Boston and Philadelphia, yet failed to find one bud of either Bon Silene or Safrano roses and still there are many of us who can remember the time when these two varieties furnished the principal supply of roses for the cut flower trade of the country. In those days of semi-double varieties a full blown rose was regarded with something of the same feeling as the sleepy carnation and scentless violet are to-day but with the advent of the more double-flowered sorts a change was wrought in this regard and the appearance of the Mermet, Bride and American Beauty signalized the downfall of the old favorites whose hold on the popular favor had already been weakened by the growing popularity of Niels, Jacqs and hybrid perpetuals.

Then began in earnest the craze for bigness and in the scramble the beauty and appropriateness of the little rose buds for many purposes, was forgotten by the fickle flower fanciers and it was not long before the sweet little Bon Silene to which, more than any other, the flower trade owed its prosperity, forsaken by growers and buyers alike, soon disappeared from the marts.

But there are signs of a renaissance. Occasionally one sees a handful of the old-fashioned buds on the wholesaler's counter and they are eagerly snapped up. Growers may be heard occasionally debating as to the advisability of acceding to the request of the retailer that they "put in" a house or two of the old favorites for the accommodation of his critical trade and if convinced that the present fancy has sufficient depth to it to warrant the risk, they are very likely to try it. It is encouraging to note that the demand comes not alone from the beaux and belles of the long ago, to whom the bright color and fragrance have a delightful reminiscent charm, but from the up-to-date flower buyers who, thoroughly tired of the monotony of Brides, Maids and Meteors, are ready to welcome anything in the way of a change and from those too, whose purchasing of flowers and use of flowers is guided by artistic taste and who are glad to see revived once more the refined sentiment that has been buried for so many years under the despotism of fashion.

Heating a Hotbed.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I have a hotbed 6x13 feet, covered by four sash 3½x6 feet, which I have heated with horse manure covered by four inches of soil. How shall I pipe this to heat it with hot water to above the freezing point in zero weather? What size of pipe shall I use and how should they be placed?

H. F. R.

A hotbed six feet wide can be heated by running a 2-inch hot water pipe along the north side, across the end and back on the south side. If a hotbed is to be constructed with the idea of heating it by means of hot water, it will be best to have it even span, sloping to east and west. For heating such a hotbed, a 2½-inch flow pipe can be run along under the ridge. At the farther end of the bed 2-inch pipes can be taken off in either direction and connect with one 2-inch return pipe on each side of the bed.

L. R. T.

Hot Water Under Pressure.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I see in the AMERICAN FLORIST of February 17 that C. W. Ward refers to hot water under pressure. Please explain how to run the heating system under pressure. I have five houses with one large main pipe running through the shed, each house being connected by a small pipe. I now use hot water, feeding the system from a tank twelve feet high. Can this system be arranged for hot water under pressure? How should the pipes be located?

W. S. J.

A hot water system can be very readily placed under pressure if the pipes run down hill. The use of a riveted, boiler-iron expansion tank is desirable. This should be connected with the highest part of the system, and the overflow pipe may be connected either with the top or the side of the tank. A safety valve should be placed upon the overflow pipe and between the safety valve and the tank there should be a vacuum valve. The safety valve should be set to work at from twenty to thirty pounds, as if there is no relief for the expansion of the water an explosion will result, which might be more serious than a steam explosion. When an open hot-water system is used it is not possible to raise the water in the boiler above 212°, but with a closed system the formation of steam is prevented, and the temperature of the water can be greatly increased, but as there is great danger from an explosion it should only be used in strong systems, and then the pressure should be kept well within the danger limit. When hot water under pressure is used there is a considerable saving in the amount of piping, but it is less economical in fuel than an open system. While it has some advantages in large establishments, the principal use of a closed system is to help in maintaining the desired temperature in severe weather where the radiation is not sufficient to do it with an open system.

OBITUARY.

ISAAC HICKS.

The Quaker nurseryman is dead. At the ripe age of 85 years this pioneer of the nursery trade on Long Island succumbed to an attack of paralysis on March 13, a sudden closing coming to a long, prosperous but peaceful career. Mr. Hicks was born in a house still standing at Westbury, and came of the sturdy Quaker stock which was identified with the East India trade in the early days of New York. His is a long-lived family, many of its members having passed the ninetieth milestone and several have become centenarians before reaching the end of their journey upon life's highway. It was in 1853 that Isaac Hicks established the Westbury Nurseries, now conducted by his son and grandson, Edward Hicks and Henry Hicks. For many years the founder carried on the business, applying the teachings of the brotherhood of Friends to all his dealings and building a trade as unassailable as his own reputation. In recent years one of the specialties of the establishment has been the transplanting of large trees, and many a modern mansion on Long Island is surrounded by splendid specimens which stood for many years in this old nursery. Since laying down business cares Mr. Hicks has given free rein to his inclination to reproduce on canvas his closest friends, the flowers and birds, for he had the artistic tastes and talents of his forefathers.

The Seed Trade.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres.; ALBERT McCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

SUCH items as peas and beans as are in apparent surplus are weakening considerably in price.

ONION set prices show an upward tendency. Since the warmer weather set in the demand has been quite brisk, and the probabilities are that the prices will rule much higher before long.

WE learn that some of the experiment stations are now taking to the free distribution of plants and seeds. We trust their efforts in this direction, carried on at public expense, are confined to commodities not readily obtainable through the regular merchants.

The Government Seed Contract.

On March 20, Secretary James Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture, placed the government seed order for 1901 with the New York Market Gardeners' Association, which executed the order in 1899. The following bids were received:

Ullathorne Seed Co., Memphis	$ 67,500.00
New York Market Gardeners Ass'n	68,874.12
Chas. Parker, Santa Clara, Cal	75 000.00
Henry Phillips Seed Co., Toledo	77.696.01
J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York	94,098.00
O. H. Will & Co., Bismarck, N. D.	134,504.34

The bid of the Ullathorne Seed Company was withdrawn and the contract given to the next lowest bidder. The order calls for 15,086,968 packets of seeds. Of this number 13,936,000 are vegetable seeds, 1,000,568 flower seeds and 150,400 field and lawn grass seeds.

The Maryland Seed Bill.

The seed men of the Chamber of Commerce are anxiously waiting to hear from Mr. Duncan, chairman of the city delegation at Annapolis, who has been requested to appoint a time and day to hear the opposition to the bill regulating the sale of seed which has been introduced in the Maryland Legislature. Seed dealers say that the passage of this bill would kill their business. It is claimed that the object of the bill is for the protection of the farmers, and provides that with every sale of seed in quantities of more than one pound a certificate must be given by the dealer from whom it is purchased indicating the percentage of germinating seed, the percentage of purity and the percentage of seeds of weeds.

The bill also provides for an annual appropriation of $1,000 to the Maryland Agricultural College for the purpose of testing the sample sent by the dissatisfied purchaser. The seed men claim that it is almost a matter of impossibility to live up to the requirement of this bill, and not only does it affect them, but also the country store dealers, who also sell seed.—Baltimore News, March 17, 1900.

Nashua, N. H.

Geo. E. Buxton has a bench of white antirrhinums that is superb, a perfect little forest of spikes about two and a half feet high. Grown as he does it, this is one of the finest of florists' flowers. Carnations are also fat and clean and there will be a good crop of lilies for Easter.

August Gaedeke & Co. are doing a very heavy local business. The houses are filled with roses, carnations, lilies and bedding plants. On each support all through the houses a swainsonia is trained and there's money in it.

Judge Hoitt gave a reception to Prof. Louis C. Elson on the occasion of his musical lecture on the evening of March 16. The entertainment was lavish, as always where Judge Hoitt is concerned. About sixty prominent gentlemen of Nashua were present and Boston was represented by F. R. Mathison and W. J. Stewart.

J. R. Paul has resigned his position as superintendent of the cemetery to take charge of James Mackey's estate on Long Island.

Toledo, O.

Nelson G. Trefrey is corresponding with General Leonard Wood, at Havana, with a view to being authorized by the government to plant eucalyptus trees about Havana as a preventative of yellow fever, a matter in which Mr. Trefrey takes great interest.

George Heinl has greatly improved his already fine store by adding a suitable office and a decorative plant house built in the best style.

Bernard Schramm is growing some fine Harrisii lilies. The stalks are about three feet tall and many of them bear eight flowers.

Mrs. E. Suder is growing some very fine carnations. She anticipates good business in cut flowers until after Easter.

Davis & McGee are cutting some fine roses and report the demand equalling the supply in all lines.

George Bayer is making daily consignments of cut flowers to Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago. J. E. K.

MERIDEN, CONN.—R. W. Barrow has moved into new quarters at 62 West Main street.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Timothy McCarthy, superintendent of Swan Point Cemetery, delivered a very instructive address before the Beacon Hill Improvement Association, on the evening of March 13, the subject being "Tree Planting on Our Public Streets." A number of beautiful colored lantern slides were used in illustration of the points commented upon by the speaker.

FOR THE

Special Spring Number

Vaughan's New Upright White Branching Aster.

In habit of growth this new Aster resembles the Truffaut Pæony-flowered type, but the plants grow from 10 to 12 inches taller. The flowers are large, very double, pure white, and of the true "Semple" type. The plants grow about 30 inches high, and produce from twenty to twenty-five flowers, which are borne on stems from 20 to 25 inches long. Its upright habit admits of close planting, and it will attain full growth when set only 10 to 16 inches apart. The growing of many plants in a small space is a decided advantage when raised under glass. Per oz., $1.00; half oz., 60c; ¼ oz., 35c.

Victoria Aster—Vaughan's Improved

—This is undoubtedly the finest Aster in cultivation, and the most profitable class for Florists, for cut flowers and pot culture.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W. J PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

PARRY'S Pomona Nurseries, of Parry, N. J., have contracted for the growing of considerable numbers of Keifer pear trees at Orlando, Fla.

THE Forest and Water Association of California has planted 60,000 tree seeds this season. They were mostly Pinus ponderosa but 1,000 seeds of Sequoia gigantea were planted.

M. MCDONALD, president of the Oregon Wholesale Nursery Co., reports that trade in Montana is heavier than ever. Fruit raising has become a leading industry there and his company has booked one order for 15,000 trees and another for 10,000.

THE Ellwanger & Barry Nursery Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $200,000 and the Ellwanger & Barry Realty Company has been incorporated for $500,000. The directors of the companies are identical. They are George Ellwanger, William C. Barry, George H. Ellwanger, Charles P. Barry and William D. Ellwanger, of Rochester, and John H. Barry, of New York city.

ROCHESTER, N Y.—The season starts out as an exceedingly busy one for the nurserymen here. Ellwanger & Barry have already shipped ten carloads of trees, shrubs, etc., to the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo. The same firm has just been awarded a contract for furnishing several thousand dollars' worth of nursery stock for a fine estate on the Hudson river, the order including over 30,000 trees, shrubs and plants.

KLOKNER NOT YET SUPERINTENDENT OF PARKS.—THE APPOINTMENT HELD UP.—A NEW FIRM OF RETAILERS.

It was generally understood that the Park Commission would appoint a superintendent at a meeting February 20 but several meetings passed without an appointment being made. The daily papers announced last week that Alexander Klokner would be appointed at the next meeting and illustrated sketches were published. However the appointment was not made and the Board has given out that the appointment has been tabled for one month. The indications are that they fail to agree and the April election may change the make-up of the Board.

H. P. Mole & Co, 613 Grand avenue, is the name and address of an establishment recently opened for business. The company is supposed to be William Whitnall. C. B. W.

Lynn and Thereabout.

With Easter but a few weeks distant most of the growers find themselves with about all they want to attend to. I am of the impression that a good lot of material will be in fine shape at the right time. However, carnations may be a little off. Violets will be plentiful and roses, I think, will be in fair quantities. Most of the Harrisii and longiflorum lilies hereabout are looking very good. Of plants for spring bedding, a scarcity of geraniums is very evident. This is due to the early frost, mention of which I made last fall. I have it on very good authority that one of our largest growers is seeking a suitable location on which to erect an extensive range of glass, his present quarters having become too cramped.

Wm. Miller and daughter are spending and extended vacation in Florida, making a side trip to Cuba, visiting Havana, Matanzas and other points of interest. Mr. Miller is very enthusiastic over the island.

Wm. Walke, of Salem, Mass., has a fine house of Bride and Bridesmaid roses that promise a good crop at Easter time. He is also showing a fine lot of Harrisii, azaleas and spiræas.

Gibbs Bros. have their houses in fine shape and are looking for a good trade at their down-town store.

W. F. Newhall is cutting a fine lot of violets as well as carnations. The call in most cases this winter has exceeded the cut.

H. G. Wyman & Son are in good shape and have no complaints to make regarding trade thus far.

E. G. Blaney is showing a fine lot of Harrisii lilies and other bulbous stock for Easter and also expects a fair crop of carnations, especially Daybreak.

W. F. Abrams, of Haverhill, Mass., will build this coming season two houses 11x100. He is a recent addition to the Haverhill craft but seems to be getting there all right. TAP.

SCRANTON, PA.—Hillside Home, for the poor, is to have a new iron frame greenhouse, the contract for which has been awarded to Hitchings & Co, whose bid was $3,975.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.—William Gray, who has been superintendent of the grounds at the state hospital for many years, has resigned his position and will devote his entire time hereafter to his florist business at Webb's Crossing.

50,000 MANETTI. 50,000

I have some very fine Irish and English Manetti Stocks on hand for inside grafting and can make immediate delivery.

TRADE QUIET.—THE WORST STORM OF THE SEASON.—GOOD STOCK FOR EASTER.

The trade is quiet and stock excellent and plentiful. On March 15 we had the worst storm of the winter. The snow and sleet came down so fast and it was so cold that it formed solid sheets of ice and greenhouses fared very badly in the way of broken glass. It is an ill wind that blows no one good and in this case the cold weather has kept back some things that would have come in bloom too soon for Easter. Some growers thought their Lilium Harrisii would all be in bloom long before Easter.

J. R. Freeman has quite a number of cyclamens which will be in good shape for Easter, also some fine Crimson Rambler roses.

John H. Ley has a number of fine Crimson and Yellow Ramblers and genistas. His Pteris Deweyana and Nephrolepis Washingtoniensis are in fine condition.

Denver.

GERAGHTY TO GO TO SOUTH AFRICA.—PLANS COMMERCIAL CONQUEST.—GRIMSHAW RETURNS TO NEW YORK.

George M. Geraghty, well and favorably known as manager of the floral department of Daniels & Fisher and under the old regime as assistant manager for the firm, has severed his connection with the firm and has left Denver. He has decided to go to South Africa. His plan is to represent several American commercial houses.

We also have to report the departure for New York of Robert E. Grimshaw, formerly of the Park Floral Company's store. Mr Grimshaw earned the reputation, while here, of being the best decorator in town.

DENVER.

Buffalo.

BUSINESS CONTINUES QUIET. — SEVERE WEATHER CONDITIONS.—FAREWELL TO PHIL SCOTT.—NOTES AND VISITORS.

Trade is about the same as last week; "quiet" is the word. Supply is fairly good but the rapid changes in the weather have made flowers more scarce than they should be. From severe snow storms and zero weather down to a thaw in less than twelve hours makes it hard on every one.

On Thursday, March 15, a little informal party was given by Mr. and Mrs. Scott for their son, Philip, previous to his departure for Denver. It was a very enjoyable evening, with songs, violin, piano and flute selections, together with a slight-of-hand performance by another gentleman. After supper a few remarks were made by Wm. Scott, G. Foggs and Chas. Spitzer, while Messrs. Kasting and Adams spoke for the trade, expressing the general regret at Mr. Scott's departure. That young gentleman responded fittingly, assuming his usual Dan Daly attitude, and thanked all for their good wishes Recent visitors: C. S. Van Waveren, of Segers Brothers; J. Austin Shaw and S. B. Smiley.

W. J. Palmer, Sr., Wm. Scott and B. S. Meyers were Buffalo's representatives at the recent Toronto carnation show.

W. A.

MONROE, MICH —Mrs. F. S. Sterling is receiving weekly shipments of cut carnations from Saginaw, via Detroit. She is also interested in the Lake View Hotel, a fine summer resort near here.

LAFAYETTE, IND — Herman Roth is planning to erect a handsome residence and to add to his glass to the extent of three new houses, the order for which has been given to a Chicago firm.

Absolutely the finest pink carnation ever offered the trade. It has been in full bloom since Sept. 15th without any stop. It is in full bloom today and as full of buds as many varieties that do not bloom until about this time.

It is a good, strong grower, and plants procured any time in April will give you good results next winter.

25 for $2.50; 100 for $10.00; 250 for $18.75; 1000 for $75.00.

CRABB & HUNTER, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Chestnut Hill, Pa.

The monthly meeting of the Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society was held on March 13, with double the attendance of the previous meeting. The exhibits far exceeded the expectation of the committee.

The schedule committee reported the schedule for the fall show, of which printed copies are ready for distribution. The premiums offered are as follows: For chrysanthemum plants $89; chrysanthemum blooms $57; rose blooms $17; carnation blooms $18; violet blooms $3; miscellaneous plants and blooms $42; amateur class $9.50; vegetables, society's premiums, $23; vegetables, etc., seedsmen's premiums, $138, making the total, less duplicates, $377.50.

An interesting paper on mushroom growing was presented by Paul Reinhardt and will be discussed next meeting through the question box. Seven gentlemen were proposed for membership and premiums were awarded to Chas. F. Kreuger for vase of American Beauties, to Wm. G. Santman for vase of Bridesmaid, to John McGowen, gardener to Wm. Bayard, for specimen cinerarias; to John McCleary, gardener to Wm. Weightman, for violets; to Wm. Boyle, gardener to Randal Morgan, for plate of mushrooms; to Geo. W. Brown, gardener to R. N. Carson, for specimen Bougainvillea glabra Sanderiana, to Harry Harris, gardener to Mrs. Fell, for squash.

A specimen orchid exhibited by John McCleary and a collection of antirrhinums and specimen Phains grandiflorus exhibited by Frank Gould, gardener to John T. Morris, were highly commended. Special mention was made of a vase of American Beauty roses and plant of Cineraria Sutton's stellata exhibited by John McCleary, cinerarias exhibited by G. W. Brown, vase of roses by Wm. Wilkie, gardener to R. S. Mason; Begonia Gloire de Lorraine by H. Reuter, gardener to C. W. Henry; eupatorium by F. Smith, gardener to Miss Nixon; violets by Richard Moore, gardener to Jas. Cheston; a very fine Cypripedium Lawrenceanum by M. Punch, gardener to R. LeBoutillier; mushrooms by Paul Reinhardt, gardener to H. T. Mason; collection of roses by Robt. C. Carey, gardener to E. T. Price; Brussels sprouts by Frank Gould. The most gratifying part of the exhibition was that almost every exhibitor showed in three or more classes.

ROBT. G. CAREY, Sec'y.

THE IDEAL PINK CARNATION Genevieve Lord

Fills the bill. The ladies declare it is just right in color. We claim it has the best stem of any Carnation. That it will rank very near the top in size. That its odor is very sweet. That it is the most profitable Carnation we ever grew. That it has an individuality all its own. Customers recognize it at a glance. There is not a great deal left that is wanting in this variety. If you want to make money, plant it. But don't delay, for stock for delivery prior to March 20 is all sold. It is an easy, rapid grower, however, and the April and May deliveries will make large, fine plants. Some of the finest plants we have are from cuttings from sand planted in the field June 1st. Remember all sold until March 20th. If you wait too long the chances are that we will be sold out of stock. Make yourself safe by ordering at once.

College Point Notes.

Rambler roses will undoubtedly take a leading position in the list of Easter flowering plants this year. Crimson Rambler will, of course, lead, but the white, yellow and pink sorts are likely to make a better impression than the experience of last season indicated, judging by their appearance at the present time as seen at Mr. Schultheis' place. They are well covered with buds and the foliage, while less massive and rich than that of the crimson favorite, is abundant and clean. Buds of the yellow flowering variety that are already opened are of good, distinct color, owing, Mr. Schultheis says, to the fact of their having been kept in a cool temperature and constantly well shaded. The number and size of the plants as well as the many forms in which they have been trained here are remarkable. There are standards, pyramids, fan-shaped and cross-shaped trellisses, etc., in great variety of form and size. One of the prettiest arrangements is where the plant is grown low and drooping, so as to hide the pot, the stronger canes being arched over it, giving the appearance of a high-handled basket.

Azaleas, metrosideroses, acacias, rhododendrons, lilacs, pelargoniums and moss and hybrid roses are seen in large quantities and ericas and lilies fill several big houses. Mr. Schultheis' experience has been similar to that of others, the Japan longiflorum lilies being generally satisfactory while of the Bermuda stock more than one-half had to be thrown away and not over twenty-five per cent can be called good. Ericas are a specialty. Notwithstanding the lateness of Easter there will be a big supply of the popular melanthera variety, the plants having been kept in cold frames all winter so as to retard their blooming. Persoluta alba, rosea and rubra are ready in quantities and the glorious pink translusœns, the difficult Cavendishiana and the pretty cupressiana, with its dainty globular flowers and soft green foliage, will all be available for the early buyers, but the quantity of these scarcer sorts is limited, and there are a few novelties which are simply being given a trial. The greatest difficulty with translusœns and cupressiana is their difficulty of propagation, the proportion of cuttings that root being very small.

Mr. Schultheis has some seedling carnations that were favorably mentioned in these columns last year and which, after another year's trial, fully bear out their promise. They are exceeding vigorous growers with strong stems and the flowers are up to the modern standard of size.

FORREST CITY, ARK.—Mrs. T. W. Barrow and Mrs. Margaret Hatcher have embarked in the florist business here.

Elmira, N. Y.

The flower growers and flower lovers of Elmira gathered in large numbers at the meeting of the horticultural society held March 12, to listen to a talk upon carnations by Grove P. Rawson and to view the display of flowers. It was a carnation meeting and there were exhibited many of the novelties of this year as well as older varieties. H. Weber & Son sent a fine vase of Genevieve Lord, which was excellent in stem and foliage. J. L. Dillon's Queen Louise was beautiful by reason of its pure color and good form. Mrs. Bertram Lippincott, from H. F. Michell, Philadelphia, was fine and may be called an improved Daybreak, a shade or two darker. F. Dorner & Sons sent some splendid specimens of Glacier, Morning Glory, G. H. Crane, White Cloud and Mrs. Bradt. E. G. Hill & Co. sent America, White Cloud and Ethel Crocker, all well grown. The Ethel Crocker was especially pleasing as a deep pink. The Marquis, from Syracuse, was represented by a vase of fine blooms, which attracted much attention on account of their size and beautiful shade of pink. John Rudy, gardener for Mr. Fassett, brought some fine vases of Mrs. Jas. Dean, Jubilee and Flora Hill. The Jubilee as grown by Mr. Rudy leaves but little to be desired in that color. Rawson had well grown specimens of various sorts and Hoffman some very fine White Cloud and Daybreak. The election of officers for the year resulted in the choice of Rev. E. M. Mills as president; R. R. Stockdale, vice-president; H. N. Hoffman, secretary, and Mrs. E. Kennedy, treasurer. H. H.

It is not much trouble to mention the AMERICAN FLORIST when corresponding with an advertiser.

Orange, N. J.

Samuel Henshaw, of the New York Botanical Garden, entertained the New Jersey Floricultural Society at its meeting on March 7, with a talk on what he has seen on his recent visit to Puerto Rico and Trinidad, of the flora and people of those islands. Mr. Henshaw is an observant man with a particularly keen perception of the humorous and a willing ability to impart his impressions iu an exceedingly witty and entertaining manner, so his address was not only valuable for the interesting horticultural information it contained but also was enjoyable because of the general narrative as to the customs and manner of living of the people of Puerto Rico. He told of the beauty of the tropical mountains of Trinidad, the botanical gardens there, the rankness of the forest growths, the sugar plantations and other agricultural resources of Puerto Rico, etc., and enumerated among the plants he had noted in a wild state twenty-one varieties of native begonias, tradescantias, oxalises, marantas, euphorbias, aloes, crotons, bananas, palms, tree ferns and Victoria regia.

It is the purpose of the New Jersey Floricultural Society to distribute among the school children, in May several thousands of plants, with directions for their cultivation, and arrange for the admittance of these plants at the fall exhibition of the society, when prizes will be awarded to the most worthy. J. B. Davis, J. C. Williams and John Hayes are the committee in charge of the matter. A large number of plants have already been donated for the surpose.

Popken & Collins report a fine local trade in flowering bulbs with numerous funeral pieces. General trade is good for the season.

DEAR SIRS—Since using your ice case in our retail flower department we have saved 30 per cent. in the consumption of ice. Our saving in flowers we cannot accurately determine, but should estimate conservatively 25 per cent. Not only this, flowers keep with us as they never did before, and retain their salable appearance longer. Your box is certainly a boon to the florists, and we predict a wonderful sale on them, especially to the florists, when their qualifications become known.

Give it a trial. ...The American Florist.

Holyoke, Mass.

The florists in this locality report a big rush of funeral work since Christmas. There has been a great scarcity of flowers, especially carnations, off crop striking all at the same time, but as the days lengthen and sun strengthens, the outlook brightens. Easter stock is coming on in fine shape. Lilies will be plentiful and good, especially longiflorums. Harrisii are badly diseased as usual. Bedding stock in this vicinity is plentiful and very good and the florists anticipate a good spring trade.

There are several carnation seedlings in the hands of our growers but they have not been tested enough for the originators to say much about them.

The Holyoke, Springfield and Northampton horticultural societies had the pleasure of listening to a paper on "Roses, Past and Present," read by John N. May, of Summit, at the meeting in Holyoke on March 7. These societies have been holding a series of union meetings this winter which have been very successful and of infinite value.

While in Holyoke Mr. May was entertained by Mrs. Day Chadwick, who is a prominent member of the Holyoke Horticultural Society.

MESSRS. THOS. W. WEATHERED'S SONS,
46 and 48 Marion Street, New York, N. Y.:

Gentlemen—I am highly gratified with the results I have obtained from your Sectional Boiler which you put in for me last October. Although you would only guarantee the six sections to heat 1620 feet of 4-in. pipe, I attached it to over 1,800 feet. It did it so well that I put on about 300 feet more, making in all 2,100 feet, and I am positive that I can add more to it. It is the best I have ever seen and a great coal saver. I have to keep the fire door open all the time.
I would be pleased to have anyone call and see it. Yours truly,

George Schubert

An Urban Harbinger.

In the sweet country, as the spring's
  Advance decks out the scenery,
And limns with hues the colored things
  And gives the greens their greenery,
I love to watch when I am there
Each little step of Nature's care;
The wiles with which she goes about
To coax the shivering crocus out,
And, day by day, succeeding troops
Of blooms to marshal in their groups.

In town it's different! All's wrought out
  With least of her complicity,
By man-power, helped, as I misdoubt,
  By steam and electricity.
The bed that yesterday was snow
To-morrow's plants, set all arow;
You press a button and they blow.
Just watch them and you'll see it's so.
I'm told, too, that in open sight
The park men turn them off at night.

You can't rely on city plants
  Whose habits have been tampered with.
I always look at them askance.
  Such culture as they're pampered with Might well their little minds upset,
Confuse their dates, make them forget
The calendar, their proper times
As set by use and nursery rhymes—
All, all, except, come sun, come cold,
They're bound to blossom when they're told.

I trust them not, but when it's fair
  I note in garb delectable
Sophronia driving out for air
  With parent most respectable.
And when she leaves her furs at home
I say the season's ripening some.
Successive hats new brought from France,
Denote to me the sun's advance,
And, when her parasols appear,
I cry, "Now bless me! summer's here."

THE AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

FIRST ANNUAL MEETING, NEW YORK, MARCH 28, 1900.

The first annual meeting of the American Rose Society was called to order at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, on Wednesday afternoon, the attendance being large. President Benjamin Dorrance proved an ideal presiding officer and opened the session with a highly interesting address, during which he reviewed the evolution of the rose during the past thirty years.

Secretary Barron reported thirty-five life members and 169 active and associate members. The report of Treasurer May was also very encouraging.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Benjamin Dorrance, Dorranceton, Pa.; vice-president, John H. Taylor, Bayside, N. Y.; secretary, Leonard Barron, New York; treasurer, John N. May, Summit, N. J. N. Butterbach and H. A. Siebrecht were chosen to succeed themselves as members of the executive committee.

The society was given a pressing invitation to Syracuse for its next meeting, but it was voted to again meet in New York.

Prof. Byron D. Halsted presented an essay upon diseases of the rose, which is published herewith.

Diseases of the Rose.

BY PROF. BYRON D. HALSTED.

The earliest trouble of the rose to engage my attention ten years ago, when I first went to the New Jersey Experiment Station, was that due to nematodes. In the report of that year it is recorded that "sickly, stunted greenhouse roses have been sent to the station and the cause for the lack of vigor was not far to seek. The roots of the plants were badly knotted and the whole root system infested with gall worms."

In the report for the next year (1891) the following is found recorded: "Complaints have come to the station from various quarters of a shortness in the hothouse rose crop, and a visit made to Madison and other rose growing localities convinces me that the trouble is not due to any one enemy. The affected rose plants have a stunted, sickly appearance; they fail to send up strong shoots, and only develop short stems, bearing pale, sickly leaves. Such plants fail to produce good flowers and are comparatively worthless.

"The roots of such specimens may be swollen in places, and the knots contain multitudes of nematode worms. It is of great importance to have the soil used for potting plants or the greenhouse bed free from the worms, and, of course, only plants with roots free from knots and galls should be used. The greatest trouble with the rose plant soil is probably the manure that is used in great abundance by the growers. It is likely that this manure is infested with the worms. An experiment in raising roses in a soil where stable manure is replaced by a judicious mixture of commercial fertilizers is well worth trying. It has been shown, for example, during the present season, that sweet potatoes can be grown to great profit without the city manure that has been the standard source of plant food among truck farmers. Also, it has been demonstrated that potatoes thus grown are less liable to attacks of the various rots and decays. If the right mechanical consistency for the roses can be obtained in connection with the commercial fertilizers, it is quite evident that the soil would be under better control and less liable to various infections."

In 1892 six pages were given to nematodes, thus showing that the study of the subject had been continued. The last words by the speaker upon the subject are in an article written by request for the Florists' Exchange and published in its issue for January 27 of the present year. From that article the closing paragraphs are quoted: "The point that most interests rose growers is how to get rid of the nematodes. In order to do this it will be of much assistance to know where the worms come from; how they propagate and get into the roots of infested plants. These eel worms are much more abundant than generally supposed, and it is only when they are numerous that their mischief becomes apparent. In looking up the subject of tomato blight in the south, some years ago, it was observed that the tomato plants were, almost without exception, more or less affected with the root galls, and the same is true of a large list of plants, both herbaceous and woody. The nematodes are, as a rule, much more abundant in warm climates than elsewhere, and the lack of these pests in northern gardens is likely due to the freezing of the soil.

"The greenhouse furnishes the proper condition for the propagation of the eel worms, and this naturally raises the question of how they first get into the bed. This may be in one or more of several ways. They may be already in the roots of plants, but in small numbers, when the plants are placed in the house. To guard against this, the roots should be examined as closely as possible for the galls when the beds are set and all galled rose plants excluded. The nematodes may come in with the earth. As before stated, the worms infest a large number of kinds of plants, and it is an easy matter for them to come with the soil. Soil that has not been used for growing plants in the garden is not necessarily free, but if taken from a pasture or meadow may contain many nematodes. Then again, they may be taken into the house with the manure that is used.

"The determination of the best precaution remains for the practical rose grower. Cold in excess will probably destroy the worms, and likewise a high temperature is inimical to them. Both these conditions may be impracticable to apply to the soil, the one being impossible in some cases, and the other too expensive.

"Recently Doctors Stone and Smith, of the Massachusetts Experiment Station, have made extensive tests with nematodes, and they conclude their report by stating that while many solutions are capable of killing the mature worms, the strength and amount necessary to add to the soil is great. The most effectual, complete and practical method at the present time of exterminating nematodes in greenhouses is by heating the soil by means of steam. This can be accomplished without much expense, providing proper attention is paid to the method of applying the steam. They find the minimum amount of heat necessary to kill the nematodes is 140° F. Rose growers might make the experiment of heating the soil of a small portion of the bed before setting the plants, and satisfy themselves if such treatment will pay.

"If manure is the chief vehicle of the worms, it may be possible to grow roses without so much of this constituent in the rose soil. It may be that roses can be grown with a formed soil, to which all the necessary elements of plant food have been added as commercial fertilizers. Perhaps, however, the pampered rose will not perform its part unless fed in the ordinary way to which its ancestry had been accustomed. The fact is that the worms are doing much damage, and when they are once in a plant there is no known way of driving them out. New conditions may induce the formation of new roots, and a sickened plant may revive, but this is not to be expected under such circumstances. With roses the writer has not found the eel worms in other than the roots and it is not thought that cuttings from galled plants will carry the trouble."

THE BLACK SPOT.

The most widespread and conspicuous of the 100 or more fungous diseases of the rose is the black spot due to the Actinonema rosæ Fr., and first described in 1826. It is seen that this is an old enemy and has long been known to the rose growers of Europe. The foliage, when attacked, soon develops the characteristic black spots, and the leaves become elsewhere pale, and shortly fall to the ground. As a result, rose houses badly infested with the black spot show but few leaves and fewer blooms. The microscopic structure of this fungus has been fully considered, with plates, in the first annual report made by Prof. Scribner as Chief of the Section of Vegetable Pathology of the United States Department of Agriculture, for the year 1887. It only needs to be said here that experiments with this fungus have been carried on sufficiently by the New Jersey station to warrant the assumption that it can be controlled by the proper use of fungicides. This trouble may be held in check by the carbonate of copper compound (cupram) using five ounces of the carbonate of copper to three quarts of ammonia and sixty gallons of water. The spraying should be done once a week, using a hose with a nozzle that gives a fine spray. The point should be to wet every part of the plant and yet not drench it. If many leaves have fallen from the plant they should be gathered up and burned.

Some varieties are more liable to the black spot than others. When possible

ROSE LEAF SHOWING BLACK SPOT.

—that is, when all other things remain the same—it is, of course, wise to grow those least susceptible to the disease. It may be said, in passing, that during the year 1892 the black spot was observed by the speaker upon a species of wild rose, Rosa humilis, where it was causing the leaves to become spotted and yellow. It is not surprising, for the wild plant was growing but a short distance from a neglected estate where garden roses were badly spotted. The actinonema is a small genus and some of the species are parasites upon the basswood, beach, ash and viburnum. The one upon the rose is not found upon plants outside of the genus rosa, and there has its favorite species and varieties. This is shown in a remarkable manner with some of the cultivated sorts grown side by side in the same house. It is often very bad upon the American Beauty.

THE ROSE LEAF BLIGHT.

A fungus that disfigures and injures the rose leaves almost as badly as the black spot is the Sphærella rosigena Ell., commonly called the rose leaf blight. A thoroughly diseased leaflet has large, irregular blotches of gray color surrounded by a margin of dark purple. The gray, dead center of the spot bears a number of pimples or specks, more numerous and conspicuous near the center, and in these the spores are produced.

Under the microscope the fungus is very different from the black spot and instead is closely related to the leaf blight of the strawberry which is due to Sphærella fragariæ Tul. In other words, the two blights in question are as closely related as any two species of the genus rosa. It is important to know these relationships between the various plant diseases for it is helpful in the struggle in overcoming them. The leaf blight of the strawberry is very much more common than that of the rose and any effective remedy found for the former may be of value in checking the ravages of the latter. Fruit growers have found this strawberry leaf blight a hard one to check, perhaps because of its many forms of spores and the low habit of the plant and the consequent difficulty of readily spraying the foliage upon the under side. This difficulty does not obtain with the rose, and it may be controlled more easily. There is no question but that the standard fungicides should be used when this fungus is at work.

The black rot of the grape, due to Læstadia Bidwellii (Ellis), is a first cousin of the rose disease in hand and the fact is mentioned because the grape rot trouble is one of the most common and destructive of the whole list of fungous diseases. There is a stubbornness met with in attempts to control this decay that almost baffles some vine growers, especially during moist months in the growing season.

THE ROSE MILDEW.

The most familiar fungous enemy of the rose is the mildew, Sphærotheca pannosa Wallr. This disease has been known for a long time and is quickly recognized by the powdery coat it develops upon the affected parts. It is so rapid in its development that rose growers are sometimes inclined to assign the cause of the growth to that which is in reality only the condition or conditions favoring the appearance of the mildew. It comes from spores, which falling upon the surface of the plant will quickly germinate and produce a cobwebby coating to the foliage. This fungus is so different from the others that have been mentioned that a word is needed in way of explaining the habit of the parasite, as this lies at the foundation of the rational treatment of the pest. In the first place the rose mildew is a surface feeder and only attaches itself to the epidermis of the host, through which, by means of small suckers, it derives its nourishment from the deeper seated substance. Being therefore entirely upon the surface, the fine threads of the fungus may grow rapidly and make a mildew patch in a very short time that is easily seen.

The exact conditions that favor this development of the spores are of course better known to the rose grower than to me. Some of them claim that they can develop the fungus at will by omitting some essential point in heating, watering or ventilation, particularly the last. If a certain current of air is sure to produce the mildew, and of this I am not fully able to say, it follows that the spores of the mildew were widely scattered through the house and they started into vigorous growth at those places where the conditions were supplied for such activity.

The superficial nature of the mildew is of great importance when the matter of remedies is considered. It is a fungus that is in the air, as it may be termed, in contrast with most of the rose diseases that, when active, are deeply seated in the plant. The spores are produced as minute, delicate cells upon upright filaments that arise from the web of horizontal vegetative hyphæ. They are easily reached by fungicides and apparently destroyed without difficulty. Any of the ordinary sprays will answer for the mildew but even these need not be resorted to, provided spraying is uncalled for by the presence of other rose fungi. In short, if the mildew is the only enemy at hand it may be kept in check by the use of flowers of sulphur, either dusted upon the plants or even the pipes of the greenhouse, the point being to produce a gentle fumigation of the plants and the whole house with the fumes of the sulphur. Professor Maynard, of the Massachusetts Experiment Station, finds that a small kerosene stove is most convenient for this purpose, and the sulphur, by means of it, is boiled in a kettle for two or three hours twice a week, the house being closed during the operation. The only precaution is to use no more heat than is sufficient to boil the sulphur, for should it catch fire it might damage the plants.

Mr. John N. May writes that the best way to get rid of the mildew is to close the house about 8 o'clock in the morning, run the temperature up to 75°, then, with a bellows, fill the house full of sulphur. Let the house remain closed till it reaches 85° or 90° and afterwards let air in gradually. A constant circulation of air is likewise recommended for roses at all times. Potassium sulphide, one ounce to two gallons of water, sprayed upon the plants, has proved an effective remedy. Massee states that "flowers of sulphur mixed with about one-third of its volume of slaked lime dusted on the foliage prevents the spread of the disease." Gardeners, from long experience, have come to the belief that rose mildew is induced by a weak condition of the plant, resulting from partial starvation, irregular or excessive watering and undue exposure to drafts of cold air. The best success in rose-growing, as in all other things, attends those who give constant, intelligent care to the many details. The rose mildew has its close of kin in the mildew of the chrysanthemum, the phlox, pea, gooseberry, grape, cherry and apple and many forest trees, as oaks and chestnuts. Some of them are very injurious, but all can doubtless be controlled by fungicides.

THE DOWNY MILDEW OF THE ROSE.

A second form of mildew is sometimes troublesome to rose growers. This is a close relative of a similar one upon the greenhouse lettuce and another is often destructive to spinach, while a third is the cause of a soft rot of potatoes. It produces downy or velvety patches upon the leaf, quite unlike the form above described and the threads run through the substance of the leaf. In this case the fungus will have vegetated for a considerable time before it appears upon the surface which is entirely for the purpose of producing its multitude of spores borne upon the tips of the many aerial branches.

It is evident that the sulphur fumes may cause the destruction of the spores, but may not reach the hyphæ that are vegetating within the substance of the host. Such treatment, while tending to check the spread by means of the spores, will not be sufficient to arrest the growth of the fungus that is already in the tissue of the host.

There is also a second form of spore that is produced beneath the skin of the leaf and out of reach of fungicides. As a precaution it is therefore well to destroy any mildewed leaves or else when they fall the spores may be set free. It may be said that the careful rose grower will gather up and destroy the dead foliage and reduce as far as possible, thereby, the chances of his plants becoming diseased from spores that are formed upon or within the old leaves.

THE ROSE RUST.

There is a genuine rust of the rose similar to that of the wheat, oats and other grains, but it is a pleasure to note that it is not common upon indoor roses in this portion of the country. It has been sent to me at various times as a troublesome pest upon roses grown for ornament in the flower garden and lawn. In "Plant Diseases by Massee," a new book just published in London, this rust is figured and described as follows: "A troublesome pest to cultivators of roses, attacking more especially hardy hybrid varieties. All three forms of the fungus are produced on the same host. The æcidia appear in late spring on the leaves and young shoots, forming powdery, orange patches, and often cause distortion of the shoots. About midsummer the patches become deeper in color, owing to the formation of uredospores. Finally the teleutospores, or resting spores, are produced as minute black dots on the under surface of the leaves.

"The appearance of the disease in spring depends entirely on the presence of teleutospores in the neighborhood; it is therefore necessary to collect and burn all fallen leaves in the autumn. Plants that have been attacked the previous season should be thoroughly drenched with a solution of sulphate of copper in water, two ounces in three gallons, in early spring before the buds expand. The soil around the plants may also be sprayed with the same solution. Dilute Bordeaux mixture or ammoniated carbonate of copper solution checks the æcidium and uredo stages. The fungus also grows on wild roses, and these may become a source of infection unless precautions are taken."

American rose growers are doubtless familiar with the orange-colored, powdery masses in early summer which accompany the malformations of stem and leaf, followed by the dark, almost coal black, patches later in the season. When a shrub is badly infested there is little better to do than cut the whole plant away close to the ground. This fungus is closely related to the one upon the blackberry and raspberry, causing the destructive rust of those plants. It has been shown that the fungous hyphæ penetrate all parts of the blackberry plant, even the roots, and the rose grower may not find that severe pruning will rid a plant of the pest when it is thoroughly infested. Therefore, as with the raspberry rust, it may be necessary to root out and destroy the rose bush and start again with a healthy plant. This rose rust is a good illustration of the great depth to which a fungus will penetrate in the host and the difficulty of eradicating the same. It goes without saying that ordinary sprays will be of little curative effect upon a plant when the living vegetative threads of its fungous parasite penetrate to all parts. In California the writer has seen the rust upon roses much worse than here, when every leaf upon some shrubs was badly affected. In such a warm climate, when the plants retain their foliage throughout the year, the dark, winter spores, not being needed, are omitted and the orange-colored form of summer is perennial. There are many of the rusts in the warmer parts of the earth that grow continuously, while the same kinds of plants with us are exempt, presumably due to the uncongenial nature of our climate. In passing it may be said that the chrysanthemum rust produces only the summer form in the greenhouse and the hardy out-of-door sorts seem to be exempt from the disease.

THE ROSE ANTHRACNOSE.

The chief feature of this disease is the scarcity of leaves. Instead of a plant with foliage upon all the canes, there are but few leaves upon some stems, while others are entirely defoliated. The whole plant is infested with the fungus, and this parasite so saps the vitality and interferes with the processes of growth that the leaves, even if they were healthy in themselves, are unable to perform their work. The fact is that the leaves are infested with the anthracnose filaments, and soon after falling, if not before, they will show the spore formation of the anthracnose fungus, Gloeosporium rosæ Hals. In general appearance and habits of growth, this fungus is quite similar to the one causing the anthracnose of the raspberry, Gloeosporium venetum; possibly it is identical and if so the presence of the one is a menace to the host of the other.

The rose plant is most likely attacked while young, or at least it is to be presumed that the young portions of a plant are most susceptible. The attack is from without, and the spores falling upon the surface of the young, tender canes, and leaves as well, germinate there and produce, in a short time, an affected spot. If this takes place in a cane, it is natural to suppose that the portion above the infested part will be girdled, in so far as the attack is great, and this will interfere with the direct support by the whole plant of the part beyond the diseased place. Besides this, the fungus spreads, and more rapidly, in the direction toward the tip of the cane. It is not unusual for a diseased plant to send up apparently healthy shoots from near the base of the stem, these in turn to become infested.

Roses that have a sickly color to their foliage, with the leaves falling prematurely, especially from the tips of the canes, may be suspected as victims of the anthracnose. A hand-lens should be sufficient to assist in finding pinkish blotches upon the leaves, particularly those that lie upon the moist earth beneath the half-defoliated plant. Similar, but better defined, pimples usually occur upon some portion of the cane.

It will be gathered from these remarks that the rose anthracnose is a specific disease, caused by a well-defined fungus that grows rapidly from spores, penetrates the substance of stem and leaf and finally causes defoliation and death of the cane. The anthracnose, because of its multitudes of spores produced in pimples on leaves, particularly fallen ones, and the canes, and the ease with which they are transported by water, also rapidity of germination, all combine to make this fungus enemy of the roses very contagious.

This class of fungi to which the gloeosporium belongs is amenable to treatment by fungicides. A coating of the Bordeaux mixture or cupram upon the leaves and stems prevents in large degree the entrance of the germs. Therefore all rosehouses where there is any anthracnose should be sprayed with one of the above compounds. It goes without further saying that all plants that are nearly leafless from this cause should be either cut down close to the soil or thrown bodily into the burnheap.

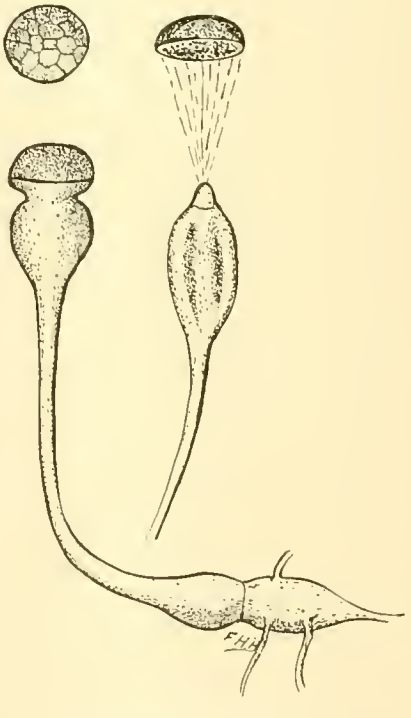
THE ROSE LEAF SPOT.

Somewhat similar to the leaf blight previously mentioned is the leaf spot due to the fungus Cercospora rosæicola Pass. This produces spots that are of a gray color with a dark purple border, and the spores are long and borne in little tufts upon the surface of the central portion of the dead areas. In microscopic structure the leaf spot and the leaf blight are very different, the former having the spores upon the tips of threads which previously have grown through the stomates. The leaf blight has the spores borne internally in small pits and are poured out in a viscid coil when the part is moistened.

These facts are given to show that while to the naked eye the differences between the two herein named fungi are not apparent, under the microscope they are widely unlike, and the treatment that will work admirably for one may not answer for the other. As yet this leaf spot is not common, but when found at all is often quite destructive. From the nature of the fungus it is inferred that it is to be easily controlled by fungicides. For example, its cousin, Cercospora beticola Sacc., is the common beet leaf spot with which there have been many experiments, and it is found very amenable to treatment with the Bordeaux mixture and other standard fungicides.

BLACK SPECK OF ROSES.

Complaints have come to the writer from time to time with regard to a speck upon the rose plants. This trouble is due to the indirect, and not to the intentional, action of a fungus, and in this respect is quite unusual, and merits a word of consideration. The fungus that is the source of trouble is somewhat closely related to the coarse one that thrives upon bread, and is very damaging to sweet potatoes in the storage bin, causing the soft rot. In short, it is one of the molds and grows upon organic substances and not, as before stated, upon the rose.



PILOBOLUS CRYSTALINUS.
(Fungus to which black speck of the rose is due).

The fungus in question is Pilobolus crystalinus Tode, and forms in large numbers upon the manure used to cover the bed where roses are growing. As it matures a dark oval ball or sac is produced filled with spores of the pilobolus. This black sac is supported upon a swollen stalk rising from the surface of the manure, and when mature the enlarged portion, filled with liquid, suddenly forces off the spore sac and collapses, throwing the ball of spores into the air. These dark spore sacs are covered with moisture as they are discharged and will adhere to any object which they may strike in their flight.

The writer has examined houses where this fungus has developed extensively upon the manure and counted as many as a hundred specks to the square inch upon the white wood-work surrounding the bed. An examination of the perpendicular sash in dividing walls in greenhouses will show, from the numerous spore specks adhering, that the height to which the dark sacs are thrown is fully ten feet; but there is a rapid falling off in the number upon any given area when the height of two or three feet is reached. These specks, of course, from what has been written, may be upon any plant that is within range; but they do no further harm than the disfigurement thereby produced. They are more often met with in rose houses, because there the manure is more frequently left upon the surface than with other kinds of plants.

If a remedy is sought it may be found in dispensing with the manure on the surface, stirring it at frequent intervals to prevent the fungi from having time to mature their dark shells containing the "shot" in the form of spores, so to speak, or by using some fungicide as a spray upon the manure that will kill the mold. However, as a rule the bombardment does not last long and no vigorous measures are generally called for in this case. An illustrated article, by the writer, upon this subject appeared in the AMERICAN FLORIST for April 30, 1898.

BRONZING OF THE ROSE.

As a last trouble to be mentioned at this time attention may be called to a peculiar discoloration of the leaves that has been termed "bronzing." The affected foliage takes on a brown hue and the leaflets may fall away. With some varieties, as La France, it is much more frequently met with than upon most other varieties. It is not demonstrated as being of fungous origin and probably is due to a structural weakness permitting the skin to become scalded or at least injured by too great exposure to the sun.

If this be the fact the remedy seems to lie in a more complete shading of the plants. Of two varieties equal in all other points the one that is most nearly free from the "bronzing" should be chosen.

CONCLUSION.

In conclusion it may be said that the purpose of this paper has been to point out some of the characteristics of the leading fungi injurious to the rose, with remarks upon the remedies for the same so far as they have been determined. As a rule these diseases thrive best under conditions of too great moisture accompanied by ill ventilation and draughts of cold air. One cannot say that they are entirely creatures of neglect, but frequently they come in their greatest strength when culture has not been according to the sound principles of healthy vegetable growth.

Let it not be forgotten, however, that fungous diseases are contagious and the virus for inoculation passes from plant to plant by the currents of air and may drip from leaf to leaf in the water that falls from the nozzle of the hose. Great care needs to be taken not to introduce an enemy with new stock and the grower should be swift to discard or destroy that which is not healthy.

The true rose grower will make it his highest ambition to grow superior plants, for the profit it may be, but first of all because his heart is in his work, and I do not know of anything one can be more proud of than roses, the queen of all the flowers, which as loved pets have willingly and generously produced objects of the highest beauty and excellence in response to tender, sympathetic and loving care.

NEW ROSE BALTIMORE.

New Rose Baltimore.

This latest of John Cook's roses is in every way worthy to be named after the beautiful city where it was produced and is a close approach to a white American Beauty. In stem and leaf it is no whit behind that popular variety, and a cluster of it on stems three or four feet long, with its plentiful, massive foliage, topped by great buds of white, shading to a delicate shell pink center is a delight to the eye. The world of roses is not stationary but moving, and moving in the direction of size conspicuously. It is safe to say that with the advent of a class of large roses such as this, that can be forced continuously, our present everyday varieties will become as rare as the Isabella Sprunts, Bon Silenes and Safranos of twenty-five years ago are today.

Rose Growing With Chemical Fertilizers.

Some extensive experiments have been made by Prof. Wm. Stuart, of the Experiment Station, Lafayette, Ind. The subject has been treated quite exhaustively in a bulletin by Mr. Stuart, who summarizes the results as follows:

"There is every reason to believe from the results obtained in the several experiments enumerated, that chemical fertilizers when properly used may be made to serve every need of the rose plant so far as food is concerned.

"The use of raw bone meal in every instance gave an increased yield over that of the control plants, as well as giving a greater percentage of gain than did those receiving other forms of phosphoric acid.

"Pure bone meal is not injurious to rose plants, even when applied in amounts largely in excess of the requirements of the plant.

"The acidulated bone meal which has been used by florists and supposed to be harmful, did not produce any noticeable injury, even when used in large amounts.

"As a rule, a combination of phosphoric acid and nitrate of soda gave better results than one of phosphoric acid and muriate of potash.

"Two or three applications of potash during the season was found to be preferable to a single application, although in some instances no injury from the single application was apparent.

"A larger number of Perle roses were produced from plants grown in a black than in a clay loam, while the Kaiserin gave reverse results.

"The sub-watering method proved an efficient means of supplying the plants with moisture."

Market Ferns.

Lomaria ciliata major may be recommended as one of the best of the genus; spores germinate freely, and with good treatment useful plants may be established in a few months. Its great advantage over L. gibba is that the fronds stand more erect; the fronds are also longer. Few ferns make more symmetrical table plants. To establish good plants they must have careful attention from the start. The seedlings should be divided singly as soon as large enough to handle, and potted in a light compost. When large enough for potting into 5-inch pots, a good rough compost may be used, fibrous loam, leaf mould and peat, with plenty of sand added, and good drainage; or if leaf mould is not to be had, some well rotted stable manure may be used. They may be grown on in a stove temperature, and like a moist atmosphere, but over watering at the roots should be avoided. After the plants have attained to a useful size, they may be gradually hardened off and well exposed to the light, when the fronds will harden and will stand well when used for house decoration. The lomarias are not the most popular of ferns, but I have found that the above variety finds a ready sale and should rank among our most useful market ferns.

Of the larger fronded maidenhair ferns, Adiantum scutum is the most useful; it makes a well furnished plant in a 5-inch pot, or as a larger specimen it is very useful. The plant should be potted in good rough loam, and plenty of manure, and a good sprinkling of sharp sand; unless the loam is very heavy no peat should be used. Grown in good loam, the fronds are of better substance than when a light, peaty compost is used. Young plants may be raised freely from spores. It is, however, necessary to be careful to collect new spores, and they should be taken just as the first spore cases begin to burst open. I may add that in potting off the young plants, clumps of three or four seedlings may be potted together, and will make well furnished stuff much quicker than when grown singly. In the earlier stages they may be grown in plenty of heat; but after they are well advanced an intermediate temperature, with plenty of light and air, will ensure firm fronds, which last well either when cut, or used as pot plants. I believe if a regular succession of this useful fern were sent to market, it would soon become as popular as Pteris cretica major is at the present time. In referring to this variety, it occurs to me how changes come about from time to time, even in the demand for ferns. A few years ago the crested varieties of P. serrulata and P. cretica were more in demand. Now the plain fronded varieties find more favor, especially P. cretica major or P. Ouvrardi, as the best variety is often called.—A. Hemsley in the Gardeners' Chronicle.

Relationship of Flow and Return Pipes.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Kindly inform me if one 2-inch pipe is sufficient return for eight 1¼-inch pipes, the return to run along the end of the houses farthest from the boiler? The house is 125 feet long and there will be one foot fall in 200 feet of the return. T. E. B.

Whether used as a flow or a return, it is not advisable to carry more than 200 feet of radiation with a two-inch pipe unless the coil is considerably above the heater. Eight 1¼-inch returns 125 feet long will give nearly 350 square feet of radiation, and the surface of the return itself will bring it up to more than 400 feet of radiation, which will require a 2½-inch supply and return pipe, unless many feet above the heater. HOUSE OF CATTLEYA TRIANÆ 820 FLOWERS, AT BAYARD THAYER'S, LANCASTER, MASS.

Rose Kaiserin Augusta Victoria.

The accompanying illustration shows a bloom of this popular rose produced by a plant in a ten-inch pot. The plant was grown by Michael Pope, a gardener of Naugatuck, Conn. Mr. Pope states that he has much success with this variety in pots. The plants are grown in the open field all summer and lifted and potted in the fall.

Exhibition of The American Rose Society.

The first annual exhibition of this young organization, at the Eden Musée, New York City, on March 27, 28 and 29, was a great and unqualified success. Had the hall been larger, the beauty of the unprecedented collection of fine Beauties, Brides and Bridesmaids that had been brought together would have been more apparent and more fully realized by the visitors. The display of the new Liberty, showing its adaptability to various forms of decorative work, would have been alone almost sufficient to adorn a small hall. The secretary stated that the number of exhibitors was over fifty and the number of separate entries was 127. The judges were Edwin Lonsdale, Robert Halliday, W. I. Brower, Samuel Goldring, I. L. Powell and George Hay. Their duties were by no means either easy or enviable on account of the close competition in a number of the commercial classes. The hall was festooned about with southern smilax and several groups of palms, crotons, etc., filled the corners and stage and this, together with the tall mirror decorations, relieved the show of the monotony frequently seen in exhibitions of this character. It would have been better had the tables been considerably lower, the tall roses in the tall vases towering so high as to be often beyond the range of vision. Another year it is to be hoped that, with more time for preparation and the incentive of this very successful affair to give encouragement, we shall see a good lot of hybrid perpetual roses on the boards; they were conspicuously absent on this occasion.

The most conspicuous feature of the show was Liberty rose. Its elegant color and fine keeping qualities were well displayed in the various forms in which it was shown, much credit being also due to J. I. Donlan, who did the work of arranging it with his accustomed taste. There were two novelties that attracted more than usual attention. Robert Scott & Son's new hybrid tea, which has been named Robert Scott, might well be described as an ever-blooming Baroness Rothschild. It is the progeny of Merveille de Lyon and Belle Siebrecht, the former being the seed-bearing parent, and best of all, it is an American-raised seedling. The Floral Exchange, of Philadelphia, showed their novelty, the pink sport from American Beauty, named Queen of Edgely, to good advantage. The color is a little softer than that of American Belle and the full constitutional strength and vigor of the Beauty appears to have been retained.

The Mason cup for the best display of roses was won by Peter Crowe, Utica, N. Y., with a grand vase of 200 Bridesmaids with four-foot stems. The Bliss cup for best fifty blooms was won by E. G. Asmus with Liberty. The Fitzgerald prize went to T. J. Kelly, Madison, for thirty-six Bridesmaids. The Thorley cup went to E. G. Asmus for a collection of twenty-nine named varieties of roses. This must be won in two exhibitions before becoming permanent property. The Wood prize went to A. G. Spalding for twelve Marechal Niels. The Pierson cup for 100 red blooms was won by E. G. Asmus with Liberty. The Asmus prizes for fifty Beauties were awarded, first to J. Heacock, Philadelphia, and second to L. M. Noe, Madison, N. J. The Taylor cup for Admiral Dewey rose was awarded to its donor. The American Rose Company's cup for Golden Gate went to Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J. James Dowlen, gardener to H. L. Terrell, won first and Wm. Turner, gardener to W. Rockefeller, won second for the New Jersey Floricultural Society's prizes. J. H. Dunlop, Toronto, got the Morris County Gardeners' prize. The Hill vase for collection of named roses went to E. G. Asmus. The Lenox Horticultural Society's prize went to P. J. Donohue, gardener to M. K. Jessup. The Young cup for mantel decoration was won by E. G. Asmus, the principal flower used being Liberty rose. Mr. Asmus also got the Craig cup for mirror decoration with Mme. de Watteville roses. The New York Florists' Club's medals were awarded, gold to Peter Crowe and silver to Benj. Dorrance. The Lincoln Company prize went to Edmund M. Wood & Co., Natick, Mass., for the finest roses in the show. Siebrecht & Son put up a handsome mirror decoration with asparagus, Beauty, Bride, gardenias and Farleyense fern in competition and Jos. Kift & Son gave a fine illustration of the usefulness of their adjustable vase holders and small flower vases in decorative cut flower work. A Liberty cap made entirely of about 100 short stemmed Liberty roses was much admired.

In the regular "open to all" prize classes awards were as follows: Bride, first, E. M. Wood & Co.; second, Jos. Heacock. American Beauty; first, Myers & Samtman; second, Joseph Heacock. Bridesmaid, first, H. Hentz, Jr., Madison, N. J.; second, Jos. Heacock. Meteor, first, J. H. Dunlop, Toronto; second, L. B. Coddington, Murray Hill, N. J. Morgan, first, J. H. Dunlop. Cusin, second, E. G. Asmus. Hoste, first, J. H. Dunlop. Golden Gate, first, Peter Crowe, Utica. Lady Dorothea, first, Elwood Brant, Madison. Watteville, first, E. G.

Asmus. In the class reserved for small growers of roses prizes were as follows: Beauty, first, H. Weber & Sons. Bridesmaid, second, P. F. Ryan.

In the class for private gardeners and amateurs the awards were as follows: Beauty, first, Chas. Brentanzel, gardener to W. L. Stowe; second, S. L. Talbot, gardener to L. P. Morton. Bride, first, N. Butterbach, gardener to C. N. Bliss; second, T. Heather, gardener to J. B. Colgate. Bridesmaid, first, N. Butterbach; second, A. A. Taafe, gardener to F. O. Mathieson. Wootton, first, T. Heather. Bon Silene, first, T. Heather. C. Steinhoff won first and second prize for Crimson Rambler. Certificates were given to The Floral Exchange for Queen of Edgely, to R. Scott & Son for Robert Scott, and to Benj. Dorrance for Sarah Nesbitt.

Among the exhibits other than roses were some nice orchids from Lager & Hurrell. They had two cattleya novelties, C. Trianæ Fairy Queen and C. Trianæ aurantiaca, both white varieties; also American-raised seedling cattleyas, Clarindiana and Clarindiana var. Clio, both being the result of a cross between C. speciosissima and C. intermedia. N. Butterbach showed a seedling adiantum between A cuneatum and A. scutum with hard foliage and very promising appearance. Dailledouze Bros. showed carnation No. 666 and received a certificate for it. W. A. Manda showed Cherokee rose, J. N. May mignonette, H. Weber & Sons Carnation Geneveive Lord, and H. A. Siebrecht & Son decorated the front of the stage with a miniature rose garden. The weather was glorious throughout.

Among those present from outside the immediate vicinity of the city were Messrs. Edwin Lonsdale, Robert Craig, W. P. Craig, Jos. Heacock, D. Fuerstenburg, H. C. Gieger, Robert Kift, H. Fancourt, A. Fahrenwold, A. B. Cartledge, E. Weiss, F. P. Myers, Geo. Samtman, Wm. Monroe, H. Simpson, of Philadelphia; E. M. Wood, Fred. R. Matheson, P. Welch and W. J. Stewart, Boston; John Barr and Alex. Montgomery, Natick, Mass.; J. H. Dunlop, Harry Dale and C. J. Tidy, Toronto, Ont.; D. Dean, Little Silver, N. J.; Frank McMahon and Jas. Dowling, Seabright, N. J.; N. Butterbach, Oceanic, N. J.; Wm. Russell and I. L. Powell, Millbrook, N. Y.; Wm. Scott, Tarrytown, N. Y.; Peter Crowe, Utica; P. M. Pierson, Scarborough, N. Y.; P. J. Donohue and E. Lundberg, Lenox, Mass.; Fred. Donahue, Babylon, N. F. L. Harris.

In our Boston notes of last week it was announced that the veteran Massachusetts horticulturist, F. L. Harris, would shortly retire from the scene of his life work, the famous gardens of H. H. Hunnewell, at Wellesley. For nearly half a century Mr. Harris has directed the work of this splendid establishment, which is known far and wide as the best example of ornamental gardening in America. It therefore affords us great pleasure on this occasion to be able to present our readers with a portrait of Mr. Harris, and we know that thousands of them will heartily join us in wishing that he may long be spared to enjoy his well won honors.

The Lord & Johnson Boiler Explosion.

Referring again to the boiler explosion described by Lord & Johnson, of Owatonna, Minn., on page 680 of the current volume of the AMERICAN FLORIST, and to my communication relative to the same subject on page 748, as, in order for Lord & Johnson to give all the details of the plant and its installation which were needed to enable one to state the cause of the troubles referred to, would have necessitated considerable cross-correspondence, the gentlemen have written to me direct, giving in detail all the desired information, and asking that I include it in my report to your columns, for the enlightenment of your readers.

As the subject may be of interest to many, I will describe the plant and its extraordinary manner of installation, as gathered from the facts submitted, as fully as possible. The range of houses consists of a series of three houses, two of them 16x100 and the other 10x100, built together on the ridge and furrow plan, with a six-foot hotbed along the east side of one house, the boiler cellar being at the south end, opposite the central house.

The boiler was a vertical sectional one of ordinary pattern, of cast iron, the mains of ample capacity, the flow or steam main rising directly from the boiler to about the height of the ridge line of the houses, and then branching into a separate steam main into each house, running along the ridge to the farther end, then dropping and branching into coils of seventeen return or circulating pipes, returning under the side benches, and then connecting to a common main entering the boiler at the bottom. In order to feel sure that the apparatus would work without hitch, the local fitter inserted in each of the return coils a complicated swivel expansion joint. From the above general description, we would imagine a very simple and good natured apparatus, but we will now discover some of its eccentricities.

At the time the plant was installed the returns had no valves, neither stop nor check; neither were there any air cocks put in. Under these conditions, when either of the valves, which were on the steam or flow mains, were closed, the water would leave the boiler through the return pipes, as by the cooling of the steam within the coils a vacuum was formed, and as there were no air cocks to relieve this vacuum, the water in the boiler was called on to perform this service, even though there was no steam pressure recorded on the guage, as the suction power of a vacuum is equal to about fifteen pounds to the square inch, the steam or vapor being thrown off by the water in the boiler replacing the water drawn out, until so much water was drawn out that much of the fire surface of the boiler was left uncovered, and consequently became overheated.

Now the strange part of the affair is that, notwithstanding this condition occurred very frequently during the early use of the apparatus, and that cold water was admitted to the boiler to make good the apparent shortage as indicated by the water guage, and that this cold water feed connection was at the top of the boiler, directly over the heated surfaces, the boiler apparently suffered no injury, while, as a matter of fact, the castings must have been very seriously strained.

The local steam fitter, realizing at last that such treatment might result disastrously, even to so good natured a boiler, then inserted air valves at several points; but even this did not entirely dispose of the difficulties, as the suction of the vacuum was so great that the air valves could not supply air fast enough to replace it, and some water was still drawn from the boiler into the coils and held there until the air valves had admitted sufficient air; then the water would slowly drop back to the boiler, but so slowly, as not to cause any serious trouble, and under these conditions a much lesser quantity of water left the boiler, and it was for a comparatively short period only.

The steam fitter, having "guaranteed" a first-class job, and realizing that there was still something the matter with the works, and wishing to satisfy his customer but not knowing quite what to do in the case, struck on the unique plan of removing all the air cocks and in their place inserting stop valves in each end of each pipe in each coil in each house, evidently believing in the axiom, "a thing which is worth doing at all is worth doing well."

Now we come to the time of the "accident," at which time stop valves were on the steam main to each house and on the coils as above stated, but no air cocks. It is claimed that the water guage showed ample water, the steam gauge showed but little pressure, but upon the fire being banked the pressure quickly dropped to zero. The valves on the steam mains were all closed, as were also the ones on the several return coils. One hour later, the steam guage still showing no pressure, the boiler broke up.

The cause which led to this break-up was as follows: Just previous to the banking of the fire and the shutting of the valves, all the pipes were filled with steam, but on shutting the valves and checking the fire the steam in these pipes condensed, and consequently the space formerly occupied by this steam became vacuum, with its suction power of fifteen pounds per square inch, and as there were now no air cocks to admit air to replace this vacuum, the process of suction was continued for some time and was ultimately replaced by water drawn from the boiler through one or more of the seventeen valves on the return or circulating coils at their lower end, which, while closed sufficiently tight to check the ordinary steam circulation, were not tight enough to resist the suction power of the vacuum, which was probably augmented by some steam pressure within the boiler, but which was not enough to indicate on the steam gauge, which indication, when showing one pound pressure, indicates that this pressure is above atmospheric, which atmospheric pressure has a weight of fifteen pounds to the inch. The water thus being drawn from the boiler, left the cast fire sections uncovered. They consequently became overheated. Then an hour later when the steam valve was opened, letting steam into the coils, the water ran back to the boiler by its natural attraction of gravity, came in contact with and quickly cooled the heated boiler plates so as to cause sudden and excessive shrinkage and consequent breakage. Had there been a greater pressure of steam in the boiler, as suggested by Lord & Johnson in their communication, the destruction would have been very serious, and I doubt if there would have been much of the boiler left with which to have made the temporary repairs which they were fortunately able to do.

Had this boiler been of wrought iron instead of cast iron the probabilities are that the troubles would have been much more serious, as the water striking the heated plates would have so quickly generated steam, which, having no outlet, would have raised the pressure in the boiler so rapidly, and to such an extreme, as to cause an explosion which would have left little of the boiler house or surrounding buildings to tell the story. The safety of a cast iron boiler lays in the fact that as soon as the heated, uncovered surfaces are reached by water they break apart by the sudden contraction, and so afford an immediate relief for any excessive accumulation of steam.

Easter Pot Roses.

The illustrations herewith are not intended to show how large it is possible to make the Crimson Rambler and other climbers grow, it being understood that two, three or four-year-old plants would make a much finer showing, but the photographs well illustrate what can be accomplished by intelligent cultivation in a short time and suggest possibilities in plants that can be sold at a profit at prices that are within the reach of the average customer. The plants were grown by Lawrence Cotter, of Dorchester, Mass., and at the present date are only a little over a year old, having been from cuttings rooted in February, 1899. To test the comparative value of each method one-half were grown inside and one-half outside all summer, and the result appears to have been the same in both cases, no difference being apparent in the plants. The pots outside were plunged up to the rims and taken in December 15. Mr. Cotter's experience is that the process of ripening is the most important feature in the handling. At first they were kept at a temperature of 42°, then advanced to 45° at night until early in February when the heat was increased to 50° and later on to 53° while the buds were developing. The ramblers are gross feeders and were given liquid manure stimulant and were top dressed with sheep manure and loam in equal parts. The Crimson Rambler is the slowest of its type, and requires about a month longer time than do the pink, white or yellow ramblers. The moss rose shown is the new climbing variety, Cumberland Belle, which cannot fail to become a great favorite an account of its beauty.

Sweet Peas in Canada.

As the period is near when growers of sweet peas will be looking over the catalogues and considering the merits of the different kinds, some practical remarks from a "sweet pea crank" who has made a study of them for many years and who last season grew 212 different varieties, may be acceptable.

There are many theories as to the best soil for sweet peas, the best manures and the best ways of planting. I have tried, during the last ten years, every method I have heard of and I cannot find that any one of them has shown such a marked advantage over the others as to be the best for all purposes, so much depending upon climatic conditions. It is commonly stated that a clay soil is the best for sweet peas but the finest flowers I ever saw were grown in almost pure yellow sand on the shores of Lake Simcoe. They had purity of color, substance of petal, size and solidity of stem unequalled, and they were grown by a lady who had never tried them before, and without manure.

Eight years ago I rented a house with a yard which was composed for eighteen inches of its depth of a dirty white clay which had been dug out in making the very large cellar. There was a stable at the end of the yard, and a pony which had been kept there, and bedded on fine shavings, had had the run of the yard, and so had the shavings. After getting off such shavings as were not too firmly embedded in the clay, I set a man to work to dig the garden. He found it impossible to do it without the aid of a pick. This will give some idea of the nature of the soil. After the ground had been roughly worked over I dug a trench along the west and a portion of the south sides of the fence, about fifteen inches deep and twelve inches wide. The clay which came out of this I mixed with coal ashes and partially rotted horse manure in about equal proportions and put it back in the trench, pressing it down with my feet. I then made holes three inches deep and one inch apart and sowed a sweet pea seed in each. It was May 24 when I sowed the seed. Nearly every seed grew, and I never saw such growth. The fence was eight feet high, and I put up wires two feet higher; the peas grew over these wires, and some of the vines ran down into my neighbor's garden nearly seven feet. We picked the flowers every day. I have not a record of when they commenced to bloom but I think it was about the third week in July and they continued a mass of flowers until cut down by frost the second week in November.

In 1898 I made an experiment with eight trenches one foot deep and wide, filling them with various mixtures of yellow clay, good loam, sandy loam, and strong black loam, manured in various ways, with horse manure, cow manure, hen manure, soot, wood ashes and lime. The season was dry and although I used unlimited supplies of water, my eight rows were all equally bad; there was not a choice between them, and I had the poorest lot of peas I ever grew. A friend of mine in a lower part of the city, with a yellow sand for soil, had the finest peas in town and only used the hose once during the season. I think the reason for this was that his subsoil was also of a sandy nature with some admixture of clay and, being near the shore of Lake Ontario, his ground always appeared to be moist about a foot below the surface, no matter how dry the surface might be.

In the fall of 1896 I gave some Blanche Ferry seed to a florist friend of mine who has large, lofty greenhouses and he sowed them in a solid bed in the center of the greenhouse in a compost one half very heavy clay and the other half horse manure, not by any means thoroughly decomposed, and he wrote me on May 7, following:

"I planted the sweet pea seeds on a solid bench in one of my greenhouses last fall and they have produced the finest flowers ever seen in this city, either grown in the house or open air. The flowers are large and of good substance, and the colors clear and distinct. They are nearly all produced three and four on a stem, and the stems are remarkably long and sturdy, very many fourteen to sixteen inches long."

I send you all these details because I think they go to prove that success in growing sweet peas does not entirely depend upon the quality either of the soil or of the manure used. As the result of my experience in growing them for many years I believe that a good light clay loam is the soil best suited to their growth, and I think that new ground that has not been tilled for some years and contains a large proportion of natural humus will give better and larger flowers than one will ever succeed in getting out of the same ground afterwards, till it how you may.

In 1899 I moved onto my present premises in May. The soil is a good light clay, one which does not pack much upon the surface; in fact, when it dries in the sun after a heavy rain one can rake up the crust anywhere with one's fingers. I was very short of fertilizer and could not spread more than two inches in depth of well-rotted horse manure over the three-fourths of an acre I put in for a trial ground. This was ploughed and harrowed and cross-harrowed, thoroughly mixing the soil with the fertilizer. Rows were marked out five feet apart and three inches deep. The seeds were dropped on May 4 and 5, three seeds together every six inches. They were then covered and pressed down with the feet. My reason for sowing three seeds in each place was to make sure that there should be no vacancies. When more than one plant came up together we endeavored to pull the others up, leaving one. We had some nice showers after sowing and nearly every seed grew, but the weather then became very hot and from the time the plants were about eighteen inches in height we did not have a drop of rain for two months. The result was that they started to flower almost immediately and did not grow much more in height, but such a mass of flowers I never saw before and the colors were simply perfect.

We had frequently found fault with Eckford's descriptions of his new varieties, as we never could get them to come quite up to his glowing descriptions, but this season we had to take it all back. If a man has such a soil as I have just described I do not think there is any better way of growing the sweet pea, only this season I shall put in a little more manure.

If you have poor soil, sand or heavy clay, I recommend the trench system. Dig a trench twelve inches deep and wide, have a compost mixed such as is used for the greenhouse benches, of rotted sod and old manure. If the manure is not very old do not use so much, but if it is thoroughly rotted you can make it half and half with safety. Fill your trench six inches deep with this, sow your seeds upon it and cover them with two inches of the same compost. After they are up an inch or two rake in some of the virgin soil of your garden, taking care not to cover the tops completely, and as they grow continue filling in the trench until level with the ground. Then with the feet press it firmly down, leaving a slight hollow all along the rows. This I believe to produce the best results. The seeds being deep, get stronger roots and will last and flower much later than those not so deep, and in dry weather the roots are kept cool and moist, which is what they require.

If you use a hose and the weather is dry, do not be too free with it; I have seen it advocated to pour water into the trenches and this is all very well if you have a gravelly subsoil and your drainage is perfect, but if not it will materially weaken your vines. During hot weather it is a good plan to lightly sprinkle the vines themselves every day or two after the sun is off them, or if you cannot wait till the sun goes down, it does very little harm, if any, to sprinkle them when it is on, but do not drench them, and always endeavor to cut your flowers first. The flowers should be cut in the afternoon, when fully expanded by the sun and placed in jars in cold water in a cold, dark cellar. They will partially close up during the night, but will come out stiff and sturdy in the morning ready for packing and will expand to their full extent as soon as they get into the light.

The perfume of the sweet pea is not lasting; there is very little left twenty-four hours after they are cut, and this is the best test of their freshness, as the stems and flowers will sometimes be quite stiff and look fresh for a number of days, although the colors begin to fade in a day or two.

I present a few extracts from my note book as to those varieties which have proved their superiority or vice versa in my trials, not noticing many of the older ones which are only valuable to the collector who desires to have "something of everything," and as evidence of the great advances which have been made:

Walker's Coronet.—This is an improved Coronet selected by S. T. Walker, of Oregon, with larger flowers than the ordinary strain.

Hutchins' Notched White.—This is certainly the most prolific of all the whites, and will suit the florists who prefer quantity to quality.

*Walker's Dawn.—An improved Grey Friar; a beautiful pea, with many double flowers.

Burpee's Wawona.—New striped heliotrope; a large and beautiful pea; varies in striping; some quite red stripes.

Burpee's Fashion.— Between reddish mauve and carmine; description correct; a fine flower.

Gorgeous. — Burpee's 1899 novelty; rich orange salmon, said to be an advance on Meteor; description correct but burns badly.

*Navy Blue.—Burpee's 1899 novelty; "a true blue;" this is without doubt the best blue; with me it was late in flowering, but it had long stems; the color was grand, and nearly all the flowers were three to the stem.

Burpee's Bush —This is of true bush form, but was not very sturdy; must wait further trials.

*Pink Friar.—Burpee's carmine rose on white ground; a grand flower.

Sadie Burpee.—The vitality of this, both black and white seeded, proved very poor with me; try again.

Triumph.—Eckford's 1898 novelty; a fine sturdy pea; Eckford's description correct; wings tinged pink, turning all pink with age.

*Stella Morse.—Burpee's; a fine sturdy pea, cream and blush pink; makes a beautiful bunch.

*Shahzada.—Eckford's 1898 novelty; a very much improved Stanley.

Sensation.—Burpee's flesh colored novelty; description correct; fine flower.

*Salopian.—Eckford's 1898 novelty; a very much improved Mars; larger flower and did not burn at all.

*Prima Donna.—This although not a new variety still holds its own as without doubt the best pink; large and commonly four on a stem.

Prince Edward of York.—Eckford's 1898 novelty; true to description; grand flower.

*Prince of Wales.—Eckford's 1898 novelty; standards rose, wings rose pink; a grand flower, description correct.

Princess of Wales.—An older but the best dark striped variety; a very large and fine flower.

*Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain.—Striped bright rose on white; still the finest of its color.

Mars.—Good, but burned badly; Salopian much better.

*Lady Nina Balfour.—Eckford's 1898 novelty; a great improvement on Countess of Radnor; larger, finer flower; beautiful color.

Countess of Powis.—Eckford's 1898 novelty; "an improved Meteor;" description correct but burns badly.

*Duke of Sutherland.—Eckford's 1898 novelty; "deep claret turning to deep indigo blue;" description correct; fine large flower.

*Golden Gleam.—The Sunset Seed Company's yellow; undoubtedly the best yellow to date.

*Lady Mary Currie.—Eckford's 1898 novelty; "a deep orange pink;" description correct; a grand pea; does not burn so badly as the other orange varieties.

Chancellor.—Eckford's 1898 novelty; he says "finest orange pink;" I find it a good color but not so large or fine as Lady Mary Currie.

Black Knight.—Eckford's 1898 novelty; deep maroon self; with me the growth was poor and substance light, but color fine.

*Burpee's Earliest of All.—An excellent very early Blanche Ferry.

Meteor.—Burns badly.

Mikado.—Sports considerably.

Katherine Tracy.—Fine, but not equal to Prima Donna.

Brilliant.—The brightest red; very floriferous.

Red Riding Hood.—An abortion; no good at all.

*Burpee's Pink Cupid.—This is undoubtedly the sturdiest of the Cupid peas; not a seed misses with me, and they made a beautiful border, full of bloom, lasting longer than any of the other peas; can strongly recommend this as a border plant.

I have marked those varieties with an * which have proved the best as cut flowers for commercial purposes in the city of Toronto, and will close this lengthy paper with an account of a very curious thing that happened to a friend of mine who is a fellow "sweet pea crank." He had grown a grand collection of sweet peas for exhibition and about a week before the exhibition the vines were loaded with magnificent flowers. One afternoon we had a heavy rain, with very violent thunder and lightning and within half an hour afterwards every plant was completely destroyed by mildew. S. P.

Lemoine's New Gladioli.

The National Horticultural Society of France held a public exhibition of plants and flowers at Paris, September 14 and 15, 1899, and referring to cut spikes of gladioli, a correspondent of the journal of the society commented as follows:

Messrs. V. Lemoine & Son, of Nancy, were the only exhibitors for this class, but we may say that no one was ever afforded the opportunity of admiring a more perfect display of these iridaceous plants. The collection staged by these skillful hybridists, creators of the beautiful plants known as Gladiolus Lemoinei and G. Nanceianus, was very conspicuous on account of the beauty of the spikes, furnished from top to bottom with fully expanded flowers and shown in the most artistic style. The individual blooms were of unusual size and there was great diversity in the colors. A gold medal with the congratulations of the judges was awarded to Messrs. V. Lemoine & Son.

Among the older sorts of Gladiolus Lemoinei which were staged, were Deuil de Carnot, E. V. Hallock, Henriette Renan, M. Leveque, Cardinal, Comte Chotek, Marc Micheli, M. Jarry-Desloges, Princesse Altieri, Voie lactee, in all of which the colorings were diverse and gorgeous. Next in the bluish section, so much sought after in this kind of plant, were Micromegas, Senateur Volland, Rosa Bonheur, Baron Joseph Hulot, Pierre Loti, Stamboul, etc.

Of the newer varieties those especially noted were, Belle Alliance, medium sized flowers, of a pale lilac, the inferior lobes being of a dark violet color, with a large yellow spot in their center and a quantity of prune colored dots; Fulgurant, a beautiful flower, bright scarlet with a pale yellow throat; Mme. Judic, sulphur-yellow with purple blotches; Cronstadt, a magnificent variety with large, well expanded flowers, bluish lilac and violet, the lower segments being crimson with a violet edging; Ethiopie, a remarkable, very dark brownish violet color, almost black, with two or three inferior lobes entirely black.

The varieties of Gladiolus Nanceianus were not inferior to the above. Among the older ones were Charles de Varigny, Duthreuil de Rhins, Jean Dybowski, Sir Trevor Lawrence, Comte de Montebello, Antoinette Thiry, etc., and among those of more recent introduction were Edouard Andre, very large flowers of perfect form and nearly brown or a chocolate tint, with maroon-brown dots on a white throat; James H. Veitch, with stately spikes furnished with large, erect, well expanded flowers of a clear red color with a straw yellow throat and purple spots.

To complete the collection the exhibitors staged some new varieties of the highest value, but not yet in the trade, such as Perle Rose (Syn. Louis Dalle), of a lovely pink, with large crimson blotches on the lower segments; No. 633 salmon with large, bright red blotches; Lieutendant Meynier (Nanceianus), cherry, the throat covered with white and purple dots; Francisque Sarcey, (Lemoinei), a round flower of a dark salmon shade with large, almost black spots; Jules Toussaint (Lemoinei), pale violet with plum-colored blotches; No. 672, bright rose, with white blotches and purple dots, Solfatare (Lemoinei), clear yellow with brown spots; Apotheose (Nanceianus), an immense bloom, magenta, spotted with white and striped with purple; Ocean (Lemoinei), a beautiful violet color with brown and white spots; No. 744, bright scarlet and large flowers; Lumineux (Lemoinei), sulphur yellow with two scarlet blotches on the lower segments, etc.

NEW VARIETIES OF GLADIOLUS LEMOINEI.

Some Thoughts on Hybridizing.

The production of high class seed is by no means the simple process that many imagine it. It means much more than simply to plant and harvest. Especially is this true of the attempt to create new varieties by combining the qualities of existing sorts. In this case many factors enter into the problem and help to determine the result, and the grower is really forced to widen his work, becoming a breeder as well.

Most persons would suppose that the intrinsic worth of any given seed would be determined entirely by the merit of the parent stock. Yet, unless taken with some qualification, nothing could be more misleading than this partial statement of a general truth. A better understanding of the laws of heredity, the transmission of traits and characteristics, and the various ancestral influences co-existent in the present, will lead to a more conditional statement. The knowledge gained by long experience, the skill and patience born of a real enthusiasm for the work, following the teachings of nature rather than antagonizing them, will often accomplish more with a second rate foundation stock than careless, indifferent and slipshod methods can ever attain with a far better equipment. Experience has frequently shown that, starting from the same point in animal, vegetable or floral lines of work, in the hands of one there will be deterioration, rapid and sure, while with another, progress and improvement will be the rule; in fact there are so many difficulties in the way, whether caused by lack of skill on the one side or by the constant tendency to degenerate on the other, that it is as much as the ordinary grower can do to preserve the standard attained by others, after it has been handed over to him, without being able to make any advancement. It is somewhat as in the formation of a mathematical series, or the building of a block tower. Only the right sequence will advance the work and secure what has already been done, while a false move is the ruin of all and necessitates a new beginning. The ability to discern between the right and the wrong courses may be gained by experience, perhaps, but it seems largely intuitive and is one of the things that mark the difference between the workman and the bungler.

Sometimes a very, very few years of intelligent manipulation of a parent stock and its progeny will result in the production of a really new form of the greatest value, which is in no sense of the word a "sport," or freak of nature, but rather the certain result of natural tendencies directed by intelligent purpose, as truly the creation of the grower as if hewn out of the marble with mallet and chisel. Unknown possibilities are hidden in the law of heredity. They are there for any and all who will seek to gain them and now and then some one learns to fit the golden key into the closed lock, and opens the door to hitherto unknown beauty and joy. I believe such results are entirely outside the domain of chance and fairly within that of law, as truly as the results that follow the operation of any other of nature's laws. A problem in arithmetic is certain to "come out right," as we used to say in school-boy days, if the work be correctly performed, but one false step, one mistake, one wrong figure, and the dunce block is not far away. Perhaps it is too much to use this as an illustration, for I must admit that we may never be able to understand the laws of heredity and transmission as we do those of the exact sciences, yet a comparison is obvious. The cases may not be identical but they are at least analogous.

The principles of breeding in the animal kingdom, at least, are fairly well understood. Of necessity those that obtain in the vegetable and floral world differ somewhat. The most noticeable of these differences can readily be traced to the fact that while but one mode of propagation is the rule in the animal world, in most genera of the plant world there are several. Some of these which do not require the combined influence of separate parental factors, as they are outside the sphere of sexuality, seem also free from much that is included in the code of heredity.

NEW VARIETIES OF GLADIOLUS NANCEIANUS.

Generally speaking, however, the variations that occur in propagation by the production of seed, requiring the co-operation of two pro-creative agents, with all the possibilities thus revealed, lie strictly within the province of heredity and the art of the hybridist.

Here he finds his vantage ground, the opportunity to interpose his own will as a directing force, into the operations of plant life which else seem entrusted to the care of chance, the waft of the wind that "blows where it listeth," or the freakish flight of the nectar seeking rover. These, indeed, serve nature's purpose in the propagation of the species, but very seldom serve man's in its improvement. Centuries of such aimless agencies would not accomplish what may be attained in a few seasons by the hand of the skilled hybridist directing the forces of nature to work out a definite end. It is true that sports do sometimes appear, as the result of the undirected work of the wind or the insects, but florists certainly no longer depend upon that source of supply for the new forms they desire. Life is too short, patience too scant, the need too keenly felt, and so one who longs for some new variety, or who has an ideal in his mind strives intelligently to create that form, to realize the ideal, and, granting that the object be obtainable and not Utopian, his success or failure depends very much on the extent to which he knows how to use his tools. Of these the most important is that great general law that "like produces like," but there also are many questions of adaptation, of combination, of antecedent influences, and other things that must be utilized in the light of experience already gained, or experiments yet to be made, and all that comprises individual ability, skill and insight enabling him to meet the complexities of the problem to be solved.

What nature does occasionally in the production of a sport or variation, the hybridist seeks to reduce to a constant method. Nature may, indeed, give us here and there a beautiful cascade, but these are fortuitous. One stream in a hundred may have its cascade, but artistic skill, following the hints given by nature, can make of every rippling brook a thing of beauty. The discovery of the part played by pollen in the perpetuation of species marks an epoch in the floral world, and though its full significance was not at first understood, nor was it realized what an open door was here set before the culturist, it is increasingly evident that of late years this new realm is being explored with enthusiasm, and many of our choicest floral treasures and agricultural species owe their existence to the art of the hybridist.

It may be true, as some say, that such art is contrary to nature. Certainly it is true that nature seems to take precautions against the general and indiscriminate commingling of species, and these precautions are so effective that a true natural hybrid is almost unknown. By this provision is secured that permanence of type that characterizes varieties, and makes them of use to man, and without it all distinction would soon be lost in the mongrelism that would follow. Still the botanist and florist know that there are just as express provisions in the economy of nature, for a limited cross-fertilization, and our wisdom is in following her lead. Darwin's long series of experiments establish the fact that increased vigor is an unfailing result of cross-breeding within the limits set by nature, and beyond these we cannot go. Many species are effectually guarded against close self-fertilization by persistent traits of the flowers. The gladiolus, with which my work lies, is one of these, being proterandrous, thus making it impossible for a flower to be fertilized naturally with its own pollen, and difficult even by artificial means.

The hybridist's sphere of work is limited, but quite sufficient to enable him to produce some gratifying results. He is in fact almost confined to cross-breeding between varieties, only in rare instances producing a real hybrid. A true hybrid, natural or artificial, is rare, most of those that are so called being cross-breeds. Possibly some may differ with me as to this, but I am satisfied that I speak in strict accord with botanical truth. Artificial pollenization is quite a different thing from hybridization, although the terms are popularly supposed to be synonymous. The mere manipulation is the same, but the subjects and results form a distinction as great as that between genus and species. But in whatever way we regard it, there can be no doubt that in the power to control the potencies that determine the character of the future plant we have a gift of greatest value to the floral world.

In a general way the work of the hybridist may be placed under two broad divisions, combination and concentration. At least, this is my view of it, and this is the governing principle on which my own work is based. In the production of new seedling gladioli from a foundation stock comprising the best attainable named sorts in many varieties, selected novelties and hybridized selected seedlings, I find my labor rewarded in a very gratifying way. I have grown many seedlings equal to the named sorts of recent introduction and superior to those of past years, and the average percentage of meritorious plants is much greater than in those grown from self-fertilized seed, even from selected flowers of equal value. Among my seedlings, for instance, bloomed this season an exquisite double pink, that could be compared to nothing else so truly as to the double pink oleander, Nerium fl. pl. If this possesses fixity of type and can be grown in shades of color it will be a real acquisition.

In this work I carry on the two distinct lines referred to, first to combine by pollenization, often in reverse, the desirable qualities of varities entirely distinct, and sometimes directly antagonistic, the resultant progeny of this cross-breeding showing endless diversity in form, color, texture, habit, and sometimes the latent atavism stirred into action throws out strange types. The second method I adopt when I desire to fix, or if possible, accentuate the characteristics of specially desirable sorts, by fertilizing with pollen from the same plant, or another of the same variety. The first method is cross-breeding, the second in-breeding, each of the most pronounced type. Time will be needed to test all the methods employed, that they be judged by their results. This kind of work inevitably develops many experimental side lines, and each grower will have his own, which may or may not develop in a hobby. There can be no doubt, however, that the work of the hybridist is a most important one, and that the combined labor of many working to the same end will bring into being many new forms of beauty of the greatest interest and value to the floral world. WILBUR A. CHRISTY.

Herbaceous Plants in Bloom Indoors.

As is well known, any herbaceous plant which flowers early out of doors may be readily forced inside. Those who think such plants would sell should make note of the proper kinds as they flower outside in the spring, looking towards securing plants in autumn for next winter's work. The same must be said of these plants as of shrubs; it is only those which flower early in spring which should be chosen. The later bloomers are not satisfactory.

Recently when in a nursery establishment where herbaceous plants are grown inside in winter for propagating purposes, I saw in flower a pretty composite plant, Doronicum plantagineum excelsum, which struck me as a desirable pot plant for winter. The flowers are yellow, large, three to four inches in diameter, and from the time the first one opens to the close of the last, some six weeks elapses. There is a central flower on a stalk of about twelve inches, and then a few axillary ones, after the first is over, from lower down the stalk. Though perhaps not just the flower for design work they are very lasting in a vase of water, keeping fresh a week or more, or until the natural term of expansion is over.

There were also in bloom Iberis tenorianum, I. sempervirens and I. Gibraltarica. These are all white flowered indoors, but when outside the last named is a light pink. In fact, inside there is some lilac color in the flower. These candytufts are very pretty pot plants, I. sempervirens particularly so. The plants I saw were in 4-inch pots and it can with truth be said that hardly a vestige of foliage could be seen, so dense were the heads of flowers.

The common moss pink is also a good flowering herbaceous plant for inside. This is the Phlox subulata, the creeping phlox. Small plants quickly fill a 3-inch or 4-inch pot with their creeping shoots. Flowers are freely produced. There are three or more colors, pink, lilac, white, etc. This phlox has been recommended for planting on graves, for which purpose it is well suited.

In the same place I saw some pretty plants, full of their pretty rose colored flowers, an old time favorite of the greenhouse, Lopezia rosea. The plants had been struck in midsummer, planted out of doors, taken up and potted into 3-inch pots in the fall. A little pinching in had been practiced to make them symmetrical and the success had been good. These plants bloom all winter.

Delphinium Zalil.

This is one of the hardy herbaceous perennials which do not receive sufficient consideration. This is so much more to be regretted since it furnishes excellent material for long stemmed floral work. The color is a magnificent light sulphur yellow. The single flowers are about one inch in diameter, arranged in a long, loose cluster and open nearly all at the same time. For large vases this larkspur is particularly adaptable. The cut flowers will keep in water for a week — Die Bindekunst.

FLOWERS AND PLANTS AT FUNERALS AT THE HOUSE.

Flowers and Plants at Funerals.

The accompanying illustrations show an arrangement of plants for a funeral. The first arrangement was at the house. Under the center and foot of the casket are adiantum ferns from which Asparagus tenuissimus is trained, some sprays shading from green to light yellow. Nearer the head are ornamental grasses, white, yellow and green, with delicate plume-like flowers of lavender. The corner is built with nephrolepis ferns and two varieties of tree fern, alsophilas and cibotiums, with a large spray of eucalyptus, with its metalic gray-green enlivened with some choice sprays of stephanotis, which are cut and kept fresh by having the ends in bottles of water which are wired onto stems of the ferns and concealed from view. A banana about ten feet tall tops the whole. The lower side of the mantel shelf has pots of torenia in full bloom, small ferns and a few Primula obconica and a fine specimen auratum. On the cover of the casket was a cross of pansies.

The second illustration shows the church made ready for the obsequies. In front of the chancel was a mound of ferns made large enough to hide the truck on which the casket is pushed in and out of the church. At the left kentias rise fifteen feet high and droop over where the head of the casket would be. The palms rested upon adjustable iron stands. The opposite side, in place of being made to correspond, was of bamboos, quite light and feathery. The lower part was covered by pots of yellow elderberry plants; on either side were large palms, some arecas twelve feet high, raised to make them eighteen feet with latanias at the base to cover the stands. Chrysanthemum Notes.

Our plants intended for specimens are showing many flowering buds. If we have any choice we discard these, but as often happens, many of them are needful varieties, and we must persevere. John Shrimpton is very liable to go to bloom prematurely; but though it retards the growing season, the plants usually come out of it and make good specimens. I am at a loss to account for these freaks, and first noticed them in Viviand-Morel. Plants intended for twelve-inch pots should now be in sevens, and those for tens in sixes, to be ready for the final shift early in May. It is essential above all things that the pots be sweet and clean. If new, some means must be found for driving out the kiln gases. A good soaking, or exposure to a rain storm will do this perfectly, and some go so far as to fill the pots with moist earth, emptying them before using. And there should be three good-sized drainage holes in the large pots, and sizes even as low as nines are better for three holes than one. With a crock over each hole, and charcoal for the rest of the drainage, we should guard against souring of the soil, and secure healthy root action.

Chrysanthemums are not particular in the matter of soil, so long as it is fresh and fairly rich. It is so much the better if it has a body of fiber in it. Lime seems to be an essential in the building up of sturdy growth, and we contrive to give it in the form of bone meal, which adds phosphates at the same time. We pot firmly if the soil be light, and lightly if heavy. Plenty of room, say an inch and a half is allowed for watering, as well as a top-dressing later. A good soaking is given, and then they are left to dry out, taking probably four to five days, afterwards watering sparingly until the roots are well developed.

Since sending my opinion on Mr. Gallagher's sport of W. H. Chadwick, which appeared in the AMERICAN FLORIST of March 17, I have had a side stem of the latter variety bloom, and it is perfectly reflexed. It seems to me it might happen to some varieties when the shoots have been injured, and which afterwards develop late side buds. I have also had a letter from Alfred Wingett, gardener to Chas. Lanier, of Lenox, Mass., who states that he had a plant of John Shrimpton (crimson reflexed) among a batch, all taken from one and his only stock plant, which came perfectly incurved. He adds that it is impossible he could have made a mistake, as he had nothing like this sport, and there is nothing known to him in cultivation like it. T. D. HATFIELD.

Forcing Carnations for Easter.

With only two weeks until Easter we shall have to offer our plants every inducement in order to get a good crop of flowers, particularly if the weather is unfavorable. Many growers will give liquid manure and perhaps this, for two weeks' results, is as good as anything that can be used. I shall apply a light coat of bone meal and work it into the soil pretty well and then water heavily, but this is simply another form of liquid manure, and a little easier applied where one has not facilities for carrying it through the water pipes.

If the buds are slow in developing the houses can be kept pretty warm on bright days, but let it be the natural heat of the sun, not fire heat, and keep watch of the plants to see that they do not suffer in any way or your crop will be only a little larger at the great expense of the quality, and it is far better to have 500 good flowers than 1,000 that are poor. As soon as you see the stems beginning to weaken through the forcing process, stop it at once; let the plants get moderately dry and give lots of ventilation until you get them back to their normal condition.

FLOWERS AND PLANTS AT FUNERALS—AT THE CHURCH.

If you happen to have moderate weather, do not let that be a temptation to stop firing, as if you want to let your plants have the benefit of the sun heat during the day you will also have to keep your night temperature up in proportion. You must have at least 55° at night or the difference between night and day temperature will bring you a crop of split calyxes.

Carnations are water loving plants, but sometimes with a good crop of buds set and no promise of getting them in at the time wanted, a little moderation in watering will tend to push them into development. If the plants are growing extra strong and taking the strength from the buds, as sometimes happens at this season, and especially with solid beds, they can be checked and the buds brought in by taking a sickle, hoe or any other appliance that will go into the soil from three to four inches, and running it through the rows several times so as to cut some of the roots. This has a tendency to check the strong growth of the plant, make it set buds and to hasten the blooming of those already on the plants. In some soils and under some treatments this might not work as well as it does with me, so that I would recommend trying a small portion of a bench or bed with this root pruning act and noting the results for another season's use. This would not do during the winter when the whole season is before us and the plants are wanted for the double duty of producing flowers and cuttings. ALBERT M. HERR.

Dendrobium Phalaenopsis Schroederianum.

It is evident from the enormous quantity of orchid flowers placed upon the market during the past year that they are rapidly taking a prominent position for all kinds of decorative work. The growers are beginning to appreciate the fact that, with roses, carnations, violets or palms, they will find a ready sale for orchids if they will only grow them in quantity. There are many varieties of orchids well adapted for cutting purposes but, unfortunately, they cannot be procured in such quantities as to enable the grower to profitably invest in them.

When Dendrobium Phalænopsis var. Schrœderianum was first introduced, imported plants arrived by the thousands from the tropics and annually large consignments have been sent to Europe to satisfy the demand that its popularity has created. Many enterprising nurserymen, seeing its commercial value, quickly secured a stock and entire houses are now devoted to its culture.

At Carlton Hill, New Jersey, Mr. Roehrs has a structure 100 feet long well filled with some thousands of this orchid and when in full bloom it is a sight unequalled anywhere in the country. In several other establishments it is grown in quantity solely for cutting purposes.

A nurseryman in England has 10,000 plants in one house and where such a number are grown flowers can be had from autumn until late in the winter. Very few dendrobiums have such long stems as this variety and it is not always policy to sacrifice the bulbs with the flowers of any dendrobe, unless the stock can be replenished without a heavy outlay.

Many native flower spikes were shown when this orchid was first placed on the market; as many as thirty-two blossoms had been produced on some of them, and we are fast approaching that number under cultivation. Their coloring is very varied and ranges from the purest white to dark vinous purple.

This variety is of easy culture, delights in a small pan or pot, with a hot, moist atmosphere during growth, which occurs during the summer months, with abundance of air and a slight protection from the sun. After flowering give them three months rest in a very cool situation with very little moisture, only enough to keep them from shriveling too much. A very limited quantity of compost is necessary, the roots much preferring to ramble in the air provided the atmospheric conditions are conducive to their welfare.

A. DIMMOCK.

Helpful Reminders.

All covering for the winter protection of outside plants should now be removed. Do what you can to open the soil for root action. Where ice has formed over the surface of the ground, remove it as speedily as possible, particularly where it is over the roots of plants which have tops exposed to the atmosphere and which will be induced to develop buds before the roots are prepared to co-operate. For this reason the straw that has been thatched over some clematises, honeysuckles, roses, etc., had better be left to protect them from the influence of the sun until the ground is open. Dryness of the subsoil must be guarded against, particularly with bulb beds, where they get full sun along southern shelter of buildings, fences or shrubbery. Put on a light covering of dry leaves or hay to husband up the moisture until a copious April shower arrives. Many good bulb beds are damaged by four or five days' neglect under such conditions and your bulb merchant gets the blame.

If you have a shrub that grows misshapen and tall where you wish it to be more symmetrical, like a Spiræa Van Houttei, take it up and plant a spiræa in its place; do not keep continually hacking at the poor substitute. If you want healthy boughs full of bloom, do not cut off the best flower buds by heading it in all over, as is so commonly done. Most of our flowering shrubbery formed its flower buds last autumn and the best of these are as a rule near the ends of branches and no more will be formed until next autumn, so do not cut the best of them off now. Take off weak or unnecessary branches with a sharp tool; this should be carefully but moderately done each season. The few shrubs which form their flowers on wood made this season may be headed in without the loss of flowers, but do not head in without a good reason.

Spread loam lightly on your lawn, sufficient to fill in the little holes and cover the young side shoots of grass. Roll it to put in smooth condition, first raking in some grass seed in places where the turf has become damaged, and allow it to make a good, strong growth before using the mower. It is then in better shape to stand summer and mowing can be continued weekly thereafter.

You may be asked to take down a large vine from the porch or side of a house to enable painters to work. Do not take it down but put in two or more scantlings three feet or so from the house; loosen the vine and fasten it to the scantlings. This will give the painters room to work without injuring the vine in the least. C. B. W.

GARDENERS' SOCIETY MEETS AT THE PRESS CLUB.—SOME GOOD EXHIBITS REWARDED.—THE DAHLIA SOCIETY HOLDS A MEETING.—CONVENTION MATTERS PROGRESSING.—FINE PRIZE FOR THE BOWLERS.—STATE OF BUSINESS.—PERSONAL MENTION.

The quarterly meeting of the New York Gardeners' Society took place at the Press Club rooms on West Twenty-sixth street on Tuesday evening, March 27, and there was a very attractive carnation show in connection therewith. The opening of the rose society's show at the Eden Musée on the same day helped to bring a goodly number to the meeting, which was very well attended. The principal competition was for the cup offered by C. W. Ward, it being won by Mr. Duckham with a fine collection of standard varieties, Wm. Russell being a very close second. Certificates were given to E. Banyard & Son for Petunia

DENDROBIUM PHALÆNOPSIS SCHRŒDERIANUM.

Pink Perfection, to Dailledouze Bros. for No. 666, to C. W. Ward for Gov. Roosevelt, to Lehnig & Winnifield for a white seedling, to H. Weber & Son for No. 126, dark crimson; for No. 110, white; for Genevieve Lord and for No. 40, pink. They were also given honorable mention for No. 30 and honorable mention was awarded to H.F. Michell for Mrs. Bertram Lippincott. Geo. H. Hay won a copy of Scott's Manual and a book presented by the A. T. De la Mare Printing and Publishing Co. The meeting was held in the rooms down stairs, where a light lunch and social intercourse were enjoyed previously and some very complimentary remarks were made by a number of visitors. The meeting was devoted chiefly to a discussion of the part to be taken in the horticultural exhibition at the time of the S. A. F. convention and considerable enthusiasm was developed.

The American Dahlia Society met at the rooms of the American Institute on March 26. There were present Messrs. H. F. Burt, Taunton, Mass.; M. Higgins, E. Bridgewater, Mass.; Rev. Mr. Hutchins, Springfield, Mass.; Rev. C. W. Bolton, Pelham; E. S. Brown, Jersey City; H. Miller, Brooklyn; S. Henshaw, J. W. Withers and Dr. Hexamer, New York. None of the officers being in evidence, Mr. Henshaw took the chair and Mr. Withers was made secretary. L. K. Peacock sent in his resignation as secretary. After some discussion of a general nature it was resolved to endorse the arrangements being made for an exhibition at Springfield, Mass., the coming fall.

The general committee on ways and means of the New York Florists' Club met at the club rooms on Monday night. There was a very full attendance and reports of sub-committees showed gratifying progress being made in all departments. The committee on sports brought news of the offer of a $100 prize cup for the bowling tournament, offered by Lord & Burnham.

Business in general is rather under the average and flower prices are down on all lines excepting carnations, which, being still short in crop, hold up with a bold front. STATE OF THE MARKET.—UNCERTAINTY REGARDING EASTER LILIES. — QUAKER CITY ROSES SWEEP THE BOARDS AT NEW YORK.—PHILADELPHIA GROWERS IN A POSITION TO QUOTE CÆSAR.—VISITED THE ROSE SHOW AND CAPTURED THE BEST PRIZES.—BALL REBUILDING.

Lent is slipping away nicely. There is no serious overplus of flowers, as the demand is sufficient to use up, or at least almost keep pace with the supply. Prices are about the same as last week, a trifle softer perhaps in Brides and Bridesmaids and special Beauties, but stationary as to the other kinks of stock. The condition of the Easter stock is beginning to cause some apprehension on the part of the lily growers, some of whom thought a couple of weeks ago they were on "easy street" are now afraid they are away off that thoroughfare and are thinking that many of the lilies will not make the fateful Saturday. It is astonishing how little is known positively, even by experienced growers, about the flowering schedule of lilies. They are sure at first, then doubt sets in, followed by the annual hustle, with no certainty until the final day arrives. I think it is safe to say that there will be at least twenty-five per cent more lilies about this year than last. The price, as far as can be learned, promises to range from 10 cents to 12 cents per flower and bud. Some are hoping for 15 cents, but the wish is father to the hope and it will take very fancy stock to bring such a figure. Other stock will figure about the same as last year.

Quite a contingent of Philadelphians visited the rose show in New York last Tuesday. Some carried flowers which were entered for prizes and were, we believe, glad they took the trouble, as they took almost everything in sight. Think of slow Philadelphia capturing the first prize and also the second for the best twenty-five Beauties in a competition with some twelve or more of the best growers for the New York market! Myers & Samtman and Joseph Heacock were the winners in the order named. Mr. Heacock also received first for best fifty Beauties and second for twenty-five Bridesmaids and the same for twenty-five Brides. Hurrah for this city and her good growers who were not afraid to take their coals to New Castle! Then the two new imported roses certificated were Queen of Edgely and Robert Scott, both of this city. Queen of Edgely, the Floral Exchange's new pink Beauty is a dandy and is pronounced by good judges to be a winner. It is a sport from Beauty, with every good quality of flower and foliage of its parent, while in color it is almost a Bridesmaid pink. It will certainly make a place for itself. The other new one, Robert Scott, is a fine large hybrid tea after the order of Her Majesty, the full open flowers calling this variety to mind. As it is an ever-bloomer it should also be heard from in the near future.

Benjamin Dorrance, president of the American Rose Society, has consented to give an address on the subject of "Roses: Familiar Notes and Suggestions for Progress and Improvement," on April 2, before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia. The subject is a timely one and will excite keen interest among lovers of the rose and all florists are, of course, in that category.

GOOD BUSINESS.—CARNATIONS STRONG BUT ROSES DROOPING —PLANT GROWERS ARE ACTIVE.—GOOD LILIES.—VISITORS TO THE ROSE SHOW. — HORTICULTURAL CLUB DINNER AND OTHER NEWS NOTES.

A fair flower trade, with carnations retaining the important position noted last week, roses dropping in value and violets still overstocked, is the condition prevailing this week in the wholesale markets. The plant growers are in town every day now, shaking hands with the retailers and the latter are making frequent trips to the plant establishments, cementing friendships and exchanging cigars. Easter lilies, as a rule, are splendid with all the growers in this neighborhood; azaleas are somewhat mixed, many inferior lots being seen and the man with first-class specimens need have no fears for the Easter outlook.

Messrs. Wood, Welch and Mathison departed on Monday for the rose society's exhibition at New York. As per time-honored custom they were taken in hand twenty-four hours in advance by the local members of the Old Guard and given preparatory treatment, being accompanied to the train by a distinguished delegation.

PRONOUNCED SHORTAGE OF CARNATIONS — ROSES PLENTIFUL BUT TRADE VERY GOOD.—PROSPECTS FOR A BIG EASTER AND ONLY FAIR SUPPLIES OF STOCK.—DISEASE AMONG THE HARRISII.—VIOLET PROFITS.—AT WITTBOLD'S.—HAUSWIRTH TO MOVE.—LIBERTY LOOKS WELL.—MONINGER INCREASES CAPITAL.—VARIOUS ITEMS OF INTEREST.

The scarcity of carnations has been very pronounced this week, the supply not being sufficient to meet all demands even at the prevailing high prices. Growers state that it is now too late to get in a crop for Easter although most of them have a big cut in sight and are making every effort to coax the buds to open. Of Beauties there is now a plenty. Bassett & Washburn state that they never before had so heavy a crop as is now on and a similar condition prevails with most of the other large growers; the qualities could hardly be better. However heavy the cut, the demand is its equal and everything moves, although at very reasonable rates. Of tea roses there has been something of an accumulation in certain quarters this week and some very fair stock has passed into fakirs' hands. Violets are in better form and bulbous stock is doing fairly well.

The prospects for Easter now are that there will be an adequate supply of lilies and roses enough to meet the demand were it not for the shortage of carnations, which will cause many buyers to use something else, probably roses. There will be more or less bulbous stock, but no very large lots. Easter invariably brings greatly increased needs, so that it is probable that every blossom will be in demand and prudent buyers are placing orders early. This Easter presents an unusual condition in that prices as at present quoted show only an occasional advance over the rates which have prevailed for previous weeks, in fact almost all winter.

John Poehlmann states that they have lost a larger proportion than usual of their Harrisii lilies this year, no less than sixty-five per cent of the bulbs having been diseased. Nevertheless they expect to have a good crop for Easter. They also report that Paper White narcissi have not done well this season, one-fourth the bulbs coming blind.

Mr. Van Aken, of Coldwater, Mich., has been in town this week. His firm is shipping in good violets and he states that, contrary to general belief, Lady Campbell is the most profitable sort. He says he grows it at half the cost of the other varieties and the price seldom goes that low, relatively.

The George Wittbold Company has had a big season and is completely sold out of most of the ordinary commercial sizes. They have some splendid stock, Boston ferns, kentias and latanias, coming on and have also placed an order with C. Petrick, Ghent, Belgium, through August Rhotert, for a lot of kentias which they figure will cost $7,000 laid down in Chicago.

The Kroeschell Bros. Co. has won out in its labor troubles. The strikers tied them up for many weeks last fall but they now have everything in good shape and promise to fill all orders promptly, something impossible during the continuance of the strike.

Phil Hauswirth will move next week from his old location at the Auditorium, Wabash avenue and Congress street, to the Auditorium Annex, Michigan avenue.

Bassett & Washburn have 4,000 plants of Liberty rose, all grafted, nicely potted up and Mr. Bassett says they are the finest lot of rose plants he ever saw.

The John C. Moninger Company has increased its capital stock from $10,000 to $25,000 and has so amended its charter as to legally qualify it to build iron as well as cypress greenhouses.

The Central Floral Company has a good order from the Chicago Athletic Club for each Wednesday, ladies' night. This week they used 600 Beauties.

The father of J. V. Merrion met an accidental death on March 22. The son has the sympathy of every one in an acquaintanceship which extends throughout the trade.

O. P. Bassett and Mrs. Bassett are at West Baden for an outing, following the example of Mr. and Mrs. Washburn.

During the last five days of last week Peter Reinberg cut 16,000 carnations and A. C. Spencer sold them at an average of 2.45 cents each.

Sam Pierce is preparing to add three houses to his range. He has as fine lilies as will be seen in the market this Easter.

Use the telegraph code for your Easter order; it will save you money and make everything plain to the wholesaler.

George M. Geraghty, formerly of Daniels & Fisher, Denver, was in town this week.

T. J. Corbrey has decided not to go to California this spring. Business has been quite brisk with him recently.

J. S. Wilson, of Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs, is rejoicing in the addition to his family of a bouncing boy.

A. Lange went to New York this week to take in the rose show.

SPRING WEATHER MAKES STOCK MORE PLENTIFUL.—A SURPLUS OF LOW GRADES.—SOUTHERN FLOWERS FOR FAKIRS.—NOTES.

The spring-like weather which has prevailed all the week has brought stock on with a rush, especially roses. There is a surplus of common stock and just about enough fancy to supply the demand. There is still an overstock of Meteors. Short-stemmed Beauties are coming in more plentifully while good long-stemmed ones are still scarce. Carnations are more plentiful than last report, although there is no waste in that line and no job lots to be had. There has been a rush of southern violets and jonquils, which are generally sold to the street fakir for what they will bring. They are sold on the streets for 5 cents a dozen for the jonquils and two bunches of violets for 5 cents. A good many of the department stores are having their spring openings and are giving away cut flowers to each person who visits their establishments. This creates a demand for the common stock as they always look to buy at a low figure.

Ostertag Bros. have a decoration for the opening of a large millinery store in which they are to put up a large hat filled with spring flowers and a ball to be opened, which will let out a pair of white pigeons, as the doors of the store are thrown open to the public.

Alex. Seigel has moved from 716 Olive street to Sixth and Washington avenue. He reports a good business in his new quarters.

PROSPECT OF A SHORTAGE OF PLANTS FOR EASTER.—CUT FLOWERS ENOUGH EXCEPT OF BEAUTIES.—A VISIT TO TAPLIN'S.—BEARDS ARE GROWING.—VISITORS.

As Easter approaches both grower and dealer are deeply concerned in the prospective amount and variety of plants available for that most important occasion. From all directions we hear the report of a decided shortage of Easter lilies. Only a small number of Harrisii were planted last summer and the diseased condition of the bulbs is now painfully apparent, so that it is safe to say that very few will be planted here next season, as all growers are more than ever discouraged and disappointed with their repeated failures with them. Longiflorums show a vigorous, healthy, but short growth with but few buds and several plants put into bulb pans or azalea pots will be necessary to make effective plants. None of the bulbous stock will be too plentiful. The local growers remembered the poor results from the over-supply and unavoidable low prices of last spring and this coupled with the advanced prices of the bulbs, deterred many from planting even the usual amount. Of azaleas, genistas, spiræas, etc., a fairly good supply is in sight and the supply of cut flowers of most kinds will be sufficient for the local demand, except, perhaps, for Beauties, but hybrids will be largely substituted and, when fine, are usually preferred to Beauties. Lent has so far had no appreciable effect upon the retail trade. While there have been no social functions of importance, there has been an extraordinary amount of funeral work, which has easily used up all the flowers the local growers could supply.

Fifteen members of the Florists' Club accepted Mr. Taplin's invitation to visit his place on March 28. His stock of azaleas is surely grand, many of the specimens being in full bloom. They were all grown by himself and trained in pyramidal, standard and bush form. He is justly proud of the results of the time he spent upon them for many years. Mr. Taplin is noted as a successful orchid grower and a splendid lot of Cœlogyne cristata in full bloom was one of the sights he treated us to. His patent boiler was closely inspected and seemed to be doing wonderful work with clay mixed with coal screenings for fuel. Miss Taplin, ever pleasant, served a fine lunch to her visitors, who keenly relished it and promised themselves an early return.

Beard Bros. have purchased the seven greenhouses of C. H. Michell, on Grosse Isle. They are moving them to their establishment on Fort street and will use them for carnations and general stock.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—PREPARATIONS FOR EASTER.—THE CLUB ELECTION—SPASMODIC INTEREST.

Trade has been about the same as last week, funeral work being all that amounts to anything. Roses are plentiful but carnations are not in over-supply. Violets are cheap and bulbous stock is to be had in large quantities. Some good mignonette is coming in now.

Palmer's window is fine now and Rebstock has a fine genista on exhibition. Everyone is busy cleaning up and making ready for Easter.

The Buffalo Florists' Club will elect officers at its next meeting. It seems that the only interest shown in the club is at election and the banquet, excepting by the few. It should not be so, but it is.

CERTIFICATES AWARDED AT THE RECENT CARNATION SHOW.—TRADE EXCELLENT.—BUILDERS GO TO NEW YORK.

The Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association has awarded certificates of merit for the following carnations: To Miller & Son, Bracondale, for Lady Van Horne and Lady Minto; to F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., for Morning Glory; to J. N. May, Summit, N. J., for Olympia; to A. M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa., for Ethel Crocker; to Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., for Mrs. Lawson; to R. Witterstaetter, Sedamsville, O., for Estelle and Enquirer; to L. E. Marquisee, Syracuse, N. Y., for The Marquis; to H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., for Genevieve Lord; to E. G. Hill & Co., for J. Whitcomb Riley.

The society has also given cultural certificates for extra fine flowers shown at the exhibition of March 8 to F. Dorner & Sons for White Cloud, G. H. Crane and Mrs. Bradt; to The Cottage Gardens, Queens, L. I., for Gen Maceo and Gen. Gomez; to J. H. Dunlop, Toronto, for Mrs. G. M. Bradt, Gen. Gomez, Mrs. Joost and Glacier.

Lent, which is now nearly over, has made no material difference in trade, which has been excellent, with a plentiful supply of seasonable blooms. The market has been somewhat overstocked with violets.

Messrs. Dale, of Brampton, and Dunlop, of Toronto, have ordered large quantites, of glass, a symptom of extensive building operations to commence shortly. Messrs. Dale, Dunlop and Chas. Tidy have gone to New York to be present at the rose show. S. P.

TRADE CONTINUES BRISK.—EASTER PERPLEXITIES AFFORD LITTLE CONCERN.—A SCHOOL GARDEN.—NOTES.

The outlook for Easter is perplexing, but while business remains good we can afford to allow things to take their course. Good stock does not appear to be accumulating, except violets. Roses are now plentiful enough to meet demand, but carnations are very scarce. The dull season commonly looked for during Lent has not made its appearance. Some special offers of Easter stock at prices lower for today are not tempting Milwaukee florists into placing contracts, although it is felt that such stock as will be needed will be scarce and quite as expensive as at any previous Easter. Thompson & Son are bringing in some pretty flowering plants. A. Billings is the only one of the local growers who has longiflorums in any quanity. H. Stappe's Bridesmaids are extra fine.

A number of ladies who have organized a social settlement in this city have determined to conduct a school garden in connection with it. It seems strange that florists will speak so much about cultivating the taste for flowers without lending their influence to cultivate an ability to gratify that taste. Nevertheless the only organized effort on the part of our florists is in the line of bowling.

Quite a number of growers here have taken to speculation; that is they have put quite a number of dollars on the new things offered this year.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Beatty, of Oil City, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Vaughan, of Chicago, were visitors this week. C. B. W.

A SATISFACTORY WINTER.—SUPPLY HAS AT NO TIME EXCEEDED DEMAND.—PROSPECTS FOR EASTER.

The writer cannot recall a season when business has maintained so steady and satisfactory a relation to the supply of stock. In fact, for a considerable part of the winter good stock has been quite scarce, and even now, with Lent far through, flowers are not wasting to any considerable extent. Quite a large proportion of this condition may fairly be credited to general prosperity, no doubt, but it seems fair to assume that the well cleaned up condition of affairs at this time, is due to a considerable extent to the wisdom, arising from dear bought experience, relative to moderation in the purchase of Dutch bulbs for forcing. A large and steady demand for all grades of funeral work just now helps to keep down the Lenten surplus.

For Easter everybody expects to have a good trade, this judgment being based on the business of the season so far. To meet the demand there will probably be the usual lines of stock offered. It would not, however, be surprising were lilies to be decidedly scarce. A large part of the Harrisii stock has been used up, or is showing up worthless from disease. There will, of course, be a good many longiflorums on the market, but it is doubtful if they will be sufficient to make up the difference.

Prices, both wholesale and retail, have not varied materially for some time, and, failing unusually bright, warm weather and a quite unexpected falling off in business, will probably hold their own now until Easter. A.

THE WEEK STARTED WELL.—MUCH GOOD FUNERAL WORK.—A FINE GENISTA.—A FRAGRANT CARNATION.—NOTES.

The latter part of last week trade was pretty quiet, though Saturday showed a slight improvement. This week started with a very lively demand and stock was well cleaned up at the commission houses. The floral decorations at the obsequies of the late Rabbi Isaac M. Wise, this week, were exceedingly beautiful. One large crescent, arranged loosely and gracefully with cattleyas, the ground work being galax leaves tied with purple ribbon, was made by Julius Peterson. J. Baer, Critchell and Sunderbruch's Sons, all had a goodly share of work.

Peterson has on view in his window a magnificent specimen genista. The plant is about five feet through and as it is tipped towards the front every flower is in sight, making a splendid display.

A visit to Fred Walz recently found him busy among his carnations. He has several seedlings of merit, and among them is a bright scarlet, which in fragrance excells any of the recent introductions.

Julius Baer has been receiving congratulations upon the arrival of J. Baer, Jr.

Harrisii lilies are coming in slowly and will not be plentiful for Easter.

H. SCHWARZ.

Peoria, Ill.

There has been a lack of social events to make business for some weeks past but much funeral work has been required. The outlook for Easter is good and there will be a considerable variety of stock with which to meet the call.

As soon as spring opens J. C. Murray will erect three new houses, two for roses, each 25x100, and a plant house 15x65. He has recently received a consignment of grafted Bride and Bridesmaid plants from the east. He will also grow Liberty. Mr. Murray has had a good trade all winter, in no small part due to excellent local advertising.

Cole Bros. will have a fine lot of longiflorums and spiræas for Easter.

STATE OF TRADE AND THE MARKET.—CHANCES FOR EASTER.—FEWER BULBS FORCED.—A SMOKER AND VARIOUS NOTES.

There is no apparent change in trade. Stock is all that can be desired as regards quantity and quality. Roses, perhaps, are a little scarce at times but better weather can soon be expected, which will produce more satisfactory results. Carnations still hold up in price; good ones easily bring from 75 cents per dozen up, at retail, and their keeping quality is much improved. It is a little early yet to judge what the Easter season will bring forth but many of the dealers are looking for an unusually good trade. Some of the growers seem to think bulbous stock will not be so abundant as it has been for several seasons past. This is quite probable, as many of the smaller growers who make a practice of forcing large quantities of this stock for the Easter trade, are not growing nearly so much as ordinarily.

The "smoker" held by the Florists' Club on March 22 at the rooms of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., was in every respect a success. Many were in attendance and card playing, games, refreshments and a general good time prevailed.

At the greenhouses of Randolph & McClements can be seen as fine a lot of azaleas, numbering 200, as has ever been shown here. G. O.

I had the pleasure of seeing two of J. W. Foote's seedling carnations the other day, a large white and a pink sort. They are excellent.

I am told that Peter Ball will move his establishment to Lexington the coming summer. This is due, in a measure, to buildings being erected close to his range and partly shading him.

E. D. Kaulback & Son are having a fine trade at their downtown store and have things in good shape at the houses. They will add more glass this year.

John Walsh has a fine store in town, with houses at Melrose Highlands. He is well known as the manager of the Boston flower market, and has a smile and kind word for everybody. TAP.

J. W. Vestal & Son are doing a big business shipping small greenhouse plants. They mailed a large edition of their catalogue through the southern states and are now reaping the benefits of printers' ink.

The weather for the last ten days has been good for business and every florist is now busy filling orders for plants for bedding out.

Frank Vestal, at Baring Cross, has filled many orders for ornamental nursery stock. His shipping season has closed and he is now beginning to line small stock out in the nursery.

INQUIRIES are give no attention when sent without the correct name and address of the writer.

DESPITE the present diseased and weakened condition of Bermuda lily bulbs, the growers of that island appear determined to invite disaster by robbing the plants of their flowers and foliage to flood our Easter markets with them through brokers.

CYPRESS is twelve per cent above last year's price, and extra lengths show a still greater rise.

DELIVERIES of greenhouse glass are now going forward but there is no change in market conditions.

THERE is little prospect of a fall in iron, the sales to date being equal to the capacity of the furnaces up to July 1.

NEWS of an advance in coal, due to the rearrangement of the scale under which the operators are working, now has few terrors for the growers.

T. D. HATFIELD, our well known correspondent, has been appointed chief of the famous gardens and greenhouses of H. H. Hunnewell, at Wellesley, Mass., succeeding F. L. Harris, who will seek well earned retirement May 1. Mr. Hatfield will retain charge of the Walter Hunnewell establishment adjoining.

West Derby, Vt.—H. J. Ball, carnation house.

Heating Arrangements.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—How many feet of 1-inch pipe would be required to heat with hot water two houses, one 10x80, the other 18x80 feet, and how should it be arranged? The houses adjoin and have a double wall filled with sawdust on the outside, with a rough board partition between. The larger house is a three-quarter span, with a six-foot wall at the back and a three-foot wall in front. Southern Indiana is the location.

W. H.

It is not advisable to use 1-inch pipe for hot water in houses eighty feet long, and it should never be used except with overhead flow pipes of ample size, and when the lower ends of the coils are well above the top of the heater. For a house eighteen feet wide it will be best to use three 2½-inch overhead flows, while eighteen 1-inch returns will be required to make up the needed amount of radiation, when 60° are desired. In a house ten feet wide, two 2½ inch flow pipes and ten 1-inch returns will be needed for the above temperature. If only 50° are required, three flows and eleven returns will answer for the wide house, and for the ten-foot house good results can be obtained with two 2-inch flows and eight 1-inch returns. By carrying the water under pressure a reduction can be made in the size of the flow pipes and in the number of the returns, but it will be at the expense of fuel.

Without knowing something about the interior arrangement of the houses it is not possible to give very definite advice about the location of the pipes. In the narrow house it may be best to carry the flow pipes on the plates and the returns under the benches, while in the 18-foot house the flows may be carried on the purlin posts and front plate, and the returns under the benches, or on the walls.

L. R. T.

Greenhouses for Vegetables.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—We propose to build two houses for forcing vegetables, such as lettuce and radishes. The houses will be 20x50 feet, attached, with boiler room at the north end. We shall use cypress, cedar posts, 16x16 single strength butted glass, walls double boarded four feet high, but with glass at the south end. Gutters will carry the water into the cistern inside the houses. The ground is low but can be drained. We have a No. 17 Hitchings boiler for hot water and about 1000 feet of 1¼-inch wrought iron pipe which we would like to use. As we wish to use some of the space under benches for rhubarb we should have the pipes on the walls. How should we pipe the houses? The temperature seldom goes below 15° below zero. How many ventilators should there be? How should we arrange the benches? Will it do to plant lettuce on solid beds and at what temperature should it be grown.

YOUNG FLORIST.

A 20x50 foot lettuce house with 1¼-inch coils on the side walls can be piped with two 2½-inch flows near the glass on the purlin posts. One thousand feet of 1¼-inch pipe will provide four coils of five pipes each, but the best results, especially with Grand Rapids lettuce, will require a little more radiation and it will be well to add one 2-inch pipe in each house. The coils will then consist of five 1¼-inch and one 2-inch pipe on one wall, and five 1¼-inch on the other wall in each house. It will be well to have a continuous row of ventilators two feet wide along the ridge of each house. It would also be well to have glass sash in the side walls, which could be used as ventilators. Unless there is some special reason for the use of a house of the size mentioned, better results can be secured from the same expenditure if one house twenty-six to thirty feet wide is constructed.

If rhubarb is to be grown it will be necessary to have raised benches, and for a house twenty feet wide inside, a good arrangement will be two benches each seven feet and four inches wide, with a center walk of two feet and walks along the side walls twenty inches wide. When solid benches are thoroughly drained, good results can be secured, and they are quite generally used in large houses. When Grand Rapids lettuce is grown the temperature may be carried as high as 50° at night, but it will be safer to keep it at 45° when the houses are used for head lettuce.

OBITUARY.

EDWARD JOSEPH LOWE.

It is announced that the death of Edward Joseph Lowe, well known as an authority on ferns and their culture, occurred at his home in England, March 10.

JOHN WEISS.

John Weiss, one of the oldest residents of Middle Village, N. Y., died at the home of his son, Clemens Weiss, March 20, after a short illness, aged 88 years. The deceased was born in Germany and came to this country when a boy, taking up his residence at Middle Village, where he lived for the past sixty-five years. Until a few years ago he followed the occupation of florist, and was remarkable for his health and vigor.

FERDINAND FLISTER.

Ferdinand Flister died at his home at Oshkosh, Wis., March 27, after an illness of four weeks with Bright's disease. For the past thirty years he resided in Oshkosh, conducting a vegetable farm and then embarking in the floral business, which he and his wife have continued for the past twelve years. Mr. Flister was seventy years of age and was born in Germany, Nov. 3, 1830. He had several greenhouses known as The South Side Flower Exchange. He is survived by a widow and one daughter, Mrs. A. Fugelberg.

JOSEPH A. LEWIS.

Joseph A. Lewis died at Willimantic, Conn., March 19, aged 71 years. He had been identified with the nursery business and gardening for more than half a century. It was in 1858 that he located at Willimantic. At first he was largely engaged in growing trees, both for fruit and shade. He bought a tract of land, where in 1862 he erected the dwelling in which he died. In later years he raised garden vegetables. For the past ten years he had used on an average 20,000 square feet of hotbeds with nearly 100 acres under cultivation annually. In 1892 he built a large canning factory, which burned two years later inflicting a loss which discouraged him. He has for many years been an uncompromising leader of the prohibition party.

Denver, Colo.

The unusually hot weather has had a bad effect on cuts, roses, especially, coming small and soft. Violets are about done; the few that come in are poor. Unless the weather turns cooler good flowers will be scarce for Easter. Several growers complain of being unable to hold back their lilies.

Mr. Elberfield, of the Alpha Floral Co., has opened a branch at Colorado Springs, Colo. DENVER.

The Seed Trade.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres ; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

C. P. BRASLAN is on his way to California again.

ONION sets are scarce and higher, stocks light, reds and tops out of the market.

ANOTHER snowstorm in the middle west has again shortened up the busy season for seedsmen in that section.

THE Gardeners' Magazine remarks that the seed trade in the United Kingdom this year is a record one, in spite of wars and rumors of wars.

THE warehouse and office of Barteldes & Co., Lawrence, Kans., was destroyed by fire March 22. The loss was heavy, but is nearly covered by insurance.

FLORAL PARK, N. Y.—John Lewis Childs states that the mail seed trade with him has been considerably better than last year. The trade this month has not been up to expectations.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Your correspondent paid a visit to the seedsmen of this city and found nothing new except that they are very busy and that they all report a much heavier business this year than last.

COLUMBUS, O.—A. W. Livingston's Sons write: "Trade is very satisfactory; mail trade about thirty per cent above that of last year to this date. Counter trade is now beginning and promises to be heavy."

ST. PAUL, MINN.—L. L. May & Co. report that mail trade has been very satisfactory, especially in March. Retail and market garden trade has hardly opened up yet, owing to the lateness of the season.

CHICAGO, ILL.—From J. C. Vaughan we learn that mail business and counter trade have not been quite up to last year on account of continuous cold weether. The private and market gardeners' trade has been equal to the usual volume.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The firm of Henry A. Dreer informs us that business to March 1 shows an increase over former years and that March has held its own, adding, "And we look for the rush which must come with the advent of milder weather now due."

Baltimore.

A BUSINESS CHANGE WHICH MEANS A NEW GROWER.—HOUSES CRUSHED BY THE SNOW.—STATE OF THE WEATHER AND CROPS.

The partnership between Madsen & Anderson, rose growers near Govanstown, terminates by limitation on April 1. Anders Anderson will build for himself and start separately, while Wm. Madsen will continue the business with Hans Anderson as partner. The Andersons, though both Danes, are not related in any way. The products of this establishment, during the five years which the partnership has continued, have been of remarkably uniform high quality, particularly their American Beauties, and it is not venturing too much to predict for both firms a successful future.

Julius Tischinger, who has been helpless from a stroke of paralysis for several weeks, met with a serious loss last week, the heavy fall of snow crushing in two of his greenhouses.

The weather has been such that all four seasons have occurred in one week, and the effect in checking production has been marked. Doubts are beginning to be heard about the Harrisii lilies coming in plentifully, late as Easter is, and there has been no indication of over production of any crop.

MACK.

Washington.

STATE OF TRADE.—ANOTHER WINTER SCENE.—STOCK FOR EASTER.—LOOSE IS BUILDING FOR SUMMER.

Trade is about the same as last week; stock not quite so plentiful. If the weather is favorable there will be plenty of roses, carnations, lilies, violets and bulbous stock for Easter. March 26 Washington was visited by another snow storm. It was a novel sight at this time of the year. The city was decked with about three inches of snow.

J. Louis Loose is completing a large house, glazed with ribbed glass, for summer growing of roses and carnations His general stock comprises American Beauty, Kaiserin, Bridesmaid and Mme. de Watteville roses, carnations in great variety, Hydrangea Hortensia, azaleas and rhododendrons, all in fine condition. He also has some pot roses, including some extra fine Crimson and Yellow Ramblers.

The majority of florists at the markets are complaining of the trade being dull.

P. G.

TROY, N. Y.—Fire originating in another portion of the business block in which Mrs. S. Walch's retail store is located caused her considerable loss on the night of March 4.

WEST HAVEN, CONN.—Thos. Pattison died on the afternoon of March 20. He had been ill some time with the grip, which developed into pneumonia.

HARDY stocks will not alone solve the root killing problem.

NURSERYMEN report no decrease in the call for ornamental stock.

P. S. PETERSON & SON, Chicago, have this winter been doing much work in the way of transplanting large trees.

THIS season has seen a pronounced improvement in the arrangement, illustration and typography of many nursery catalogues.

GREENING BROTHERS, Greening, Mich., have had good trade, especially on Richmond cherry trees, for which they have found a big demand in Iowa.

PROF. JOHN CRAIG thinks that Pyrus baccata, while of value as a budding stock, will never be of importance commercially in the orcharding districts of the Mississippi valley.

WORK is already well under way upon the programme for the meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen at Chicago, June 13 and 14, which will be the twenty-fifth anniversary of the society's organization.

NEWARK, N. Y.—The Jackson & Perkins Company has still further increased the extent of its nurseries by the purchase of another farm, adjoining one which was acquired and planted only a year ago. The new place is 120 acres in extent, making a total of some 350 acres, of which about fifty acres is devoted to field-grown roses, the firm's leading specialty.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—F. C. Haupt and Prince Wells have paid $38,000 for a very desirable piece of property on Fourth avenue, where they will erect a fourstory building. The lower floor will have two large stores, one for each of the proprietors.

Varnish Tree (Koelreuteria paniculata.)

THIS tree has been known in European gardens for nearly a century, but it is very rare in this country. We cannot praise it more highly than to quote from Meehan's Monthly the following:

"This beautiful Japanese tree is not nearly so much appreciated in ornamental gardening as it deserves to be. Nurserymen generally say that the orders for it are comparatively limited. It is, we think, one of the most beautiful of our small trees, having striking characteristics at all seasons. When in the springtime of its growth, few fern fronds are prettier then the leaves of this tree. At midsummer its brilliant golden flowers make it a complete mass of beauty, while in fall its rich crimson foliage vies with many of our American trees that have been celebrated in this respect. Even in winter the characteristic growth of the branches is particularly striking."

Chicago at Joliet.

The Chicago bowlers never had a better time than was given them on Saturday evening, March 24, when they went to Joliet. The delegation numbered eight, the bowling team being accompanied by C. W. Scott, of Vaughan's, and Johan Hillebrand, a Holland bulb man. They went out on the 6:20 train and partook of a bountiful repast enroute. Arrived at Joliet, Mr. Hartshorne assumed charge of the party, and he and his fellow townsmen did everything possible to make the evening pleasant. After the contest on the alleys, which resulted in a victory for the visitors, the party of twenty or more repaired to the studio of Joliet's most proficient pianist, where refreshments were served, followed by music and story telling. The visitors enjoyed every moment of the evening and hope to have the pleasure of reciprocating in the near future. Following is the score compiled on the alleys:

At Philadelphia.

There is still great interest taken in bowling by the local brethren, who, with one or two exceptions, regard it their most enjoyable pastime. The exceptions noted put the gun first. We are feeling a little puffed up just at present and our hats don't fit any too well, for the reason that our first six won the virtual championship over all clubs in this city by defeating the strong Century team in a three game match last Friday. The scores were not very large but the match, being the deciding one, was of so much importance it was not to be expected that any unusual scores would be made. Tournament matches are not practice games by any means, the pressure forcing many an otherwise safe bowler up in the air. The score follows:

At New York.

Monday evening, March 26, found a crowd of unusual proportions and corresponding enthusiasm at the bowling alleys. All were glad to welcome President O'Mara again and pleased to note that his recent illness had not affected in the least his ability to make strikes and spares. Captain Traendly's voice is still in prime condition. The new balls won from Flatbush and Hoboken were put to work and one of them especially found its way very quickly to Alex. Burns' heart. He hopes to teach it the genuine cross-alley roll in time. Robert Kift dropped in with greetings from Philadelphia during the evening.

The Most Important Thing

To consider in buying Cut Easter Lilies is quality, not the price. Poor Easter Lilies are dear at any price. As in former years we will again have A No 1 Easter Lilies (Longiflorum but no Harrisii). It is still too early to set a price on Lilies, but you may be sure that we will bill them at the right price as we do with everything.

Of course you understand that we have everything in the flower line, such as Roses, American Beauties, Carnations, Valley, Violets (our violets are the finest grown) Smilax, Daffodils, Tulips, Romans, Paper Whites, Asparagus, etc, etc.

It has all the Habits, Grace and Fragrance of

The American Beauty,

(of which it is a Sport)

But has the Fine

PINK COLOR

of Mad. Testout.

Who is the "Queen of Edgely?"

IT IS THE FAMOUS NEW ROSE, THE Pink American Beauty,

Which has been so favorably received at the Exhibition of the AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY, EDEN MUSEE, N. Y., March 27, 28, 29, 1900, where it won the only distinction to which, as a newcomer, it was eligible, viz., . . .

A CERTIFICATE OF MERIT.

This is what the New York press has to say about it:

Herald: "There was the new American Beauty, a rose as large and as well formed as its darker sister, and of a delicate pink color. Many of the patronesses stopped before the great clusters of this new flower and expressed the greatest admiration for its beauty and its gracefulness. There are many who regard it as more beautiful than the well known rose from which it has been developed."

Times: "The novelty of the exhibition was the long-looked-for pink American Beauty, of which so much has been said, and which has never been shown before. Its history is an interesting one, and shows how fortunes come accidentally to the rose grower as they do to some other toilers. Four years ago, in a house devoted to the propagation of American Beauties, at Edgely, Pa., by the Floral Exchange Company of Philadelphia, a freak made its appearance. To rose growers it was called a 'sport,' and its growth was carefully watched. Soon a small pink bud made its appearance, the only blonde in that houseful of lovely brunettes. Modestly it unfolded, and then its growth for four years under special conditions was as carefully looked after as the most delicate child. It grew and thrived, and last night the queenly blonde received homage from her courtiers. The American Rose Society awarded it a certificate, which means that she is lovely as well as a debutante. She will not stoop to trade until next spring, when in the busy marts she will vie for favor with her brunette sister. All this is the result of an accident that even the growers do not attempt to explain. It was their rare luck, they say, that is all."

World: "The Queen of Edgely, a cousin to the American Beauty, has created a furore. Mrs. Morris K. Jesup, Mrs. John Trevor, Mrs. A. H. Joline, have all sworn allegiance to the reigning sovereign, which bids fair to hold unquestioned sway. The rose is of a pale pink hue, infinitely soft in effect in decoration. It is a baby queen, a novelty, without a rival, and therefore not eligible for a prize."

Sun: "A vase of huge pink Queen of Edgely roses, the biggest rose shown and a variety of the American Beauty."

This Rose we can strongly recommend, and we will be ready to distribute it, SPRING 1901.

SWEET PEA BURPEE'S "Earliest of All."

Notwithstanding their dwarf habit and neat, slender foliage, the plants are of vigorous growth and come into bloom always ten days to two weeks in advance of the Extra Early Blanche Ferry, which has been heretofore a week ahead of all other varieties. Growing only two feet in height, the plants do not require the support of brush or trellis. As an illustration of its extremely early-flowering habit, we would state that now (Oct. 15th) we have plants in fine bloom from seed gathered from our spring planting and sown during the latter part of August. A constant succession of bloom may be had from June until November by making sowings about one month apart. Its extremely early flowering habit makes it most satisfactory for the Southern States, as it may be easily had in full bloom before the hot summer weather. The flowers are as large as those of the regular strains of Blanche Ferry, and have long, stout stems, making them entirely satisfactory for cutting; they are borne in close clusters of three, all facing one way. The standards are a bright, rich pink, while the wings are nearly pure white.

BURPEE'S "EARLIEST OF ALL" is not only the earliest to bloom in open ground, but is also the most desirable for forcing under glass for winter cut flowers. The dwarf habit of this variety renders it much more easily grown on the benches, admits of closer planting, and from seed sown during the latter part of August blooms may be cut during the holidays,—while with the taller varieties no blooms could be had before February or March. Per oz., 10 cts.; ¼ lb., 30 cts.; per lb., $1.00.

Burpee's "Blue List."

Our Wholesale Price List of Seeds in Larger Quantities is mailed free on application to GARDENERS and FLORISTS.

IF YOU PLANT FOR PROFIT you should write at once for this Wholesale List. BUT we cannot send it to private planters, even if requested to do so. ☞ The prices quoted in THE FARM ANNUAL are as low as we can afford on Retail Orders. Market Gardeners, Canning Establishments and Florists requiring large quantities of seeds are entitled to lower prices wherever possible.

A NEW FEATURE In Burpee's "BLUE LIST" that will be of special interest to growers who Plant for Profit, is the "plain talks" we give, at the head of every department, as to just the best varieties for different purposes.

BEGONIA Gloire de Lorraine

WE ARE NOW BOOKING ORDERS FOR MAY FIRST DELIVERY FOR FINE STRONG PLANTS FROM TWO-INCH POTS, WHICH CAN BE GROWN INTO HANDSOME SPECIMENS (AS SHOWN IN CUT), IN SIX-INCH POTS, IN FULL BLOOM FOR CHRISTMAS SALES.

PRICE, $2.50 PER DOZEN $17.50 PER HUNDRED

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE

Specimen Christmas Plant from which Our Stock is Propagated.

This is one of the most striking plants that has been introduced for many years. The habit of the plant is compact and dwarf, making handsome specimens 14 inches in height and breadth. Its chief attraction is its extreme floriferousness, the entire upper part of the plant being literally covered with its brilliant clear pink flowers to such an extent that the foliage is usually hidden. It has been grown extensively around Boston, New York and Philadelphia, and brought in in splendid shape for Christmas sales, and the entire stock grown was sold at prices ranging from $2.50 to $4.00 each, wholesale, the same plants retailing at from $5.00 to $10.00 each. It promises to be more extensively grown than ever for that purpose and is undoubtedly one of the most useful Christmas plants now in existence.

Owing to the strong demand, all our April stock is now sold. Orders must be sent in early in order to secure stock for May delivery. We have one of the finest and largest stocks of this rare Begonia and will endeavor to fill all orders in rotation as received.

"WHITE STAR" BRAND

Giant Flowered

Paper White Grandiflora.

(SUPPLY LIMITED.)

We claim this to be the finest strain of "Grandiflora" type of Narcissus offered to the trade, and florists to whom we have supplied same in past seasons will have no other. They are strong growing, free blooming, and show little of the tendency to come "blind" as does the "grandiflora" usually supplied. We are able to secure each year only a small supply of them and urge early orders.

YES, They're going fast—but then, we can furnish countless thousands. Get in your orders and we'll be there. They certainly are the "FINEST IN THE LAND." VERBENAS we're talking about. But don't forget there's lots of other stuff. We tell you about it below:

Verbenas. I guess you know our prices, but in case you have forgotten—cuttings, countless thousands—75c per 100. $5.00 per 1,000.
Pot Plants. (And they're beauts)—$2.50 per 100. $20.00 per 1,000.

Coleus. They're just as good as the Verbenas, and the very finest of sorts. We're selling them cheaper than we can afford to grow them, but you can have them any way.
Rooted cuttings—$1.00 per 100. $7.50 per 1,000.
Pot Plants—$3.00 per 100. 200 for $5.00. $20.00 per 1,000.

Latanias. Look at this! We've about 10,000 we want to run off, and at these prices they are bound to go quick. The stock in 3-inch, good value at $10.00, we offer at $8.00 per 100, in 500 lots, $7.50 per 100. The 4-inch, good as they are—1 plant or 1,000—15c each. The 5-inch, good stock, big value at $5.00 per dozen; you can have them at $4.00 per dozen. The 6-inch, these are getting low, what's left you can have, $8.00 per dozen.

Oleanders. There's nothing surer sale than these two beautiful sorts in bloom. Don't wait 'till you have to have them, take them now while you can get them. They are not coming round again. Double White, Prof. Durand and Madonna Grandiflora. Double Pink, The fine old Kenwood—$6.00 per 100. $55.00 per 1,000. Order by color!!

. . ROSES . .

We have a good many thousand Roses, but on account of short stock in some varieties, it's difficult to list them. We have, besides the forcing sorts, such kinds as Malmaison, Mrs. Robt. Garrett, The Queen, Agrippina, Hermosa, Soupert, and a nice list right through. Now, if you want to pick out your own sorts, we'll have to charge you $4.00 per 100; but if you'll let us send you a nice assortment, our choice of varieties, you can have them for $2.00 per 100.

We've some nice Brides and Bridesmaid, 3-inch—can't be beat—you can have them for $5.00. We've also some nice H. P.'s, good stock, very best of sorts, such as Jacq., Dinsmore, Anne de Diesbach, etc. These we'll make you—your selection—$5.00 per 100; our own selection, $4.00 per 100. They are all right.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Wouldn't this price kill you! Can't possibly grow them for it

$2.00 per Hundred.

Here they are:

Eugene Dailledouze, Glory of Pacific, Golden Wedding, Ivory, Jennie Falconer, Mayflower, Mrs. Henry Robinson, Mrs. Murdock, Major Bonnaffon, Modesto, Marion Henderson, Niveus, Pink Ivory, Queen, Wm. Simpson, V. H. Hallock, W. H. Lincoln and Yellow Queen.

We've other sorts, but can't quite sell them at these prices. Write us!!

YOUNG ROSE STOCK FOR BENCHING MAY, JUNE AND JULY.
CHRYSANTHEMUM PLANTS " JUNE, JULY AND AUGUST.

We are perhaps the largest growers of Chrysanthemums in the state of Illinois, devoting 11 large houses to Cut Blooms and Potted Plants in their season.

We grow only such varieties in quantity as we consider best and safe for pot culture and cut blooms for wholesale and retail trade.

Such varieties as are unfit for commercial uses are discarded, which insures for those who leave selection to us the BEST TRIED market sorts, and these are sure to give satisfaction. One large cool house is entirely devoted to carefully selected Stock Plants, which are sure to give good strong stuff to propagate from and insure for you good blooms.

Our aim will always be to send out such stock as will secure the old and bring in new trade. All stock sent true to name. No substitutes will be made for varieties not in stock unless permission to do so is agreed on.

When late in ordering, to prevent delay it is best to mention second choice for any that may be out of stock. If left to us there will be no disappointment. All orders will be carefully packed and forwarded in rotation. If not posted yourself leave selection for Pot Plants and Cut Blooms to us. We can please you by giving you the benefit of our experience in this line. We will have about 150,000 plants to offer out of 2½-inch pots. When you are ready to buy think of us and give us a trial. Send remittance to insure prompt delivery. We will take orders now for delivery in May, June and July. Our list includes the following varieties:

GENEVIEVE LORD

The ideal commercial pink carnation. Strictly speaking, a commercial variety, yet size and exhibition qualities are not lacking. The color is that happy shade called by the ladies "just right." Its stem is unequaled by any carnation. It is a prodigious grower and the most remarkable producer of high grade blooms we have ever grown. An easy, rapid grower; makes large plants from late cuttings. We can promise prompt delivery after April 10th. Stock for delivery prior to that date all sold. Cuttings positively free from rust and in other respects very hard to duplicate.

PRICE: Dozen, $2.00 One Hundred, $10.00 One Thousand, $75.00

Our Catalogue is now ready, giving complete description of above, also all of the other big new ones at introducers' prices. Also complete list of standard varieties, all the best new and standard chrysanthemums. Catalogue sent for the asking.

What Growers think of the Cuttings.

Genevieve Lord Cuttings arrived in good order.
H. DALE, Brampton, Ont.

Your Genevieve Lord Cuttings are the finest I have ever received of a new variety. If all others were as good I would have no kick coming. GEO. R. GEIGER, Nazareth, Pa.

The best carnation cuttings (Genevieve Lord) I ever received.
A. HERRINGTON, Madison, N. J.

Genevieve Lord Cuttings arrived safely, none the worse for their long journey. J. GAMMAGE & SON, London, Ont, Carnation cuttings received. They are extra fine, especially the Genevieve Lord. If I can only grow them as well as they look, I will be satisfied. Next time I want good stock I will know where to send. W. H. VANCE, Wilmington, Del.

Justice as well as gratitude demands my informing you that the carnation cuttings arrived 16th. inst, proving most satisfactory in every respect. I have yet to see as fine, healthy a lot of plants anywhere as these, and you have insured my future orders so long as you continue to send out this high grade of plants. These cuttings are so far superior to those received from other growers that comparison can hardly be made; they are in a different class altogether. JAMES L. LOMERSON, Phillipsburg, N. J.

What Experts think of the Blooms.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 12, 1900.
MESSRS. H. WEBER & SONS, OAKLAND, MD.:
Dear Sirs—We have handled your new Carnation, Genevieve Lord, for the past year, and beg to state that it is one of the finest Carnations we have ever handled. It has become very popular here in Washington, its beautiful color making it a ready seller. Together with color, its most distinct points are its extra long stems and perfect erect habit. It has a marked individuality, enabling customers to recognize it at a glance. It is one of the few new Carnations that have so many good points, and we feel satisfied that it has a great future before it. It is some little trouble to educate the people up to paying $3 and $4 per dozen for Carnations, but if any Carnation will bring the price, it is Genevieve Lord.
Yours truly, (Signed) J. H. SMALL & SONS.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, January 16, 1900.
MESSRS. H. WEBER & SONS, OAKLAND, MD.:
Gentlemen—I want to congratulate you on being the introducer of Genevieve Lord, your new pink Carnation. Although I have not seen it growing, I have seen it exhibited at nearly all seasons of the year, and taking all its good qualities into consideration, I believe it to be the best pink of its class in the market today. It is strictly a commercial flower, and will produce the Dollars and Cents. I predict for you a phenomenal sale of this carnation.
Yours very truly, (Signed) E. G. GILLETT.

ST. LOUIS, MO., January 24, 1900.
H. WEBER & SONS, OAKLAND, MD.:
Dear Sirs—In regard to what I think of Genevieve Lord, and what I heard spoken about it at the meeting is this: Color just right and what is wanted, and will sell. Shape and size as good if not better than any Carnation ever sent out, very sweet; stems the best ever seen on any Carnation sent out. In keeping and shipping qualities it beats any Carnation that I have ever seen; as I mentioned last time in my letter to you they looked as fresh as if they had just been cut. Yours very truly,
(Signed) E. SCHRAY,
Secy. St. Louis Florists' Club.

H. DANN & SON, Westfield, N. Y.

Twin City Notes.

Business has been very good this winter and Lent has not made much difference in the sale of flowers. Stock of all kinds is plentiful, except roses, which are scarce yet. Easter stock is looking good. Lilies are a little late at some places but as the weather is fair now we expect, by extra forcing, to get them ready in time. It looks as if the call for Easter flowers will be larger than ever.

Christ. Hansen, at St. Paul, has had the misfortune to lose nearly half of his stock. There was a leak in the gas main in the street in front of his greenhouses and the gas worked its way into the range, destroying completely three houses of roses, one house of carnations, one of violets and a part of a house of palms. He expects to hold the gas company for the damage. L.

WALDEN, N. Y.—The co-partnership between E. & S. Koffman has been dissolved but the greenhouses will still be conducted by Mr. Bloomingdale.

AUBURN, N. Y.—Carl Armbuster has been awarded $1500 from the Auburn Gas Co., for damages sustained through a leak in the gas pipe which injuriously affected his stock during several successive years.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—Thomas H. Stevenson, at Mill Valley, grows two new violets of the Princess of Wales type. One is the variety Duchess of Marlborough and the other Admiral Avellan. The former is large and deep blue, the latter is small and magenta.

DES MOINES, IA.—The down-town store and conservatory of I. W. Lozier was destroyed by fire on March 27. The loss was $2,000, with insurance of $500. Mr. Lozier is entitled to the sympathy of the trade as he has been very ill all winter and was just able to be up and working when this blow fell.

AMHERST, MASS.— M. B. Kingman furnished the plant decorations for the recent Amherst College Junior Promenade, the social feature of the year. It is followed by the annual receptions of the Greek letter fraternities, which are largely attended by the young ladies from Smith College. These fraternities are very strong here, there being no less than twelve of them that own and occupy their own houses and their festivities call for a great many flowers.

THE Gardeners' Chronicle.

A Weekly Illustrated Journal.

ESTABLISHED 1841.

The "GARDENERS' CHRONICLE" has been FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS THE LEADING JOURNAL of its class. It has achieved this position because, while specially devoting itself to supplying the daily requirements of gardeners of all classes, much of the information furnished is of such general and permanent value, that the 'GARDENERS' CHRONICLE" is looked up to as the STANDARD AUTHORITY on the subjects of which it treats.

NO MORE FUNGOID DISEASE

THE NEW DISCOVERY

54 REPORTS IN TWO MONTHS

OF THE REMARKABLE AND UNPRECEDENTED SUCCESS OF

"VELTHA"

THE FUNGUS AND DISEASE DESTROYER AND FERTILIZER.

CARNATIONS.

"Ours have never been so free from rust".—MR. FOSTER, Head Gardner, Glendaragh, S. Devon.

"Surpassed anything I had hoped for. Not a spot or blemish on them."—MR. HIBBERD, Abbots Ripton Hall, Huntingdon.

"Like small gooseberry bushes, never showed a trace of disease."—MR. HEMSLEY, Seapoint, Birchington.

"No sign of rust."—MR. JOHNSON, 25, Mersey Road, Aigburth.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

"I tried the "Veltha Emulsion" on some Chrysanthemums badly affected with "Rust," and after syringing them 3 times at intervals of 2 days they were completely cleaned of the disease."—MR. F. TUNBRIDGE "Brooklands," Broomfield, Chelmsford.

"I tried "Veltha" on some Chrysanthemums for "Rust" and had no further trouble."—MR. D. R. DIXON, The Gardens, Hagley Hall, Stourbridge.

"The "Veltha" I had from you for the Rust on my "Mums," has done its work well, and this season I have had much better blooms and free from rust."—MR. WM. LEWIS, The Gardens, East Suttoo Park, Near Maidstone.

"Not a trace of rust."—MR. ANDREW PORTER, Head Gardner to Lord Ashtown.

"A great success."—MR. S. FOSTER, Head Gardner, Teuterden Hall, Middlesex.

"A valuable discovery."—MR. HARMER, Head Gardner, "Riversdale," Thames Ditton.

TOMATOES.

"Having now had a fair trial of "Veltha" as a cure for Tomato Disease, I am glad to inform you I have found it a thorough success. I dressed all the houses with it except one. Those dressed with "Veltha" were entirely free from the slightest trace of disease, and carried a splendid crop; the house which was not so dressed was a total wreck. I expect there will be a large demand for it amongst Tomato Growers this season."—MR. M. CAMPBELL, of Auchinraith, Scotland

ESSEX.—"A house of Tomatoes treated with "Veltha" gave a good crop almost free from disease, notwithstanding that the previous season it was a mass of corruption."—MR. MUERS, Hockley.

HEREFORD.—"I used "Veltha" and had a splendid crop of Tomatoes, and did not lose one. Last year I lost all but one."—MR. MORROW, Leominster.

"I used "Veltha" and had an enormous crop and no signs of disease."—MR. H. RUSSELL, Head Gardner to Lady Hindlip.

No progressive Agriculturalist or Horticulturist should be without a copy of the new pamphlet, "The Rational Method of Treating Fungoid Diseases," gratis and Post Free of the Authors.

One ounce of "VELTHA" is approximately sufficient to dress 4 square yards.

...The American Florist.

Bayersdorfer & Co.'s Goods for Enterprising American Florists.

TAKE OUR BASKETS, FOR INSTANCE: you need them for large effects, nowadays, for rooted plants and heavy material. Ours are of best workmanship and they cost you no more than you pay elsewhere for stock that will sag or fade after one using. Plant baskets and dishes with zinc pans for plants are a leading specialty with us; the styles are right up-to-date. Send for a sample selection. They sell themselves.

OUR AMERICAN BEAUTY VASES have had an unprecedented demand and are simply indispensable to the florist of the year 1900.

OUR FERN DISHES are a distinct line of goods. Although elaborately decorated and of rich effect, they cost no more than the common goods.

LARGE HAMPERS FOR EASTER PLANTS.

Pot covers in crepe paper, plain willow, willow and Jumbo braid or celluloid. Fascinating combinations.

VIOLET CORDS AND TASSELS.

SEE?

LITTLE VIOLET HAMPERS.

Silk cords and tassels in lavender, white, pink or pale green.

VIOLET HANDKERCHIEFS.

Very dainty.

We are the largest manufacturers and distributers of wheat sheaves and prepared Cycas leaves in America. Therefore our prices cannot be duplicated anywhere for goods of equal quality.

We can supply good Cape flowers in any quantity called for. Really good Capes are never too plenty. Moss wreaths and metal designs, porcelain flowers and immortelles.

For staking hyacinths, lilies and other pot plants, we have a new line of neatly rounded and pointed sticks, in lengths from 18 inches to 24 inches. Try them.

REMEMBER that our business has been with florists always. Long association and observation have given us the knowledge of what the American floral trade needs. Our whole aim is to supply you with goods that you can sell.

The store of John C. Hatcher has been so extensively remodeled that it is now unquestionably one of the finest establishments of its kind in the country, and such as to give the proprietor every reason to be proud of the success he has achieved as a florist. The floor has been dropped to the street level as far back as the palm garden, to reach which one ascends several marble steps. The flooring is something entirely new in this section, being known as terraza. From the timbers to the surface it is nine inches in thickness. The bottom is of cement, into which is driven, and then rolled, crushed Italian marble, which is next polished and oiled.

This work, which occupied several weeks, was done by an Italian who was brought to this country by one of the Vanderbilts, in whose palatial home he spent three years putting in similar flooring. The baseboards are of white marble and the walls are finished in a harmonious tint, while the ceiling is metal.

The palm garden in the rear is one of the most attractive features of the store. In the basement are cool rooms and the work shop. Mr. Hatcher reports business excellent all winter.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.—Business has been generally satisfactory here all through the winter and the prospects for spring plant trade are particularly good. M. S. Worden, who has been on the sick list for several weeks, is now rapidly recovering. It is likely that considerable glass will be erected here the coming season, of which some 1500 feet will be added to Mr. Worden's establishment.

Quality!

THAT'S MY TALKING POINT.

ST. PAUL, MINN., December 8, 1898.

WHITE ENAMEL REFRIGERATOR Co., St. Paul, Minn.:

DEAR SIRS—Since using your ice case in our retail flower department we have saved 30 per cent. in the consumption of ice. Our saving in flowers we cannot accurately determine, but should estimate conservatively 25 per cent. Not only this, flowers keep with us as they never did before, and retain their salable appearance longer. Your box is certainly a boon to the florists, and we predict a wonderful sale on them, especially to the florists, when their qualifications become known.

Yours truly, L. L. MAY & CO.

There is in this neighborhood a wealth of good Easter material coming along in good shape. Frank Garland still has a large stock of his fancy tulips on hand. Roses grown here in solid beds are satisfactory from the fact that they bloom all the year around. Mr. Garland has a fine house of adiantum and one of smilax. Carnations are producing freely and 5,000 gladioli look as if they would be just right for the festive season. Mr. Garland will do considerable tearing down and rebuilding this year and he will also put in a new boiler.

S. Garland, Jr., grows a great variety of material, his callas and violets being especially noteworthy. Freesias and forget-me-nots are good. Pansies promise an abundant crop of bloom and Daybreak carnations are very fine. Mignonette is used here extensively to fill breaks in the carnation benches, and judging from its quality, it likes the situation.

W. S. Garland is just getting over an attack of sickness but he was busy, nevertheless, at the time of our visit, bunching extra fine Daybreak blooms.

Write to state that the #2 boiler we bought of you last summer is taking care of 30000 ft. of glass with great ease.

Last night temperature outside stood at 20° and wind blowing a gale, but the night fireman maintained an even temperature with but very little draught, and I believe it will give us all the heat we need ~~with~~ in the coldest weather. The boiler is all and more than you claim for it, and is entirely satisfactory in every respect.

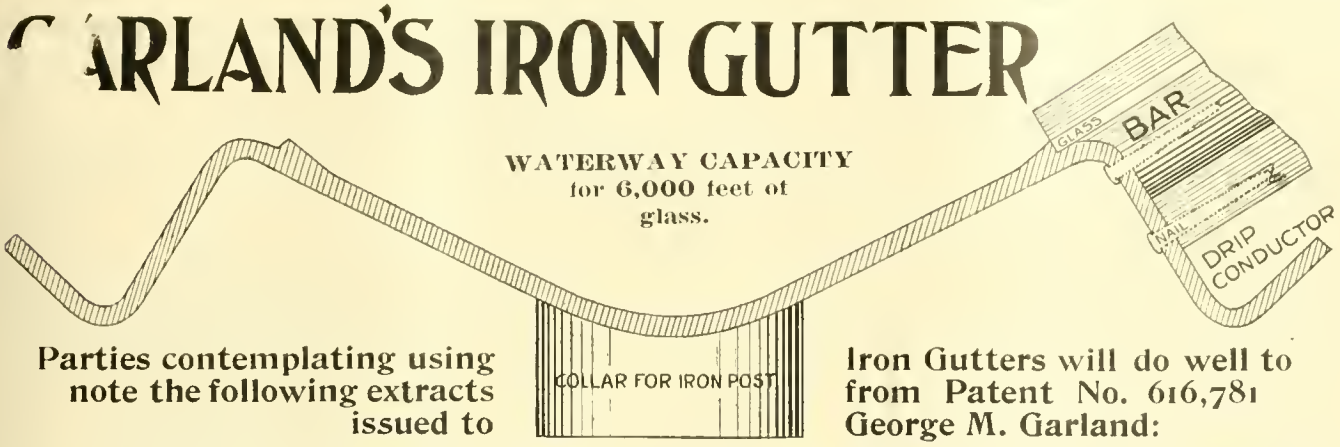
GARLAND'S IRON GUTTER



Parties contemplating using Iron Gutters will do well to note the following extracts from Patent No. 616,781 issued to George M. Garland:

The object of the invention is to provide a valley-gutter for greenhouses which will be so constructed as to combine a stop for the glass and a drip conductor.

Another object of the invention is to so construct the gutter that the devices for fastening the gutter to supports will be below the weather-face of the gutter, thus avoiding perforations of the weather-face and consequent liability to leakage.

The nails, screws, or other fastening devices are passed through the drop flanges and into the lower ends of the roof-beams, so that these fastening devices for connecting the valley-gutter to the roof structure are below the weather-faces of the valley-gutter, and consequently the weather-faces of the valley-gutter need not be perforated, insuring against leakage.

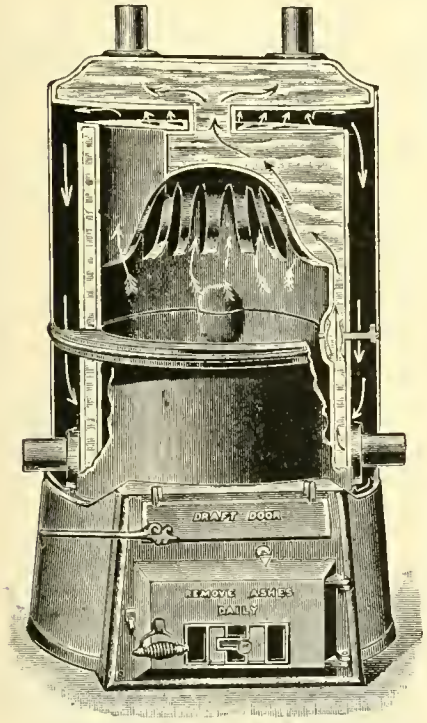
High Grade Heaters



Our Catalogue B contains information valuable to Florists and will be sent with prices on application.

(ALL CAST IRON.)

In our STANDARD BOILERS the castings containing water have numerous shallow chambers that hang over the fire and immediately receive all heat and allow none to pass wasted to the chimney. The Boiler contains only three cored castings and is quickly erected.

NO WATER CASTINGS

Are exposed to outside air, but protected by cast iron asbestos lined casing which effectually prevents the radiation of the heat and causes the water chambers to be entirely surrounded by the heat.

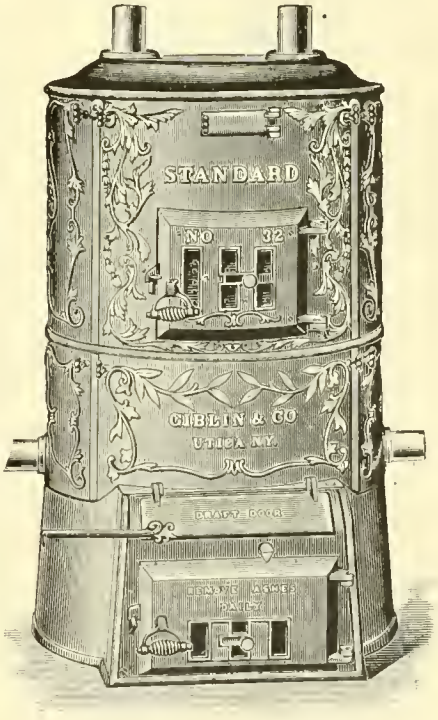
SIMPLICITY OF OPERATION

WITH ENORMOUS EFFICIENCY IS THE CLAIM WE MAKE FOR THIS BOILER.

P. B. MAGRANE, Florist, Lynn, Mass., says:

"Your Standard Hot Water Boiler No. 32 is all that you recommend it to be. It does the work for me nicely that other boilers have failed to do. It heats a greenhouse 80x18 and also a large two-story barn and makes them quite comfortable in the coldest weather. I highly recommend it to any one as a first-class heater both from point of efficiency and economy."

We make a special price on the first Boiler going to a place where we have none in use.



GIBLIN & CO., UTICA, N. Y.

New Haven, Conn.

The cut flower trade has shown little change since Lent commenced, funeral work taking the place of decorations for social functions. The funeral of ex-Senator Graham on March 22 was an occasion for good work and most of the local craft did some of it. The retailers are a little anxious at the outlook for plants for Easter. Lilium longiflorum is rather backward with most growers and a number will not have any in at all. Azaleas are looking very good and the prospect is that we will have enough to go around. Crimson Ramblers and other flowering plants are looking very well. Roses and carnations are both coming in plentifully for Easter week.

The florists of Middletown who handle seeds are complaining that the gratuitous distribution of seeds by the government has materially interfered with their business. Nearly every voter whose name appears in the city directory has received a quantity of the free seeds through the mail.

The recent wind storm damaged the greenhouses of Fred Horn to the extent of two boxes of 16x24 glass.
